PRETTY MARIA ELOPES.

SHE SAID THAT SHE COULD NOT LIVE WITHOUT HIM.

Sinclair's Sweet Message of Love to Her—She Asks Her Father's Forgiveness—The Old Man's Pursuit—The Pedler Out of Range of the Shotgun.

TORONTO, Oct. 25.—Martin Sinclair, the shoddy cloth pedler, has broken his vow and is now basking in the smiles of his sweet country love. After his experience last week, when he was captured at the Union station while in the act of eloping from York township with farmer Hennilstone's daughter, and lammed and prodded with the butt end of a shotgun by the irate parent, he solemnly affirmed that he would never go courting again, but his feelings were too strong for him and he is now safe in Uncle Sam's dominions with the idol of his heart's affections, and with nothing to mar his happiness but a private detective and an enraged father, together with the painful recollections of a short set to, of which he carries distinct marks.

It appears that after Maria Hennilstone, who is a very pretty girl, and aged not yet eighteen years, was taken to her home on the Vaughan plank road, Sinclair wrote to the parents asking them to forgive his exploit and accept him as a member of the [illegible] letter. Subsequent events, however, showed that he did not despair, as he had evidently been in the habit of surreptitiously sending and receiving letters to the girl, a hollow tree in the neighbourhood of the house being utilized as a post office. On Monday evening the girl appeared to be ill at ease, and she was noticed several times reading a letter, but no particular attention was paid to it at the time. Yesterday afternoon she received permission to visit a neighbour with whom she was to take tea, and at this time no one dreamt that another elopement was contemplated. At nine o'clock, when she did not return, the family became anxious, and Mr. Hennilstone, who was at a church meeting, was sent for. He at once proceeded to the neighbour's house, when he discovered to his surprise that his daughter had not been there at all. Returning home he proceeded to the girl's room, and found, among other things, an unfolded letter addressed to himself. The contents filled him with rage and dismay, and explained very fully his daughter's mysterious disappearance. The letter read:

"TORONTO, 22nd Oct., 1888.

"Darling Maria—Fate was against me and you last week, and I have hardly got over the effects of the meeting at the Union station, but Maria, darling, I am well enough to make another attempt to secure you, precious one, for my own Darling I cannot tell you what agony I have suffered for your sake. Those reporters of the papers are infernal liars. My eyes ain't black and there ain't a scratch on me. I could have licked the stuffing out of the old man, but he was your father, darling. Do you love me enough to fly with me again? I cannot live without you. If you will come meet me at the hollow tree, our post office, and I will be waiting with a rig and a friend tomorrow night at seven o'clock. Dearest Maria, do not disappoint me, and I'll make you happy forever. From your anxious and loving friend, MARTIN SINCLAIR.

"P.S.—God bless you, my darling. Never mind your clothes. You can buy lots when we are married. M.S."

"Love and kisses x x x x x"

On the back of this loving epistle, which was closely written on a page of foolscap, there was indorsed in hurried writing the following note directed simply:

"FATHER—I cannot live without him. Good bye. Please forgive us. We cannot help it. We love each other so much. Your loving daughter.

MARIA."

"P.S.—Tell mamma I will write. M."

With his heart filled with rage and his favorite shot gun loaded with small pellets, Farmer Hennilstone started once more after the love stricken couple, but he was not so fortunate as on the trip of last week. He did not reach the city until midnight, and after a vain search at the union station he proceeded to the residence of Detective John Reid, and once more engaged that officer to assist him. Mr. Reid at once repaired to the depot and after some trouble learned that a young couple answering the description given of the elopers had taken the late west-bound train for Detroit. He at once telegraphed to Detective Stragbe at Detroit to head them off, and despatched the old man after them this morning. Farmer Hennilstone is determined to bring his daughter back, married or unmarried, if he has to wade through the gore of the amorous shoddy cloth pedler.

ONLY TWO INMATES.

Two Prisoners Are Lonely in Picton Gaol—They Await Their Trials.

There are only two men in the Picton gaol—Peter and Wellington Loveless, father and son, who are awaiting their trial for the shooting of Leslie Church near Carrying Place. They occupy the same corridor in the day time, but sleep in different cells at night. They have some books in their cells which they read among them, a bible and Methodist hymn book. Mr. Loveless was for years a member of the Methodist church, but unfortunately his connection was severed about eight years ago. The father and son are deeply affected by the trying position in which they find themselves. They cheerfully receive the visits and spiritual ministrations of Rev. J. Young, and give attention as he reads, and as he engages in prayer they fervently join and respond, especially the father, who is much moved whenever prayer is offered. The assizes open on Monday, Judge Rose presiding. R. C. Clute, of Belleville, will conduct the crown business. G. W. Ostrom, M.P.P., and P. J. O'Rourke, Trenton, are making the necessary arrangements for the defence of Peter Loveless and son, and it is supposed that B. B. Osler, Q.C., Toronto, will also be employed.

SUED FOR THE COFFIN

In Which the Unfortunate Cook of the Str. St. Lawrence Was Buried.

Montreal Star.

Edward Desmaisons, of 206 Barre street, who was a cook on the St. Lawrence, was drowned on Sept. 13th. His friends here were informed that he jumped off the boat near Alexandria Bay, and that he had committed suicide. A body was found supposed to be his a little below Kingston. His family were informed that it would be too expensive to send the remains to Montreal, but they would be interred gratis up there. His son was advised to go up and identify the body. He left at once but on his arrival he found that the remains were in the grave. No coroner's jury was summoned, and without any identification Desmaisons was consigned to the earth. Yesterday his wife received a letter demanding $20 for the coffin, and stating that if she failed to pay at once she would be sued.

The Royal Arcanum meets to-morrow. A full attendance of members is requested.

PERSONAL MENTION.

People Whose Movements, Sayings and Doings Attract Attention.

Crossley and Hunter are now at Winnipeg. They will be in Kingston about New Year's.

Cool Burgess is again on the road with, it is said, the best company he has ever managed.

James Killorn has left Pasadena, California, for Canada again. He will locate in Toronto.

Monsignor Farrelly is confined to his room on account of a severe cold and an attack of rheumatism.

High School Inspector Hodgson will make a visit and examinations at the Collegiate institute to morrow.

Prof. McIntosh and family have left Louisville for Champaign, Ill., where the professors college work has been resumed.

John N. Patterson, Elizabethtown, has returned from Europe. He will at once resume his studies in medicine in the Royal college.

The Bishop of Kingston has formed eleven new parishes in the diocese since the division occurred when eleven were given over to the diocese of Peterboro.

Capt. and Mrs. Rivers have returned from their wedding tour and are the recipients of many congratulations. They will reside on Wellington street.

John Paton, of New York, brother-in-law of Collector Hamilton, is now in Montreal attending the Christian conference. He is secretary of the New York evangelistic association.

Rev. S. G. Bland was about able to leave the hospital when it was found that the pressure of the artificial limb upon a nerve near the knee caused him pain. Another operation has been performed, which will detain him a week.

Rev. Fr. McGrath, one of the most popular priests in the diocese, has been appointed to the mission of Spencerville and Troup-town. His removal from Kingston is regretted. His geniality and his uprightness commended him to all men.

The marriage of Hon. E. Stanley, of the Grenadier Guards, eldest son of the governor general, to Lady Alice Montage, daughter of the Duke of Manchester, is announced. One of the fiancee's sisters is the Duchess of Hamilton and another is the Countess of Gosford.

Rev. William Walsh, pastor of the Reformed Episcopal church, Ottawa, has resigned his charge and will be admitted into the Anglican commission in this diocese and finally to holy orders. Mr. Walsh was first a Methodist minister, then a Reformed Episcopalian.

Rev. Robt. W. Rayson, late acting minister at St. Paul's, Kingston, has been appointed to the mission of Lombardy, near Smith's Falls. He will take charge about Wednesday next. During his stay here of a few months Mr. Rayson has made a host of friends, who will regret his departure, yet wish him well in his new parish. He is an active worker, and Lombardy parish is fortunate in its allotment.

A FINE PLACE TO MEET.

The American Canoe Association May Gather at Rideau Lake.

Officers of the American canoe association are strongly urging Rideau Lake as a place of meeting for 1889. A correspondent to the Forest and Stream says:

"It is pretty well understood that the meeting shall be held in Eastern Ontario. The Bay of Quinte was spoken of at the Lake George camp, but that is now out of the race, ex-Commodore Rathbun having stated that there is no suitable place there. Many who were at Grindstone island became tired of it, and of the St. Lawrence, though some of them now appear disposed to come back. If they want variety and an opportunity to see new waters they can have it by going to Rideau lake. Being on the line of the Rideau canal it can be easily reached by steamer or by rail. For those who wish to cruise to or from the camp there is a great variety of routes, from Ottawa, Kingston, Gananoque, etc., through lake and river scenery unsurpassed in the world for beauty and variety. I submit that the rights of the cruising canoeist should not be lost sight of, and I agree with you in the tenor of some of your recent articles, that cruising has been too much lost sight of in the presence of racing.

"When the lake is reached no better camping ground can be found than exists on Long island, an island of over a hundred acres in extent, owned by R. G. Hervey, and placed by him at the disposal of the association. Sailing and paddling courses, equal to any ever enjoyed by canoeists, can be had, while the scenery offers an attraction rarely met with. And then the fishing! If I were to tell of some of the catches made I would be accused by those who have not been there of drawing the long bow. I may say, however, that the bass fishing is such as is rarely met with, while the salmon fishing is not a whit behind. If good fishing has any attraction for canoeists Rideau lake should be fixed upon without any hesitation."

AN OLD FRIEND IN TOWN.

Captain Nellie Ludgate at the Salvation Army Meetings—Where Abbie Is.

Capt. Ludgate, (nee Nellie Ryerson), was at the Salvation army barracks last evening. She is making a brief visit to the city and is the guest of Mr. D. J. Garbutt. She looks as well as she did when here in the palmy days of the army. There was an audience of five or six hundred to greet her, among the number being many old friends, whose presence at any army meeting has not been seen for years. Capt. Ludgate is located with her husband at Owen Sound. She is happy in the work, though bereaved a couple of weeks ago by the death of an infant daughter. She is quite resigned. Her address was very touching. She left to-day for the west. From Capt. Ludgate we learned that the renowned organizer of the army in Kingston, Capt. Abbie Thompson, is now at Newark, N.J. She is not in the active work, the delicate state of her health preventing.

SACKVILLE WEST'S NOTE.

IT IS WRITTEN PRIVATELY TO A SEEKER OF FACTS.

The View He Takes of the President's Position in Regard to Retaliation—Mr. Cleveland Will be More Conciliatory By-And-Bye—Mr. Bayard's Opinion.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—Sir Lionel Sackville West, the British minister, while at his summer home at Beverly, Mass., received, on Sept. 12, a letter from a resident of Pomona, Cala., to which he sent the following reply:

["Private."]

"Sir,—I am in receipt of your letter of the 4th inst., and beg to say that I fully appreciate the difficulty in which you find yourself in casting your vote. You are probably aware that any political party which openly favored the mother country at the present moment would lose popularity, and that the party in power is fully aware of this fact The party, however, is, I believe, still desirous of maintaining friendly relations with Great Britain, and is still as desirious of settling all questions with Canada, which have been unfortunately reopened since the retaliation of the treaty by the republican majority in the senate, and by the president's message to which you allude. All allowances must, therefore, be made for the political situation as regards the presidential election thus created. It is, however, impossible to predict the course which President Cleveland may pursue in the matter of retaliation should he be elected, but there is every reason to belief that, while upholding the position he has taken, he will manifest a spirit of conciliation in dealing with the question involved in his message. I enclose an article from the New York Times of Aug. 22, and remain—Yours faithfully,

J. L. SACKVILLE WEST.

In an interview last night Lord Sackville said he did not write the letters, nor refrain from writing them, out of regard to political exigencies within the United States, which were matters that in no way concerned him otherwise than as a friendly and impartial spectater, but solely with reference to what was courteous and proper between himself and those that saw fit to honor him with their communications. He was aware that the native ingenuity of the American people was apt to come out strongly at the time of their national elections, and he thought the enthusiasm and enterprise that they threw into such struggles were indications of a sound political constitution. But he would like to know how any of the present contestants are to gain an advantage from the publication of his letter, which contained nothing but statements of well-known and undisputed facts. He had stated "That any political party which openly favored the mother country at the present would lose popularity." Does anybody dispute this attribution of fervid patriotism to the American people? He had added that the party in power is fully aware of this fact. He reads all the leading journals and knows whereof he speaks on this point. He had expressed the belief that the party in power was desirous of maintaining friendly relations with Great Britain, and still as desirous of settling all questions with Canada, and he might say the same of parties in the United States upon the authority of all the recognized party leaders and organs. His knowledge that the republican majority in the senate had regretted the fisheries treaty was derived from the official report of the proceedings of the senate, published by order of that chamber itself. He had written that it was "impossible to predict the course which the president may pursue in the matter of retaliation should he be elected;" and if anybody can make any authorative prediction on that point in advance of the situation, or circumstances requiring the president to act, the person so enabled is in possession of a valuable piece of information which it is impossible he should long keep to himself. He had told his correspondent that "there is every reason to believe that while upholding the position he had taken he (the president) will manifest a spirit of conciliation in dealing with the question involved in his message," meaning the so-called retaliation message. His authority for that expression of belief is to be found in the American press at large, and he (the minister) cannot conceive how he could have justified his words to himself or have escaped the just censure of the people of this country at large had he presumed to tell anybody that the president would not uphold any position he has taken on a grave question, or that he would approach such a question in any other than a becoming spirit. The suggestion that a foreign ambassador should not write unofficial letters on the domestic politics of the country to which he is accorded was dismissed by Lord Sackville in a summary fashion. It happens constantly he says in his interviews with people that statements are made to him and information, opinion and advice asked of him touching matters beyond his sphere and duty as a diplomatic agent of her majesty, and in all such instances acts as any other rational and considerate person would. What he would say in a personal interview he would, of course, not hesitate to write to an absent informant or enquirer, and he wrote to the gentleman at Pomona substantially what he should have told him at Beverley had he been called upon there.

At Georgetown last night Secretary Bayard said that without full authentication of the private letter of Lord Sackville referred, which upon its face was not intended for publication, it could not be noticed by the United States government.

FIRST TAKEN IN KINGSTON.

Chief Hinde got Handsomely Paid for Securing the Well-Known Character.

R. J. Jordan, who was arrested and taken to Pembroke on a charge of gaol breaking, was a real estate agent in Toronto. He did business at 67 Yonge street. He was dazed when his arrest was made. He was only awaiting trial when twelve years ago he broke gaol, so he will have to be tried for the offence he was first arrested, shooting at a constable as well as for breaking gaol. It might be interesting to state that Jordan was arrested for shooting at the officer in Scott's hotel on the corner of Ontario and Queen streets. At that time, 1876, Officers Hinde and Bennett were looking for a man who had robbed a countryman of $18, and while going through the hotel Jordan was found in bed. He was secured and handed over to the Pembroke authorities. Hinde was paid $150 for the arrest. The money was divided among the men then on the force. The Toronto News has it that Jordon was wanted for bigamy. He had a wife in Toronto when he was arrested. He also had a residence at Niagara, N.Y.

It is said that the prisoner led three blooming damsels to the hymeneal altar, despite the injunction that no man shall have more than one wife in this Christian country. Wife No. 3 is now in the States, married to another man, which will add materially to the domestic complications created by Jordan's unbounded love. In this case justice was slow, but it nevertheless was sure.

BEWARE OF POLITICIANS.

The Worst Foe That Canada Has to Meet—The Needs of the Hour.

Rev. Dr. Jackson and Rev. S. Houston attended the Christian conference in Montreal. At yesterday's session, when "Roman Catholicism" was under discussion, Dr. Jackson said that more was to be feared from the politicians than from the Jesuits. "While there are some honest, honorable politicians, and many more who would wish to be such, party strife is so rife, and the thirst for power so great that the danger to the state is the state itself. Take some of the articles of the political creed and judge by them. The Jesuit doctors—"End justifies the means." Man is bound to follow party, right or wrong: "To the victors belong the spoils." Are we not justified in saying that the ways of party politicians give greater cause of concern than anything else? It is this condition of things which gives significance to the influence of Romanism in relation to the state. This only makes it possible for any ecclesiastical system to cause peril to the liberties of a free people.

"When the best men, irrespective of creed or party, are appointed to all offices of trust; when Romanism, or any other ism, shall no longer wield a controlling political power, because it holds the balance of power at Ottawa, or in provincial legislatures, then, and only then, shall there be equality and security. Who are to lead in the moral crusade against the political tyranny of the nine- [illegible] of the "Order of Jesus," but who, if not the followers of Jesus? We should put away the separate school system. It the British rights of complete civil and religious liberty are threatened under cover of traditional rights or of traditional privileges, these so called rights and privileges must be adjusted to the age in which we live. This has been done in Catholic countries and may be done here."

The Witness has a sketch of Dr. Jackson. He was born at Brome, in the Eastern Townships, is 1838, and graduated at the Congregational college and at McGill university, being transferred from Toronto when the former institution was removed to Montreal. He was ordained in 1866, his first pastoral charge being at St. Paul's Union church, Cote St. Paul. In 1871 he was called to the ministerial oversight of Zion Congregational church, Toronto, where he accomplished a most successful work until the year 1877 when he removed to Kingston, Ont., his present charge. His grandfather was one of the earliest exponents of Congregationalism in the Eastern Townships, having graduated at Dartmouth college, New Hampshire, in 1811, and having subsequently come into Canada was the only representative of the Congregational body in the eastern part of the dominion for many years. In the year of his ordination Mr. Jackson was married to Miss Parker, daughter of William Parker, Montreal.

THE FEAST OF DAYS.

Everything in Slick Shape to Receive the Great Crowds This Evening.

"As busy as nailers." This was what a lady, with a mouthful of pins, said to the WHIG reporter when he wandered into the city hall this morning, and asked how the ladies of Sydenham street church were progressing towards the "Feast of Days," set for this afternoon and to-morrow. There was a flutter of millinery and a skipping about of maidens that showed that something stirring was on hand. About the hall were ranged seven booths elaborately decorated. All the ingenuity and skilfullness of womankind had been used in devising draperies and designs. The booths were designated by days, the word being spelled out in most fantastic forms. The arrangements were certainly novel and pleasing. In each booth were found casefuls of novelties suitable for the day, and which will be sold while the bazaar is in progress. The booths were in charge of the following ladies:

Sunday, flower day—Miss May Ford.

Monday, washing day—Mrs. J. Gowdy.

Tuesday, ironing day—Mrs. W. McRossie.

Wednesday, mending day—Mrs. J. W. Sparling.

Thursday, reception day—Mrs. E. Adams.

Friday, sweeping day—Mrs. B. Bailey.

Saturday, cooking day—Mrs. R. M. Ford and Mrs. James Richardson.

In every booth there were many other ladies who waited with diligence and gracefulness. The ladies of the church, with great unanimity, have entered the work and indications point to a most successful affair. Refreshments and tea will be served on both evenings. To-night the 14th P.W.O. Rifles band will be in attendance.

THE CORNWALL CANAL.

The Break Being Repaired—The Loss and Inconveniences to Shippers Great.

MONTREAL, Oct. 25.—The repairs on the Cornwall canal break appear to be progressing satisfactorily. The whole work will be complete on Nov. 1st as it will have to be tested and only eight instead of nine feet of water can be let in, and the test will take till the close of navigation. To supply this eight feet the water turning the Cornwall mills will, according to the canal superintendent, have to be stopped. Among forwarders opinions are as yet divided on the question of loss by the break. A good deal of grain has been brought through by rail, notably by the Montreal transportation company which had brought in about 100,000 bushels up to yesterday. Messrs. W. W. Ogilvie & Co. have also brought down considerable quantities of corn, but not more than enough to keep themselves running for city demand.

The president of the Montreal transportation company yesterday said that, so far as they were concerned, the unfortunate whole matter "was being tided over much better than he anticipated, and provided the repairs were completed at the date stated, they would have no great reason to grumble."

Mr. Stewart, of the Kingston and Montreal transportation company, on the other hand, said the loss under any circumstances must be very large.

The steamship men feel it apparently more severely than they at first expected; more than one line has had to leave port in ballast, and all admit that their loss through the non-arrival of grain will altogether be serious.

Concert at Portamouth.

The concert given by the choir of the Methodist church at Portamouth, on Tuesday evening, was well patronized. Rev. W. Sparling, B. A., occupied the chair, and Miss Mooney presided at the organ. The programme was first-class in every respect. The first item, a solo by Miss Fralick, "Shall We Meet Again," was highly appreciated by the audience. Duets were beautifully rendered by Miss Mabel Mooney and Miss Laura Baiden; the Misses Convery and by the Misses Mooney. Miss Bella Mooney, Miss Mabel Mooney, and Mr. J. McLeod gave a selection with delightful effect. Readings and recitations were contributed by Miss Allen, Miss H. L. Chown, and Misses Givens and Wood. The choruses by the choir were remarkably fine, and reflected the brightest credit upon the members and leaders. We have seldom heard better.

It is understood that the Napanee & Tamworth RR. company will accept the Yarker-Harrowsmith connection, and the bonus of $75,000. The road cannot reach the city by an independent line and the cost would be too great to build through Wilton, Odessa and Westbrooke.

Milk Inspector Rollins last week detected two patrons of the Albert factory in Tyendinaga sending skimmed milk, one at Union, below Napanee, and one at Duff's, north of Kingston. They admitted the corn and paid the costs rather than fight a suit at court.

It is extremely interesting to visit some of the leading manufacturing houses in Toronto. Perhaps the most interesting and surprising of them all are the extensive ornamental stained glass and decorative works of the McCausland & Son. It is from this establishment that the finest windows have come for the principal edifices throughout our country.

The friends of Miss Kenny and Caleb Smith, whose bodies were stolen from the Pine Grove vault, are still searching for the remains. The police officers make daily searches of the medical colleges. Both bodies were stolen from the vault in a nude state, the handsome coffins and grave clothes being left. The distressed families will willingly pay big figures to recover their loved ones.

"COLLEGE JOURNAL" STAFF.

The Paper Will Be Made to Boom This Year by All Means.

A fine staff has been secured to conduct the Queen's university Journal this year. The gentlemen are all enthusiastic and promise to make it a creditable paper, and one that will reflect university life in all its phases. There are to be several changes in that line of improvement. The staff is composed of:

Editor-in-Chief—C. J. Cameron, A.M.

Managing Editor—H. A. Lavell, B.A.

Associate Editors—A. G. Hay, W. J. Patterson, B.A., J. Binnie, J. J. Wright, B.A.

Secretary-Treasurer—T. H. Farrell.

Contributors—D. Strachan, J. Muirhead, E. S. Griffin, A. Bethune, M. Carmichael, J. Findlay, M.A., J. Sharpe, A. Gandier, O. L. Kilborne, B.A., J. McPhail.

A Complaint From Clarendon.

PLEVNA, Oct. 25.—(To the Editor):—The disreputable state of the bridge which spans the Buckshot creek at Frontenac street I should like to impress upon the council of the township of Clarendon. There are no two opinions as to the disgrace, unsightliness and danger of the bridge, constructed after the manner of a corduroy crossing, and yet very little trouble might remedy the evil. It would be impertinent to suggest to a learned council how this could be accomplished, but an idea of its practicability came to me. About a month ago, a well respected and hard working settler here asked his friends to come to a logging bee on his farm. Thirty men and eight teams were there early in the day. They worked hard and managed by sundown to have logged up four acres and plowed two; it was a good day's work, and had the help been hired it would have amounted to nearly $50. Don't you think, that if the intention of rebuilding the bridge, utilizing the same means, were given out, that the neighbours would come forward to accomplish an undertaking of benefit to everybody in the vicinity? Yours,
