DO THE PROPHETS LIVE?

THEIR EXPERIENCES AND ACTIONS ARE ALIVE.

Must Distinguish Between the Permanent and the Transitory—Spirit of Liberty and Equal Rights Will Triumph Over All Fetters.

Principal Grant spoke in convocation hall yesterday afternoon from Zechariah 1. 5: "Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live forever?" The prophets and fathers have indeed gone, but their experiences and actions still live. The voice of God endures forever and survives alone when other things pass away. That alone is permanent. We must distinguish between the permanent and transitory elements of history. The permanent is the word and will of God on which every nation, every generation and every single man must base himself. The transitory is the external, visible, form in which this will clothes itself in each generation.

The word of every true prophet was the word of God to his own nation and time. If the nation obeyed this message, the promise was that it would be well with it, not that the actual fulfilment would be well from man's standpoint. Man and God often judge differently in these matters. God sees farther than man. In the end all will be well, but time and space have no place in the promises of the prophets. Consider Moses' promise to the children of Israel of a land flowing with milk and honey, and Christ's promise of a kingdom to His followers. The principles of these promises are eternal, but the forms which they take in different generations are transitory, and often seem in direct opposition to the promise.

Zechariah had a message for his own time. He saw the people just returned from exile and the need of having civil and religious order restored and therefore cooperated with the priests and rulers. Other prophets in former generations, disgusted with the degradation of the people had stood for the voice of Jehovah and worked against priest and king. Zechariah saw the need of his time and therefore took the attitude which he did. He held to two main principles: (1) The purpose of God for Israel. He believed that God had a purpose for his country, just as God has a purpose for every country. It is our duty to hold on to that purpose. (2) In the character of God as right-eousness, and therefore, the duty of the people to be righteous and to hate all that is false. Zechariah believed that this character of God would become better known and the people more enlightened. He had faith in the unseen, but permanent elements.

And how does this apply to us? The principal made touching reference to the fathers of Queen's, the last of whom had passed away in the death of Dr. Mowat, and on the retirement of Dr. Fife Fowler. But here, too, we must distinguish the permanent from the transitory, and remember their contribution to that spirit of liberty and equal rights for which Queen's has always stood, and which has and will triumph over all fetters.

Welcomed Back.

Watertown Times.

Mrs. M. E. Delong, who has met with a large measure of success in the conduct of a silk skirt coupon business in Kingston, has just sold it for a private consideration and will return here to live, having purchased the E. M. Bingham residency on State street. Mrs. Delong went to Canada about a year ago and started her thriving business at Kingston. From a small beginning, there has culminated a satisfactory ending, financially considered, so far as she is concerned. Several other firms which have started in opposition to her have met with far from satisfactory success. Mrs. Delong has been thoroughly pleased with Kingston during her stay, having bought all her goods and employed all her help there. Her return will be welcomed by the musical and church circles with which she was formerly connected in this city.

Should Treat All Alike

Medical health officer Lee appeared at the police court this morning to find his honor's pleasure touching a drain that it was necessary to construct with Mrs. Jane Gardiner's house on Chatham street. The lady was not present, but she had told the magistrate that other houses in the locality required draining equally as much as hers, and she asked why they had not received similar orders. His honor told Dr. Lee that these people should be treated alike, to which the latter replied that he had received no instructions. The magistrate gave them eight days in which to look after the drainage.

A Dangerous Practice.

A citizen calls attention to the dangerous practice of allowing boys to board freight cars and ride on the cowcatchers of locomotives moving about the K. & P. and G. T. R. yards here. Yesterday as the stranger North King was going out four or five lads perched on the cowcatcher of a passing engine. When tired of that position they climbed on top of the box cars and had a game of tag there. The citizen thinks the police should arrest one or two of these boys and thus stop a practice that is liable at any minute to cost them their lives.

Queen Street School.

The one who says a Sunday school cannot be graded ought to have seen the work in process in Queen street school during the last two Sundays. There were promotions from one department to another, through five divisions, until the school, in the opinion of the superintendent, is about as complete in this way as it can be made. Changing over we are at another," said Mr. Meek to-day. "Next Sunday we make a start on our cantata, 'Christmas Blessings.' There is variety."

ELANDS RIVER GARRISON.

A Kingstonian Among the Plucky Band of Volunteers.

Mrs. W. J. Smith, outer depot, has received a letter from her husband, bombardier W. J. Smith, serving in "C" battery. The letter was dated September 5th. He was then at Bloemfontein. He also sent a copy of the Mafeking Mail which gives an account of the brave little garrison which fought the Boers at Elands river, on August 5th, and in which he, Smith, took part.

"The brave little garrison who struck to their post at Elands river so manfully and thereby gave the world another instance of how British pluck and determination can come out on top in the face of overwhelming odds, have arrived in town. They came in with lord Methuen's column, and in consequence of their horses having fallen victims to Boer bullets and shells, had to march in on foot.

"The garrison were besieged for thirteen days. They were camped on a kopje commanding the main road, peacefully passing away the time, and expecting orders to proceed to Rustenburg. No attack by the enemy was anticipated, still to be in readiness for any emergency small semi-circular sangatres were built of loose stones, about two feet six inches high, and fifteen inches thick. On the night of Friday, August 4th, they laid down to sleep in the belief that the patrols would go out on the morrow as usual and that there would be no alteration in their duties from those of the preceding few days. But with the daybreak next morning came proof that their calculations had been wrong. During the night the Boers had surrounded them and positioned their guns on the high kopjes to the north, east and southwest. In addition to this they had made preparations to play their favorite game of 'sniping' by placing a large number of sharpshooters in favorable spots to pick off our men. Early in the morning the attack began. How rapid it was can be judged from the fact that eighty-five shells were poured into the camp in two hours, and over 2,000 shells were fired in during the first two days.

"The Boers took a special delight in sniping at the men when watering their horses. Each night the garrison had to fight for their water near the dam, and it was owing in a great measure to the good work done by the pickets, the outposts that they were able to get any water at all.

"The garrison witnessed Gen. Carrington's attempt to relieve them on the second day of the siege. On the fourth day Gen. Delaney called upon them to surrender, but Col. Hore refused to do so.

"Whilst the Boers had 3,000 men, 9 field nine guns, our force was less than 500, and we had only one seven pounder and two maxims.

"Our casualties were seventy five, of which eighteen were deaths. Amongst the killed were five natives. 1,327 animals (oxen, horses and mules) were either killed or were missing.

"The garrison was an entirely colonial force, being made up of the Queensland mounted infantry, New South Wales and Victorian Bushmen, Rhodesian volunteers and R.S.A.P."

Kingston, Wednesday Evening.

"All coons may look alike," but all shows are not alike. Patrons can make no mistake in attending the performance of the Black Patti Troubadours. They enjoy a standing in theatrical circles, which is the envy of nearly all proprietors of amusement. Through talents of its versatile members, the excellence of the stage performance, and its phenomenal popularity, it has become a valuable piece of theatrical property. Messrs. Voelckel and Nolan, founders of the enterprise, have realized a handsome profit from their investment.

At a meeting next Wednesday night a captain will be chosen to conduct the Y.M.C.A. outdoor sports. The new director hopes the young men will turn out well to attend the meeting.

The Toronto World is right in saying that Queen's and its distinguished principal are doing the work that will entitle its boys to make a demand in the Ontario government for the recognition of Queen's as a state institution. And Kingston will back up this demand by money to-morrow, for a new building, and thereafter by strong influence on parliamentarians to do Queen's justice.

The Opera House Problem.

J. A. Small, of Toronto, states that he has received overtures from another party regarding the building of an opera house in Kingston. This is the fifth time the grand opera house company has been notified of this kind of opposition. Again they have discontinued negotiations, to give the other fellows a full chance. Any new project in Kingston meets with mere talking opposition and discouragement and the opera house shareholders are tired of it.

Death Of A Young Girl.

The death occurred at the general hospital on Sunday afternoon of Miss Lizzie Husband, Bath, seventeen years old. The young girl suffered from a bowel complaint, and was brought to the city on the steamer North King yesterday afternoon, and removed in an ambulance to the hospital. She died at half past five o'clock. The remains were sent to Bath to-day.

NEW LEADERS WANTED.

So it Was Thought by the Conservatives Three Years Ago.

Montreal Star, July, 1897.

There are some gentlemen prominent in the conservative party who can do the party and the country a great service—by retiring into private life. Never did a political party so much deserve, never did a political party so much need, a beating as the conservative party deserved and needed one at the time of the last federal election. The conservatives were distrustful of each other, disloyal to their leaders, and among them were men who were quite right to distrust each other. Before long there must be a great reconstruction of the conservative party, and the exigencies of the situation may as well be recognized at once. Some of the old leaders can never be leaders again, and now is the time to get rid of them. If the conservative party is to command the respect and confidence of the country it must have leaders worthy of respect and confidence.

The conservative party need be in no hurry for office, the cold shades of opposition are having an excellent tonic effect; but some day, and perhaps when least expected, the country will need the old party's services, and need them badly, and it is important that by that time the party should be purified and reorganized. The reconstruction will involve not only the getting rid of some of the old leaders, but the selection of new ones, and it must be borne in mind that there are no conservative provincial premiers available, so that there is no danger of Sir Wilfrid's blunder being repeated by Sir Charles. There are, however, plenty of men of character, principle and ability available, and the sooner their leadership is recognized the better for the party and for the country.

She Was Pale, and Languid

TOO NERVOUS TO SLEEP AND DAILY GREW WEAKER AND WEAKER.

By Using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food She Gained in Weight, the Color Returned to Her Cheeks and She Gradually Became Strong and Well.

Few people escape the depressing, debilitating effects of spring, when the blood is thin and watery and the whole system exhausted by the artificial life of winter.

The young lady whose case is described below had never been strong since passing the critical period known as the dawn of womanhood. She was always overcome by tired, languid feelings and lacked the color, strength and elasticity of movement which is natural to a girl of seventeen.

Her mother tells in the following letter how her daughter was completely cured by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great restorative.

Mrs. E. McLaughlin, 95 Parliament street, Toronto, states: "My daughter was pale, weak, languid and very nervous, her appetite was poor and changeable, she could scarcely drag herself about the house and her nerves were completely unstrung, she could not sleep for more than half an hour at a time without starting up and crying out in excitement.

"As she was growing weaker and weaker I became alarmed and got a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. She used this treatment for some weeks, and from the first we noticed a decided improvement. Her appetite became better, she gained in weight, the color returned to her face and she gradually became strong and well. I cannot say too much in favor of this wonderful treatment since it has proven such a blessing to my daughter."

In cases of thousands of pale, weak, nervous girls and women Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has demonstrated its unparalleled restorative powers. For men who are worn out by overwork or the ravages of disease this treatment is equally efficient.

It is a blood builder and nerve vitalizer of most unusual merit, which overcomes disease by strengthening and invigorating the whole system. As a spring restorative it is unapproached by any remedy known to man. 50 cts. a box, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.
