THE SOUTH AFRICAN WAR.

WHAT JULIAN RALPH HAS TO SAY OF IT.

He Views It at Cape Town—The Soldiers Rank Above Their Foes as Towers Above the Lowly Grass—The Whine of the Rich Refugees of Johannesburg.

Julian Ralph writes the London Daily Mail from Cape Town as follows:

"On every ship that arrives in Cape Town from London are many British army officers.

"Some ships bring a dozen or twenty; others as many as fifty. They are the pick and flower of Englishmen. Most of them are young men, in the late twenties and early thirties, bearing distinguished names, exhibiting the long, slender faces of the British aristocracy, carrying themselves at once like dandies and like athletes.

"The one strange thing about them is that nobody is sending them here, and they do not know to what part of the seat of war they are going or what they are going to do. They only know that they could not keep away. They are here to see what they call 'the fun.' It is a war against sharpshooters, guerillas, and sharpshoots, in which a far greater proportion of officers than men are certain to be killed, but that does not deter to them. The first accounts of skirmishes they read after they have landed tell of the deaths of officers and the wounding of others. Apparently the manner in which the enemy reveals its presence among the bushes out Natal way is by the dropping of an officer from his saddle or in his tracks as he pushes ahead of his men. What of that? It is part of 'the fun,' they say.

"These fine young fellows have come during their years of absence, which have been spent in active service in disagreeable climates, in lonely garrison posts in the Soudan, or on the Indian frontier. One who came here with me has given up a billet for which he had long been striving, and when it was offered to him just as he had determined to come out here and do a little fighting for variety. Other of my companions on the voyage was starting to make a long-projected tour of the world, but his disturbance proved more attractive. A third officer on the ship arrived in England to his people, from whom he had been separated; but he got no nearer than London, and only stay four days when he caught the rest of his comrades, and bolted for South Africa. On another ship a young man with an income of 6,000 a year, who was just about to be married, but instead of taking his bride to St. George's he had her flown to Waterloo to see him off for Durban.

"I watched these men on shipboard during seventeen days. They were up at six o'clock every morning, running so many times around the deck in pipers and pyjamas in order to keep themselves in good condition, then plunging into a cold bath and coming back to the deck again in shoals, as fresh and blooming as cut flowers. All day they read about South Africa in the little books they had brought along with them, and which they exchanged for other books that other men had brought on board. They were, I say, the best of Englishmen—wide-awake, well-informed, proud, polished, polite, considerate, and bounding with animal health and high spirits.

"The more I saw of them the sorrier I got at all I have ever read about the various fanatical people on earth, who are celebrated for being afraid to die—the Soudanese dervishes, I mean, and the Soudan Turks and pilfering Albanians. Now, last of all, these wooden-headed Boers. Of some of these we are told that they welcome death, others, that they believe themselves in God's care. And what of the English? Are they afraid to die? Who would say such a thing — think it for a moment — of them? They are as ready to die as any men, and they rank above their foes as towers rise above the lowly grass, because they risk their lives with a full knowledge of what they are doing, and because in risking themselves they risk the most enviable lot of which any men can boast. The income, the estates, the wives and sisters, the companions, the sports, the clubs, the comforts and the luxuries with which these men can surround themselves whenever they will, are ties which should make life dearer to them than the bare, hard lot of most of the poor wretches whom historians and poets have glorified for not fearing death, every one of whom, I honestly believe, fears it more than these splendid, dashing fellows, who keep on carving empires out of the map to swell the size of England.

"Been to government house?" I asked one of these men yesterday.

"No," said he, "and I'm not going. I am afraid they might send me somewhere out of the thick of things. I don't want them to know I'm here, I'm going wherever it's liveliest. I'll be certain to find somebody under whom I have served, or with whom I have fought, and so I'll see the best of it."

"And that was the man who told me that out of 100 men with whom he studied for the service, seventy-five are dead already, fifteen of illnesses and sixty of bullet wounds and spear thrusts!

"It is disgusting to leave these men and turn into any one of the Cape Town hotels to find yourself surrounded by the rich refugees from Johannesburg, and to hear them cry like children as they tell you what they will lose if the British do not hurry up and take the Transvaal before the Boers destroy Johannesburg. They actually cry in their plates at dinner, and half-strangle themselves by sobbing as they drink their whiskey at bed time. The Mount Nelson, the Queen's, and the Grand hotels are all full of these merchants and millionaires, faring on the fat of the land, idle, loafing, all of every day, and discussing what per cent. of their losses the British government will pay when they put in their claims at the end of the war.

"Some came here as clerks, some as laborers in the mines, and some are merchants who brought £10 worth of goods out from Birmingham a dozen years ago. They tell you that they have left £100,000 worth or £80,000 worth of goods in their shop, and that altogether £25,000,000 is in danger of destruction in Johannesburg.

"Oh, mine Got!" one has just been saying to me, "I can'd dell how much I shall lose by dis peeziness. I shpeak mit much feeling, my frent. Blease excooses me crying. Vot do you dink? Do you dink I can get back dirty-three per cent. of vot I lose from the British government? Oh, Got! den I lose £60,000—ain't it derrible?"

"They are pulling their long faces all over the place, and shedding their tears wherever you meet them. It is enough to make a statue ill to have to hear and see them and move among them. Why don't they equip a regiment of rough riders or make up a battalion of volunteers among themselves? Why don't they fight? The war has jeopardised their property, and they have a keener interest in it than any Tommy or any officer now at the front. How can they see the cream and flower of English manhood rushing down here to spill its precious blood for them, and never feel a blush of shame or a pang of emotion except grief over losses which will still leave many of them rich?

"Really, Cape Town is a wonderful place. It is worth the journey to see the streets blocked by able young men, and the hotels crowded by rich refugees, while each night's train takes out the fearless gentlemen who are deliberately risking, not only their lives, but more of worldly advantage than can ever come to these skulkers who cling to the shelter of England's guns, and weep while they wait for men to die that they may rush up to the British treasury with their claims.

"If the exhibition these refugees are making in Cape Town were as important as it is conspicuous, one would think the Englishmen in charge here would drop the contest where it is and go home in disgust. But it is only a phase of a side issue, quite apart from the principle at stake."

"JULIAN RALPH."

BEAVERS IN THE ST. LAWRENCE

They Escaped From Heart's Island and Built a Home For Themselves.

Lansdowne, Nov. 28.—It may not be generally known that there is a small colony of beavers in the St. Lawrence river, within half a mile of the famous Fiddler's Elbow, yet this is the case. They escaped from their owner was unable to see them again. They have built a substantial house, having cut in a considerable number of trees poles, some of them having carried a considerable distance. The majority of Canadians, the ingenuity and engineering skill of this little animal, our national emblem, is little understood, and a visit to their place of residence is worth the trouble. It is to be hoped that they may be allowed to remain undisturbed.

George Rutter is very ill at present. Robert Allen is putting an addition on his residence. The lecture by Rudyard Kipling by Rev. J. Bedford-Jones, Brockville, on Thursday night in G. F. Hall, in aid of St. John's Church, was very interesting and attractive.

BRASS THIEVES IN COURT.

BOYS STEAL BRASS FROM A GRAND TRUNK LOCOMOTIVE.

Four Out of Seven Admit Their Guilt—Remanded for Further Investigation—Devine Sent to Jail for Two Months—Patrick Dougherty Committed for Trial.

At the police court this morning seven boys—Arthur Wylie, Bernard Hartley, Frederick McMillan, William Barrie, Frederick Harold, William Rybort, Herbert Blake, whose ages ranged from ten to nineteen years—were charged with the theft of a quantity of brass from G.T.R. engine No. 61, which stood near the Grand Trunk freight sheds awaiting transfer to the locomotive works for repairs. Harold, Hartley, and McMillan pleaded not guilty. The others acknowledged their guilt. Superintendent Tandy described the brasses, estimating their value at about $15. The brasses consisted of bearings, oil cups, connecting rod bearings, etc.

James Purtell, aged fourteen, saw Barrie and Hartley under the engine. Heard Hartley say, "I cannot get it off. It is too hard."

Barrie acknowledged that he and Rybort had taken a quantity of the stuff. He also saw Hartley take some of the stuff. Sold the brass to Louis Seft for $1.80.

Louis Seft acknowledged buying a quantity of brass on Wednesday last from Blake, Rybort, Harold and Barrie, paying them eight cents a pound for it. Rybort was the spokesman and received the money for the brass. Thursday morning Harold and another lad called on him and offered brass for sale, for which he paid them $1. The second lad was not among the seven in the dock. Seft sold the brass to Susesman. Langbort had a quantity of brass similar to that produced in court.

A number of the lads were also examined in the witness box, after which the magistrate further adjourned the case until to-morrow morning.

Edward Spooner, for drunkenness, was fined $3 and costs or given the option of going to jail for two months.

Patrick Dougherty, on a charge of receiving stolen oats, underwent preliminary examination, after which he was committed for trial.

James Devine, jr., was committed to jail for two months without the option of a fine. He was guilty of assaulting police constable Diamond.

LOMBARDY LOCALS.

Doings of the Residents—Cheese Factory Closed.

Lombardy, Nov. 28.—Mr. and Mrs. Stanley L. McDonald, Ogdensburg, spent a few days recently with Mrs. McDonald's mother, Mrs. R. H. Wells. Robert Clark's family moved to Brockville last week. Mr. Clark has been working in the Island city for several months. James Gardiner will go with his family to Dauphin, Manitoba, shortly. He intends locating on a farm.

The cheese factory closes this week after a very prosperous season, and the best of satisfaction, under the able management of Winnard Singleton, who for the past two winters has been assistant instructor in cheese at the dairy school, Kingston. He will resume his work there next week for this winter. Mrs. Charles Andrews has returned home after an extended visit to relatives at Escott and Rockport. Visitors: Thomas Thomson, Brockville, at Thomas Cauley's; Norman Allan, Perth, at Alexander Nicholson's on Sunday; Miss Nellie Burchill at R. P. Erratt's last week. Miss Tena Cauley spent last week in Brockville with friends. B. B. Bellamy possesses another little girl. An "At Home" was held in the town hall on Friday evening last, a number of young folks gathering together and enjoying themselves in playing social games, etc.

The "King Of Horse Thieves."

Woodstock, Ont., Nov. 29.—Old William Chisholm, who is commonly called the "king of horse thieves," lies dying at the jail here. He has been a horse thief for sixty years, and whenever he has not been in jail he has been stealing horses. He used to hide the stolen horses in the mountains near Hamilton, where the gang of which he was the leader, had their rendezvous. Chisholm is seventy five years old, and is now nothing but skin and bones. Yesterday he sent for a minister and signed the pledge. Forty years ago Chisholm was a fine-looking man and wore a plug hat all the time. He is a terrible wreck now.

A Choice Of Three.

Toronto, Nov. 29.—A private conference was held this morning between the bishop of Toronto and representatives of St. James' cathedral for the purpose of clearing away the remaining difficulties in the way of the appointment of a rector. At the close it was announced that the bishop was in a position to nominate and would do so within a few days. Three names are believed to have been presented as those from among which a nomination would be made: Vice-provost Welch, of Trinity; Rev. A. H. Baldwin, of All Saints', and Prof. Cody, of Wycliffe.

Reserved One Point.

Napanee, Nov. 29.—The case of Fields vs. Ungar at the assizes was an accident case. The defendant's son drove his buggy into the hind wheels of the plaintiff's democrat, throwing her out. His lordship tried the case without a jury, and assessed the damages at $260, deciding that the driver was guilty of negligence, but reserving the question of the defendant's responsibility.

Sir Edward Clarke Will Resign.

London, Nov. 29.—Sir Edward Clarke, conservative member of parliament for Plymouth since 1880, and from 1886 to 1892 solicitor-general, has addressed a letter to his constituents announcing his intention to retire at the next general election in view of the fact that he is not in agreement with the government's policy.

Ambassador White To Resign.

Berlin, Nov. 29.—The Berliner Neueste Nachrichten states that nothing is known in political circles here of the intended resignation of Andrew D. White as United States ambassador, reported to be imminent in Washington.

To Attend The Funeral.

The professors and students of Queen's will attend the funeral of the late Rev. Dr. T. G. Smith on Friday afternoon at three o'clock in academic costume. The flag on the college building flies at half-mast in memory of a faithful servant.

Coming To The Funeral.

Hon. W. S. Fielding will arrive in the city on Friday to attend the funeral of his brother-in-law, the late Rev. Dr. T. G. Smith.

Thomas Davidson, Portsmouth, absent for some time in Winnipeg, Man., and Watertown, N.Y., has returned home.

FREDERICKSBURGH FACTS

Wedded In Chicago—Many Items of Interest.

Fredericksburgh, Nov. 28.—A large amount of hay has been shipped so far. John Bullis, late of Toledo, and George I. Perry are both excellent buyers, and each is getting his share of the business. The price ranges at about $7 per ton for No. 1 timothy. Mr. Bullis buys only for the export trade. The tea-meeting at the Lutheran church on December 7th promises to surpass anything of its kind held there previously. Rev. J. S. McMullen, Enterprise, and Rev. H. I. Allen, Napanee, are expected to deliver addresses.

Freeman Vanalstine has just returned from a visit at Niagara. Whilst there he secured a good situation in a large paper mill at Niagara Falls, N.Y. He is at present arranging to dispose of his farming interests and will remove there at once. Luke Young's eldest child, Arthur, a boy of about five years, is in a very serious condition of health. Samuel Maley returned Saturday after spending three months in the Boissevain district, Manitoba. He visited our old friend, George Towns, Ninga, and says he is prosperous and contented and one of the most well-to-do farmers in the locality. Miss Dollie Hawley, Richmond, is visiting at James Fraser's.

A wedding in Chicago is announced to take place to-day in which Edward Hunt, recently of this place, and Miss Maggie Lafferty, Morven, figure as the principals. Congratulations respectfully tendered. The Misses Sexsmith, cheesemakers, Union factory, expect to sever their connection with that factory and will remove elsewhere at an early date. Several applications have been received for the school, should vacancy occur.

ARDEN AFFAIRS.

Water in Lake Failing—To Open a Handicraft Class.

Arden, Nov. 28.—William Scott, blacksmith, has left Wilton and will carry on the business here for many years conducted by his father, the late Norman Scott. J. E. Miller has also moved here from Ardoch, and intends to open a new blacksmith shop on the lot lately occupied by Mrs. Keller. The new sheds at the Methodist church are about finished. A funeral sermon on the death of William Hayes, oldest son, was preached by Rev. D. C. Day on Sunday evening. Joseph Keller has moved on the old Clapper place, which he has lately purchased. Richard Martin has gone to live back of Cross lake.

The water is failing in Great Clear lake, and difficulty is felt at the grist mill to get a supply for grinding grain. The cheese factory accounts for 1899 are being audited by G. E. Emberley, principal of Arden school, and Andrew Osborne, township clerk. The services of the English church are now held at ten in the morning, and seven in the evening, at the school house half an hour earlier than the usual time. The night school recently opened is a success, about fifteen scholars are in regular attendance. Rev. Mr. Wilkinson intends to open a handicraft class for boys and a sewing class for girls, the latter under the management of Mrs. Wilkinson, to be held during the winter months.
