Mrs. Geo. Adams, Uxbridge, Ont.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills Cured Her of Fainting Spells, Partial Paralysis and Heart Trouble After the Doctors Had Given Her Up to die.

The beginning of this year very few people in Uxbridge, Ont., thought Mrs. George Adams, a well known and highly respected lady of that town, would be alive to see the incoming of spring.

She was so weak and wasted, her appetite was gone, there were dark circles under her eyes, her heart was bad, those terrible faint spells and smothering sensations came over her so frequently that it seemed to be only a matter of time until she would pass to the great majority.

More than that, there were times when she became partly paralyzed, and the doctors who were in attendance had given up all expectation of her recovery. At this time a friend in Toronto, hearing of Mrs. Adams' serious condition, advised the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. It was the last ray of hope, and Mrs. Adams concluded to try the remedy.

On February 3rd she got the first box, and started taking them. That was a Thursday, Friday night the first good effects of the medicine were made evident in Mrs. Adams getting sound, refreshing sleep, the first good night's rest she had had in months.

From that time on every day found her improving in health and getting stronger. The terrible pains that used to shoot through her head and arms disappeared, the spells of numbness and partial paralysis that came over her at times bothered her no more. Soon she was able to resume her household duties, and in addition bake her own bread, a thing she had not attempted for the past two years.

To-day Mrs. Adams is thankful to Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for sparing her life to her children and husband, and under date of April 4th, 1898, wrote as follows:

"I had given up all hopes of recovering, and frequently thought I could not live through the day.

"Fainting spells, numbness and partial paralysis came upon me very often, sometimes seven spells in half a day. I was in this helpless, hopeless condition when a friend advised me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which I secured at Mr. Nicholls' drug store. I had not taken them long when I noticed a great change for the better, and before I had used half a box I was up doing my own house work.

"By the time the first box was completed I was able to walk down town and back quite easily, a distance of half a mile each way.

"I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, as they saved my life and restored my health."

ELIZABETH ADAMS.

T. C. Nicholls, B.A., the popular druggist and stationer, of Uxbridge, who sold Mrs. Adams the pills, is ready to vouch for the truthfulness of the above statement.

This case of Mrs. Adams is only one of the thousands that Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are curing all over Canada. Anyone afflicted with weak, palpitating, throbbing heart, nervousness, sleeplessness, faint and dizzy spells, pale sallow complexion, thin, watery blood, dyspepsia, weakness, loss of flesh, spinal disease, St. Vitus dance, etc., will find Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills the remedy indicated.

For women they are specially beneficial, imparting a rosy color to the pallid cheek and giving relief from pain and weakness. Growing girls and nursing mothers have heavy drains on their systems, and will find in Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills the very elements that are needed to keep up their health and strength.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent by mail on receipt of price, 50c. a box, or three boxes for $1.25. T. Milburn & Co., Toronto, Ont.

University Rowdyism.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Extraordinary exhibitions of rowdyism have marred the opening of the winter session of the Scotch universities. Principal Story, at the university of Glasgow, owing to disorder of the students, left the hall in disgust without finishing his address. Prof Saintsbury, occupying the chair of English literature in the university of Edinburgh, was similarly interrupted. He made appeals for order, but the disorder increased until it almost assumed a riot, when he indignantly quitted the hall.

HOME FAILURES

And Serious Losses From Use Of Common and Adulterated Dyes.

DIAMOND DYES

Are Used By All Wise and Economical Women.

The only pure, harmless and successful package dyes for home dyeing are the Diamond Dyes.

The imitation package dyes and the common soap grease mix are so largely adulterated with foreign substances that they are positively dangerous to use and handle. No lady who values her garments and materials will care to risk the coloring powers of these adulterated dyestuffs. Suffice it to say, the colors are dull, muddy and blotchy, and cannot stand the most ordinary washing.

The Diamond Dyes have a long record of triumphs and well done work that has never been equalled in the history of home dyes. In every part of the world they give delight and satisfaction, and are hailed as true money savers.

Easy, pleasant and profitable home dyeing is only possible with the tested and popular Diamond Dyes.

Be wary are still storekeepers who sell inferior package and soap grease dyes for the sake of long profits, see to it that your dealer gives you the Diamond Dyes when you ask for them. Every genuine package has the name "Diamond."

It is poor judgment to pay ten cents for adulterated dyes when you can buy the guaranteed Diamond Dyes for the same price.

GERALDINE'S LETTER.

When the Rev. J. E. Starr was pastor of the Sydenham street Methodist church he suggested that the women of his congregation should furnish a room at the general hospital. His idea was not carried out, however, until after the fire at the Watkins wing, when the leader of "Lend a Hand" circle of The King's Daughters urged the members of the circle to comply with their former pastor's wishes in this respect. A small ward on the top flat of the new building was secured, and, at the hospital opening last Monday, this was one of the rooms in which many of the spectators were particularly interested. The decorations are in two shades of purple—the colors of the Order. There are three beds in the room, and the supply of linen is bountiful, each article bearing the stamp of the little maltese cross with its "I. H. N.," also the letters "S. M. C." (Sydenham street Methodist church) underneath. The first picture one notices upon entering is an enlarged photograph of the minister who was the one to inspire the circle with a desire to furnish a room. Other appropriate pictures also adorn the walls, and a mirror over the mantel helps to enlarge the appearance of the surroundings. Above this mirror is an illuminated scroll, bearing the maltese cross, and the motto of the circle, "Bear ye one another's burdens." The muslin curtains are daintily frilled, and the bureau accessories, and invalids' tables, provided with china attractively decorated with purple floral design, add a home-like touch to this pretty room. There are comfortable chairs ready for prospective convalescents, and there are soft "nightingales" for the patients to wear in bed, and loose warm wrappers, flannel nightgowns, and bedroom slippers. No detail seems to have been overlooked in the endeavor to make this room a bright and attractive place, and those who enjoy its luxuries in time to come will doubtless attest to the fact that the circle have been obedient to their motto in lightening to a material extent the burdens of many who would not otherwise be surrounded by such comfort during their illness. Directly below the room I have described, is one furnished by "Charity" circle of The King's Daughters,—the pioneer circle of this city, whose leader has been faithful and active in guiding the doings of her girls for over five years. She was the prime mover in furnishing this room, and the circle, encouraged by her enthusiasm, set to work with a will, first to help to raise money for purchasing what would be required, and then to sew, knit, hemstitch, embroider, and paint, until their efforts culminated in the lovely room of which they all feel so proud. Part of the money was raised by the ambulance lectures last winter, part was the proceeds of a tea and candy sale, and part was donated by absent members who had formerly been active in the circle's work, but who have since married and removed to other places. Some of these absent members sent fancy work instead of money,—tray cloths, table cloths, bureau doileys, etc., in each case supplying material as well as work. The rest of the linen, the bed furnishings and the various articles of invalid apparel, were made by the home members of the circle. The maltese cross with "I.H.N.," is embroidered on each of the table cloths, and the china is chosen to carry out the color of the Order in its floral decorations. The pictures are in good taste and, while one is the gift of Mrs. (Dr.) Strange, the others are given by members of the circle. The illuminated motto hanging above the mantel is the work of Miss Ella Fraser, who kindly contributed it to the room. It has a maltese cross with "I.H.N." and a scroll bearing the words "Not to be ministered unto, but to minister."

The invalids' wrappers, flannel nightingales with pretty manre trimmings, purple bedroom slippers, and invalids' boots, crocheted in purple wool, and made to come high above the ankles, are a few of the comforts provided for this room.

The chairs are models of rest and ease; one is a veritable "Sleepy Hollow." On the table by the bedside is a dainty glass filled with heliotrope—perhaps I should say "was," as I am referring to things as they were at the opening last Monday, but, when the room is occupied, the circle will see that its guests are supplied with flowers. On another table is a leather covered title, so large and clear in type that the convalescents will not find it a tax on their eyesight, and by its side is the latest number of The Silver Cross Magazine the organ of the International Order of The King's Daughters.

Kingstonians are justly proud of the new Watkins wing. Those who furnished rooms entirely at their own expense are deserving of many thanks and much praise; but not the least acceptable among the many generous donations are the two little "ward" rooms furnished by "Lend a Hand," and "Charity" circles of The King's Daughters.

In addressing the women students on Tuesday afternoon, Lady Aberdeen urged them to remember that it is, first, in the home that the value of higher education must be proved. There the education will react on the whole tone of the surroundings. She hoped it would not be long before a department of domestic science would be added to the curriculum of Queen's. She laughingly suggested that, in the course of his administration, the Premier should pass a law, forbidding young couples to marry unless they can pass an examination on how to keep a home healthy and bright; the value of food and how to cook it; and how to keep people well, in addition to how to make them better. Sir Wilfrid said he was afraid that he could not oblige Her Excellency by promising to introduce such a law. Could any one look down from that platform upon such intelligent faces of those young people and insist that they must "pass an examination on how to make a home bright and happy" before they would be allowed to marry? Such an examination would not be necessary, and he was sure his audience agreed with him in this. When politicians think differently on any subject the only thing to be done is to agree to disagree, so he and Her Excellency must agree to disagree regarding the necessity of such a law!

On Tuesday evening Mrs. Short entertained at dinner in honor of the Premier and Lady Laurier who were her guests during their recent visit to Kingston.

The floral decorations on the handsome dinner table elicited much admiration. Deep crimson roses were massed in the centre, and surrounded by glasses of exquisite pink and cream roses. The guests pronounced the dinner party a most delightful affair, it could hardly have been otherwise when the duties of the perfect hostess were fulfilled in every detail by Mrs. Short, in which she was efficiently sustained by her brother, Mr. W. Bruce Carruthers. The guests included His Excellency the Governor-General and Lady Aberdeen, Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier, Lady Marjory Gordon, Captain Tharpe, A.D.C., Sir Sandford Fleming, Mrs. Briggs, Principal Grant and Mr. Gunn.

The tea at Mrs. Kilborn's under the auspices of St. James' churchwoman's guild, was a great success considering the disagreeable state of the weather yesterday afternoon. The guests were received by Mrs. Kilborn and Mrs. Tandy. Misses K. and L. Kirkpatrick, and L. Callaghan had charge of the candy table, and Mrs. Mrs. Sellick and Mrs. Welch presided over the tea table, assisted by Mesdames Coleman, Wright, Booth, Phillips, and Misses Dupuy, Macmorine, Corbett and Wilson. The proceeds amounted to $22.63, which, after the deduction of the slight incidental expenses, will be added to the parsonage improvement fund.

Miss Phyllis Short's birthday party on Thursday was a repetition of the one given a few weeks ago for Miss Charlie Short, and I am sure the boys and girls who had so much fun on both occasions vowed that it will be a whole year before these little girls will have birthdays again. The entire upper flat of Mrs. Short's house was at the disposal of the children, and from four until nine o'clock they had a jolly romp. Before tea, "Little Sally Water" divided the honors with "Jacob and Ruth," and "Here's the Robbers Coming through," proved another favorite. "Prisoner" was a very exciting game, especially when the prisoner—a popular young clergyman—made his escape from the cells and was pursued with shouts until the juveniles succeeded in capturing him again, when he was consigned to a dungeon for safe keeping. The sound of the tea bell terminated this part of the programme, and a descent was made to the dining room. The long table in the centre of the room was surrounded by the girls, the boys having another table to themselves. Half a dozen young ladies were waitresses, and were kept busy supplying the wants of the little people who did ample justice to all the dainties provided for their delectation. The birthday cake had two stories and was tastefully iced, with "Phyllis 1898," on top, while small colored candles—one for every year the little hostess has lived—burned brightly around the edge of the lower story. The ceremony of extinguishing the candles and cutting the cake then occurred, and prize mottos completed the tea party down stairs. Several of Mrs. Short's friends arrived while the children were at tea, and were not averse to renewing their youth by joining in the frolic which was resumed until nine o'clock. When the children went home the "grown-ups" sat down to a substantial supper, after which the romp was continued in the drawing room. The climax of the evening's sport was a cake walk, in which Mrs. Short, Capt. Ogilvie, Miss McGill and Mr. W. C. Kent, undoubtedly "took the cake." The party broke up at twelve o'clock, reiterating the statement that cake walks and frolics are much more fun than formal evening parties.

Amongst those present were: Mrs. Taylor, Deseronto; Misses K. Moore, R. Montizambert, K. Montizambert, C. Taylor, Metcalfe, Callaghan, Captain Ogilvie, Captain Logan, Captain Strange, Lieut. Col. Skinner, Rev. G. L. Starr, Mr. Martin, Mr. W. Bruce Carruthers, Mr. Farrell, Mr. W. C. Kent, Captain Norman Leslie, and Mr. C. Gay Shannon.

WEARY OF WELL-DOING.

Correspondents Should Study English and Write With Sense and Brevity.

The sentences that some writers try to grind out resemble eternity; they have no end, and scarcely little beginning. As they cross, pass over, under and through each other, they are not as harmonious in their passages as are the stars circling in their orbits. The effort to untangle them, to decipher their ambiguous meaning and to present that "divinely inspired" message to the patient reader (for he needs have much of that virtue in some cases) awakens thoughts that would not make a suitable addition to a Sunday School library. The letters that frequently reach our table are quite enough to drive a man to drink, and it is only the price of that liquid commodity that restrains us. One writer says her letter is a "divinely inspired" one. It was only the Lord's words she wrote, dear girl! She "did not have to erase a single word or form a sentence." Yes, but what about the newspaper man? Was there a word he did not erase, or a sentence he did not recast? To palm off such literature as "divinely inspired" matter makes the stoutest heart grow weary. While willing and ready to publish sensible and valuable articles, there exists a decided objection to bore the reader with labored effusions. Many writers stretch out the thread of their discourse longer than the whole moral law. As "brevity is the soul of wit, and tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes," therefore let them take unto themselves the law, "We will be brief."
