A LAD WINS MUCH GLORY

HAS HONORS AT AN EARLY PERIOR IN LIFE.

He Wanted to be a Soldier—He Ran Away From School and Fought Gallantly in South Africa.

London, Nov. 21.—There has been great rejoicing at Warwick castle during the last week in connection with the return from South Africa of young lord Brooke, eldest son of the earl and countess of Warwick, who, although a mere boy, had so distinguished himself in the war with the Boers, that, to the delight of his still beautiful mother, he has been rewarded with a commission in the regiment of Royal horse guards, the crack regiment of the British service.

Lord Brooke was at school at Eton, preparing for the military college at Sandhurst, when the war broke out. His entreaties to be allowed to volunteer for service in South Africa were refused, not only because of his youth (he was at the time but seventeen years of age), but, likewise, because, save for a two-year old brother, a delicate baby, he is the only heir to his father's honors and estates.

The lad could bear it no longer, and when after the early reversals sustained by the British arms, the queen issued her memorable appeal for volunteers, he deliberately ran away from school, sold his fur coat, his scarf pins and gold-mounted canes in London, buying with the proceeds a second-class ticket for the Cape and shipped for the seat of war.

Pleased by the spirit displayed by the boy, his parents, instead of making any attempt to compel his return, took steps to have him attached to the staff of Gen. French, and now, at an age when most English boys are still at school, that is to say, when barely eighteen, he finds himself not only with the commission in the most splendid regiment of the British army, but likewise with an honorable mention, in the despatches, a campaign and a war medal to his record.

THE FACTS ELICITED.

"Chaucer" Elliott Did Not Forsake a Fellow Student.

Interest in the case of the student of Queen's university, found lying on Division street some nights ago, suffering from an attack of paralysis, is not waning. The committee appointed by the alma mater society has the case in hand and are prosecuting an enquiry. The result will likely be that an investigation will be demanded.

Through some misunderstanding "Chaucer" Elliott has been drawn into this affair, as a matter of fact he had nothing whatever to do with the finding of the young man nor with his removal to the police cells. Edwin Dawson found the man on the sidewalk, and thinking him intoxicated, telephoned to the police the particulars, remarking that he thought the man's leg was broken as he could not stand. When the police had the young man in a rig "Chaucer" Elliott happened along; nobody knew the unfortunate sufferer and could not identify him, and though "Chaucer" Elliott examined the young man's leg and looked into his face, he was unable to find any bones broken or to say that he ever saw the man before.

Judge Price was asked this afternoon what position the police commissioners took in the matter. He stated that the commissioners could do nothing. The written report of the sergeant showed that the police had done their duty, and that there was no neglect on their part. The judge stated that the commissioners had no authority over the physician, as there was never a police physician appointed. It has been the custom at the station to call Dr. Fenwick whenever medical assistance was required by prisoners.

Marine Case In Court.

At the police court this morning Frank McNulty, who had been employed as fireman aboard the propeller Glengarry, had the captain of the steamer summoned for non-payment of wages due him.

E. Holton Britton appeared for the steamer, and Capt. Gaskin was present. It was shown that McNulty went on board the boat on Oct. 30th at noon and left at 7 p.m. on the 15th Nov., and he claimed pay for sixteen and a half days at $1 per day; the captain of the steamer would only pay him for sixteen days up to noon on the 15th. Capt. Gaskin stated that the M. T. company had had considerable trouble the present season with just such men as McNulty. This man had remained on the boat while she was in port, doing little or nothing for two days, and when he heard that she was going to make a start and had had his supper, he went to the captain at 7 p.m., just as the boat was going to leave, and stated he was going to quit and demanded sixteen and a half days' pay when his time was not up until midnight. The captain refused this, but offered to pay him for sixteen days up to noon, which he refused. Another fireman was not secured until 10 p.m., and the tow was detained for three hours. Capt. Gaskin stated that this class of man would come down and ship, get a meal and then clear out just as the boat was ready to leave; he had made up his mind to put a stop to it in future. The magistrate dismissed the case.

The committee will likely grant his request.

LAURIER'S WOOING.

How the Dominion Premier Won His Bride, a Music Teacher.

Lisbon, Me., Nov. 19.—Living in comparative seclusion in this little town which boasts of not more than 900 people, G. N. R. Lafontaine, the father of lady Laurier, wife of the Canadian premier, is spending his days in happy desuetude. He has chosen for his home this tiny manufacturing village, seven miles from the nearest station of the Grand Trunk line, the great artery which connects this part of the state with the country, which holds his dearest treasures, his children.

Lafontaine is a man whom the cares of a busy life have not intimidated nor weakened, and to-day his heavy head is carried as proudly erect as in the days of his springing youth. He is living with his second wife, Anne.

A tiny house, containing at the most but five rooms, is furnished with every comfort.

It is about five years since Lafontaine came from Montreal, to Lisbon, where a son, Charles, is employed. In Montreal the aged man was of high standing. His wealth commanded the adulation of the residents, and his honorable life and his regal bearing won the respect and the love of everyone.

In those days he lived on Lafontaine street. He had really built up this street, owning block after block or residences, and by reason of this the city named the street in his honor. His money was gained by speculation, and he had that rare grip on good sense which told him when to stop.

It was in Montreal that lady Laurier and his other children were born. When they were of an age so that they could live for themselves Lafontaine removed to Lewiston, Me., where he lived for some time. It was a fixed principle with him that his children should all be self-supporting. Thus it was that his daughter Zoe, later lady Laurier, trained herself for a music teacher.

Zoe Lafontaine was educated in the convent at St. Vincent, about eighteen miles from Montreal. She returned to Montreal and boarded in the family of Dr. Gautier. Here, after a long and tiresome day with stupid pupils, with her nerves throbbing and her very soul rasped and bruised by the weariness of the life of a music teacher, she, one evening at dinner, felt a sudden accession of life and courage as her eyes met that of a young pale-faced man over the glass of wine she raised to her lips.

From that time life was fuller for Zoe Lafontaine. There was always the dinner hour to look forward to all through the long day, and always the pleasure of the cheery chat with Wilfrid Laurier, the struggling young lawyer, who told her how, after his graduation from McGill university, he had practised for three years until his health failed; had entered the newspaper world, assuming the editorship of Le Defricheur, a reform journal. But as the paper was in difficulties he resumed the practice of law, in which he was then continuing.

Laurier told of his birthplace, the pretty town of St. Lin, L'Assomption, and of the little brothers and sisters, and of how their eyes filled on the morning when he first went into Montreal, eighteen miles away.

He was so sympathetic that the young woman told him in return of her tiresome days with refractory pupils.

And then, though he was a sickly young man, suffering even then with the lumbago, which has never left him, and though on this account her parents tenderly, but firmly opposed the wedding, Zoe Lafontaine was married in 1868 to Wilfrid Laurier.

It was in 1871 that Laurier's fortunes began to mend, and he entered upon that rising political career, to the highest place, in which he has just been triumphantly returned.

During a visit to England, by the invitation of the imperial government, the grand cross of the order of St. Michael and St. George was conferred upon him by the queen, who also received him.

The salary of the premier of Canada is but $8,000 a year. Moreover, Sir Wilfrid has always refused, for the sake of example, to accept any salaried position, as president, vice-president or director of any company where his name would attract public patronage.

The picturesque little home in the village of Athabascaville is retained by Sir Wilfrid and lady Laurier as a summer home, but upon becoming premier Sir Wilfrid bought a beautiful house on Theodore street, Ottawa.

Despite the high estate to which he has risen, lady Laurier appears to thoroughly enjoy the twice and thrice yearly visits to her father and her stepmother in Lisbon. She makes but fitting visits. The ills that were a vexation to Sir Wilfrid when he was a young lawyer do not materially lessen, and lady Laurier feels it a privilege to accompany him on his trips through the dominion.

Lady Laurier was in Lisbon but a short time before the recent election, and her last words as she left the humble home of her aged father were: "Expect me again in July."

The premier's wife inherits much of that graceful self-possession and beauty of character for which she is noted from her father. He is one of the most courteous of men, well read. The news of the wonderful political success of his son-in-law in the recent election was most joyfully received in the quiet little household.

The fact that his daughter's marriage occurred in the bishop's palace, an unusual honor, is still sweet in Lafontaine's memory. Of Sir Wilfrid he now says proudly:

"He is as good a man as ever walked this earth. He is so good-hearted and gracious to the poor, and so honest and manly."

Gave An "At Home."

Erinsville, Nov. 20.—Mr. and Mrs. D. Armstrong, superintendent of cement works, Marlbank, gave an "At Home" at their residence, "Blythedale," to a number of their friends. Among them were Miss May and Gertie Murphy, of this place. The last fair of the season was held on Tuesday; prices ruling low. A number of raffles have been postponed for future date owing to bad weather and roads. Mrs. M. F. Murphy, who has been dangerously ill, is improving.

County Council.

After a few "bunch" caucuses in corners, the county council convened at half-past ten o'clock this morning. Silence reigned for some time after the minutes were read, and then on motion of councillors Fair and Toner, the council adjourned until two o'clock this afternoon, for the benefit of committees which desired to meet.

The affair, despite the inclement weather, was well attended, many citizens being present as well as officers of the regiment. Music for dancing was supplied by O'Connor's orchestra. At midnight refreshments of a most inviting character were served. The dance was one of the many successful similar affairs conducted by the genial sergeants.

Baptist Preacher Deposed.

Wolfville, N.S., Nov. 21.—An ecclesiastical council of Baptist churches was called here to deal with the ministerial standing of Rev. C. C. Burgess, accused of immoral conduct. After a discussion, from which the legal aspects of the case were excluded, and simply the moral aspects dealt with it, it was unanimously resolved that the accused be deposed from the christian ministry, and that Wolfville church exclude him from its membership.

The Tenderer's Figures.

Those who tendered for the sewer to be constructed between the residence of fireman Hall and No. 2 fire station are none too well pleased at the action of the city engineer in deciding to do the work by day labor. One tenderer figured on $38 for labor, $8.50 for tile and $13.50 for plumbing, a total of $60, and he thinks the city cannot do the work as cheaply. The sewer is less than 100 feet long.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Statements Denied.

Sydenham, Nov. 21. (To the Editor): An item in last week's Napanee Beaver, concerning the Sydenham-Newburgh football match on Nov. 3rd, presents contradictions. The Sydenham boys went to Newburgh for a friendly game, like that played in Sydenham on Oct. 20th. But at no stage of the game were the Sydenham boys treated as gentlemen. The referee, it is unfairly proclaimed by the Newburgh correspondent, favored Sydenham on every occasion and was the cause of the resulting score. The Newburgh supporter also claims that both Sydenham men were offside when the goals were scored, yet this was denied by some of the Newburgh players. Throughout the game the referee's decisions were impartial. Certainly the Newburgh boys must form some excuse for the severe defeat they suffered on their own grounds. If they think they were not treated fairly, the Sydenham team challenge them to play on any neutral ground and under a neutral referee, as we sympathize with them over their defeat, although they were strengthened by one of Napanee's best men.—A SUPPORTER.

Black River Bridge Passages.

Black River Bridge, Nov. 19.—Both evaporators will continue to run for the next six weeks. From Oct. 10th to Nov. 10th 1,800 bushels were taken in at A. E. Grimmon's evaporator. To Purify The Blood

NATURE HAS ONLY PROVIDED ONE MEANS, AND THAT IS THE KIDNEYS.

Every Drop of Blood Passes Through the Kidneys to be Filtered of Morbid Impurities.

The Kidneys Are Made Vigorous and the Blood Made Pure by Using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

The blood carries nourishment to the various parts of the body and at the same time collects the matter thrown off by the wasting process, which is continually going on.

To separate the poisonous waste matter from the nutritive elements of the blood, nature has provided the kidneys which act as filters. The kidneys, and the kidneys alone, can purify the blood. The only way to help nature is to help the kidneys—to strengthen and invigorate them.

If your blood is vitiated by the evil effects of winter life the most effectual was to get rid of the poisonous impurities and prevent the ills of spring is through the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills, which act directly on the kidneys, making them active and vigorous in their work of filtering the blood.

About the first indications of deranged kidneys and vitiated blood are backache and deposits in the urine. The skin gets hard, yellow and dry, there are body pains, headaches, depressed and languid feelings, and stomach troubles. All of these distressing symptoms disappear when the kidneys are set right by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills.

Patrick J. McLaughlan, Beauharnois, Que., states: "I was troubled with kidney disease and dyspepsia for twenty years and have been so bad that I could not sleep at nights on account of pains in the back, but would walk the floor all night and suffered terrible agony.

"I tried all sorts of medicines but got no relief until I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. They made a new man of me, and the old troubles seem to be driven out of my system."

When the kidneys are kept healthy the blood is kept pure, the system is perfectly nourished, the waste matter is carried off, and disease finds no lodgement in the body. You can make no mistake in using Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills. They are the tried and and tested prescription of the great kidney doctor, Dr. A. W. Chase. They are purely vegetable and of marvellous efficacy as a strengthener of the kidneys and liver. They have a record of cures unapproached by any other kidney medicine. One pill a dose, 25c. a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.
