D. D. ROGERS AT GLENVALE.

MUCH ENTHUSIASM MANIFESTED FOR THE INDEPENDENT.

Interesting Addresses by Messrs. Rogers, Dr. Gibson and Mallory — Considering the Questions That Affect Farmers.

If last night's meeting is any indication of the way Glenvale will go on Nov. 7th, David Rogers should have a sweeping majority out there. The attendance was good and the enthusiasm great. Mr. Rogers was never heard to better advantage while the address of C. A. Mallory was much enjoyed by the electors. Thomas Orser occupied the chair. Mr. Rogers gave a most satisfactory account of his stewardship and explained his different votes in the house. He dwelt especially on his actions in reference to the Drummond county deal, when he favored the Intercolonial extension. He also defended his vote on the Crow's Nest Pass railway. He was very pleased that his opponents had so very little to say against him. Regarding the Crow's Nest Pass, there were a great many advantages that the government had obtained from it. Dr. Ryan had stated publicly that he, Rogers, was a grit, conservative or patron, just as the occasion required. He thought Dr. Ryan was more of a gentleman than to make such imputations behind a man's back, and if he met Dr. Ryan on the public platform, as he hoped to do, he would make him take that back. The C.P.R. was a grand road and a good thing for Canada, but they did not want the C.P.R. to own Canada just yet awhile. The civil servants were overpaid.

Dr. Gibson, being in the audience was called on in the interests of Mr. Calvin. He claimed that Mr. Rogers had very different ideas now than he had in 1891, when he was a thorough out and out protectionist. The patrons of industry made a great mistake when they made Joseph Haycock their leader in the local house for now, in his, the speaker's opinion they had no organization. Mr. Rogers claimed that he was an independent and the speaker's definition of an independent was a straddle-the-fence, ever ready to join the strong party. When Mr. Rogers went to parliament, he said he would not use passes but now he uses these passes. Touching on the butter question he did not think Mr. Rogers was right in not assisting the farmer there.

Mr. Roger "I am against any bonuses."

Mr. Mallory "That's right."

Dr. Gibson thought that it would have been a good thing to give the farmers the benefit on such a general article. The speaker believed that in course of time there would be a mutual preferential tariff between Great Britain and Canada. Dr. Gibson spoke of free corn and held that Mr. Rogers had not acted in behalf of the farmers in permitting American corn to enter free without demanding an equivalent. He held with Mr. Charlton that if the Canadians had not agreed to admit corn free a concession might have been secured of advantage to the Canadian farmer. The doctor then made a great outburst of loyalty.

Mr. Mallory in opening stated that he agreed with Dr. Gibson in all his expressions of loyalty to queen and country. Dr. Gibson should have gone to England and enthused the government there with what Canada had done for the old country. If the learned doctor had gone to Great Britain he would, no doubt, have converted Mr. Chamberlain, the duke of Devonshire, and the British people generally. In order to compete in the trade of Great Britain the United States had to reduce its prices on certain articles in order to do so. Talk about petty bonuses on butter when the farmers were being robbed by the manufacturers right along. The farmers were not to be hoodwinked by such tactics. The government of Canada is wrong when they bonus any institution. Was it right that the farmers were to be fined $20 for every binder they bought outside of the Massey Harris company. How was it that the Massey Harris company had more control over the government of our country than the 40,000 farmers who asked for free machinery. It was simply because they were not organized. Regarding free corn he knew of a farmer in his locality, who had on 100 acres of land and purchased a carload of corn every year and was making money. The Canadian people were paying no less than 6½ per cent on American coal oil. The coal oil duty was put on it to keep a few constituencies in line, the same as the Trent Valley canal was a fraud, but there were fifteen or twenty constituencies up there that had to be kept in line. If the Massey Harris company can go to Australia, Great Britain and other countries and compete, why could they not compete at home. The Massey Harris people were now millionaires, but how many farmers in the country were millionaires and the farmers were told that they were the back-bone of the country. He defied any man to show that Rogers had not been consistent in advocating the principles he was sent there to advocate by the people of Frontenac. He had gone in perfect accord with the pledges he had made to the people. He had heard a great many members say that David Rogers was the most honest and independent member in the house of commons. The moment the tariff exceeded that which was required for the carrying on of economic government, then it became highway robbery. Would that Canada had free trade with Great Britain. Calvin had no platform. He said he would vote against Laurier because he had not redeemed his pledges. Was it the lawyers, doctors, etc., who had made Canada. No, it was the farmer. He only wished that the constituencies throughout the country were as loyal to the interests of the farmers as Frontenac had been four years ago when she returned David Rogers by acclamation, the only member elected by acclamation in the province.

Mr. Mallory then urged Mr. Rogers to have proper organization on election day. The young men were the workers if the old fellows would give them the horses.

"I have six horses and they can have them all," shouted one old veteran in the audience and the crowd cheered as if they all intended to get out and work for David on election day.

Three cheers for the queen, and Rogers and a vote of thanks to the chairman brought the meeting to a close.

GLENORA AND ITS MILLS.

T. W. Casey Writes on This Subject in Napanee Beaver.

Both flouring and carding mills were built and in operation at Glenora earlier than at any other place in Prince Edward county. There was, however, a saw mill in operation in Hallowell township earlier than in Glenora. It was built by David Conger, a U. E. loyalist, who came to Canada in 1786. Just when the first saw mill was built at Glenora does not now appear to be known. One was standing there, and in actual operation as far back as we now have any record. It was burned not many years ago. At the village of Adolphustown, at a very early time, Capt. Maybee had a sawmill, the remains of which are still to be seen. A second one, in operation for some years, was at one time owned by Samuel Casey, but whether he was the builder of it, is not known. Another, built and operated, at an early time, was on the farm of Robinson Casey, and was probably built by his father, William Casey. The number of sawmills, gristmills, tanneries and distilleries, that were at one time in existence in the old townships of Lennox, Addington and Prince Edward, now seems all but incredible.

As far as is known, the first wool carding mill in existence at Glenora, or indeed, anywhere in all this part of Canada, was built and operated by William Casey, of what was long known as Casey's Point in Adolphustown. His brother, Willet, established the first iron foundry in Adolphustown, and probably the first one in these counties. Just when Casey's wool-carding mill was first operated, is not now clearly known, but it must have been in the early years of this century. Before that time, the wool had to be carded by hand, and then spun and woven also by hand. Nearly everything of men and women's wear, underclothes and all, as well as bedding, blankets, and carpets, were all made by hand, and nearly all manufactured in the home. The machinery of Casey's mill was afterwards moved to Casey's point, and was then driven by a large tread-wheel. The machinery was sold after a few years, and moved to Hastings county.

However, a new mill with additional machinery soon took its place. It is known that when Hugh Macdonald, father of the late Sir John A. Macdonald, gave up his country store on the Hay Bay, he rented the stone mills, as they were called. In the Hallowell Free Press, published at Picton, in the thirties, he advertises that carding, fulling, dyeing and pressing will be carried on at the stone mills under the superintendance of David Wallace. Sir John spent part of his boyhood among the hills and glens of that place. Frank Hill, now the oldest resident in that locality, a man of eighty years, well remembers, when Sir John was a boy at the mills, the two being playmates at times, although Sir John was four or five years older than himself.

The late George Cliff, so well known in Kingston and Napanee for many years as a contractor and builder, also spent some of his early boyhood days there with his parents. His father came from England in 1819 and settled in Montreal. The family moved to Upper Canada in 1828, and his father purchased the stone mills. But he soon gave up business there and returned to Montreal. It seems, therefore, quite probable that the elder Cliff was the immediate predecessor of the elder Macdonald at the mills.

Twentieth Century Magazine.

A new century brings new conditions and new methods of meeting them. Fifty years ago the average American was content to get his news once a week. Now he demands it twice a day.

The Curtis publishing company bought The Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post because it believed that the public would want a popular literary magazine once a week, provided it adjusted itself to the new conditions and rightly gauged the demand of the twentieth century, for a magazine of the best quality, sold at a low price. To improve the quality and lower the price of publication, two things are necessary—a great circulation and the best machinery. The first has been achieved, for the Post has a weekly circulation of a quarter of a million. Again, ten new presses have been installed in its new eight storey building, which, together with its old facilities, give it the largest and most complete periodical plant in the world, involving an outlay of half a million dollars.

A Gorgeously Bound

Work of art has just been issued at an outlay of over $100,000, for which the publishers desire a manager in this country, also a good solicitor; good pay to the right party. Nearly 100 full-page engravings, sumptuous paper, illustrated covers and bindings; over 200 golden lilies in the Morocco bindings; nearly 50 golden roses in the cloth bindings. Sells at sight; presses running day and night so great is the sale. Christian men and women making fortunes taking orders. Rapid promotions. One christian woman made clear $500 in four weeks taking orders among her church acquaintances and friends. Write us. Are Justices Of The Peace.

In a late issue of the official Johannesburg Gazette, "published under military authority," appear the names of two Canadians as having been appointed to be justices of the peace in the Transvaal. They are Capt. Arthur E. Hodgins, of the Royal Canadian regiment, and Capt. C. Joly de Lotbiniere, of the Royal engineers, both graduates of the Royal military college at Kingston. Capt. Hodgins has lately been transferred by lord Roberts, of the request of Lieut.-Col Girouard, from the Royal Canadian regiment to the imperial military railway service.

A FACT MEN SHOULD KNOW

CALCULATED ON THE CURRENT PRICES THEN PAID.

There Were No Active Unions in Kingston When Sullivan & Langdon Took the Drill Hall Contract — The Contractors Tried to Act Fairly.

Kingston, Oct. 23.—(To the Editor):—As one of the many workingmen who attended last Saturday night's meeting in the city hall, I was pleased with Mr. Britton's lucid and comprehensive account of his stewardship as member for Kingston, which, permit me to say, is one of, if not the most difficult constituencies in the dominion to manage; though the city had an archangel for a representative, there would still be found some disgruntled voters—who would find fault with his administration of affairs. Now, nobody looks upon Mr. Britton in the light of an angel, but every sensible, unbiased voter must candidly admit that Mr. Britton, as member for Kingston, has discharged his trust in a manner calculated to best ensure the continued prosperity of the city. His attitude in the locomotive works matter bears out this statement.

But there was one point which Mr. Britton overlooked in regard to the drill hall matter. No doubt he was unacquainted with the fact, else he would have made it known. When Messrs. Sullivan & Langdon figured upon the drill hall contract they calculated upon the basis of current wages then paid. Kingston workmen were not organized at the time, nor was there any talk of unionism being introduced in the city. Not until work on the drill hall had actually been commenced did the masons and other workmen form themselves into a union body. I know for a fact that Messrs. Sullivan & Langdon were paying current wages when the preliminary work on the drill hall was begun, and it was unfair to them to try and compel the payment of wages that would have meant ruin to them. They paid the top figure of the day, and nobody could ask anything fairer.

The letter of Messrs. Sullivan & Langdon sent to Mr. Britton when the union trouble began at the drill hall puts a new phase upon the question. One of the fundamental principles of unionism is that every means must be adopted to bring about a satisfactory understanding between employee and employer before a strike is declared; to strike is the very last resort, after all other possible and peaceable means have failed. Now it does look as though the masons in this instance were a trifle hasty, as they refused arbitration and violated the rules of unionism by declaring a strike at the very outset as Mr. Britton pointed out. It was this action on the part of the workingmen which hurried into effect the union wages clause in all government contracts since given out, and which the government had had in course of preparation for some time previous. Another point worth remembering is that the chief "kickers" in this agitation were conservatives, who plainly had a political object in keeping ripe the strife-UNION.

Their Reply To Britton.

Following is the letter which contractors Sullivan & Langdon, of the drill hall, wrote to B. M. Britton, Q.C., M.P., in reply to his letter re scab labor. The tone indicates that Mr. Britton must have been taking a stand unfavorable to them. This letter was read by the member on Saturday night:

"Kingston, June 5th, 1899.

"B. M. Britton, Q.C., M.P., Kingston, Ont.

"My dear sir: In reply to yours of the 2nd inst., re trouble with stone masons employed at drill hall here, we beg leave to say that we have done everything possible in fairness to ourselves bring about a settlement of the trouble existing between us and the union.

"On Friday evening last at a meeting between ourselves and the executive committee of the union, held in our office, we agreed to make our job a union one. We agreed to everything asked by the committee of the union with the exception of discharging two men from our employment entirely. This we could not in honor to ourselves do, but offered as a compromise to take the two men objected to, who, properly speaking, were stonecutters, and put them cutting stone, at work where they would be out of the jurisdiction of the masons' union. This was refused.

"As a last resort we offered to arbitrate this last point—the only one up on which we disagreed—naming as arbitrators William Langdon, on our part, Hugh Douglass, on the part of the union, and either John Mitchell, contractor mason of this city, B. W. Robertson, wholesale grocer, or Mr. Hardiman, contractor, Watertown, N.Y., as third arbitrator. This proposition to our minds is conclusive evidence, that the union is not desirous of settlement.

"With respect to the closing paragraph of your letter, where you say it is your intention to bring the matter to the notice of the minister of public works, we may say that we regard this as a threat on your part to have the minister ask for surrender of contract. We are even prepared for the event, but while we have completed the work specified for the sum named in the contract, we must be permitted to manage things so that we will be able to pay our debts and have a little to buy bread, for, my dear sir, we as individuals are poorer by far than several members of the masons union. Respectfully yours,

—SULLIVAN & LANGDON.

Salada Tea.

Confidence is the basis of all commercial transactions. The British Tea planters of Ceylon and India have much well merited confidence in their new Natural Leaf Uncolored Green Tea as an article that is going to supersede the Japanese product, and they are pushing its introduction all over.

It is really a beautiful tea in the cup, very similar in flavor to a Japan, only more delicious, of fully two-thirds greater strength, and entirely free of all coloring and adulteration. The keenest and most critical critics pronounce it "Par Excellence." It will displace Japans just as Ceylon and India blacks have displaced all other black teas.

The "SALADA" Tea Company are offering this new tea in their regulation sealed lead packet form. One trial will captivate the taste of any Japan tea consumer, and in using it we are doing our share towards cementing the empire by using its own products.
