The Umpire

At this season of the year is the "biggest" man in the country. He stands behind the catcher arrayed in a little "brief authority," a few clothes on his manly form and a Rat-Trap arrangement on his head—the latter arrangement is to catch the "Rats" that he has hurled at him from the grand stand. He decides the different plays, always beats the home team and is the only man at a ball game who couldn't do better. He is a man of rank—at least the side that gets beaten always lay it to his "rank decisions." Umpires "sometimes" give wrong decisions—when they're not looking. They all agree, however, that

A CANADIAN EDITOR SPEAKS.

An Address by Rev. A. C. Courtice at the Pan-American Congress.

TORONTO, July 22. — Three excellent papers, read by men of considerable reputation in the world of journalism, composed the intellectual bill of fare at this morning's session of the pan-American congress. The meeting was presided over by Rev. Prof. Clarke, of Trinity university, who introduced the speakers. Rev. Dr. Edwards, editor of the North-Western Advocate, of Chicago, who read a paper on "Reforming Printers' Ink." Rev. A. C. Courtice, editor of the Christian Guardian, spoke on the "Subjective and Objective Methods of Reform." His remarks were largely taken up with considering the question of state interference. He considered this from three points of view: Complete, partial and municipalizing of public franchise. He spoke very strongly on the movement communism or complete interference on the part of the state. He held that already we were over-governed, as well as badly governed, and it was opposed to all hope for reform that further power should be given. He held that the most efficient methods of progress were trades unions, arbitration and industrial corporations. He spoke of the great changes which had recently taken place in England in consequence of the spreading of education. The supreme need of the countries of this continent was not armies, or money, but better citizens.

Testing the Defender.

NEW YORK, July 22.—The yachts Defender and Vigilant had another race to-day, off Sandy Hook. The wind was from the southwest and blowing about eight miles an hour. The boats got away shortly before 11:30 o'clock. The wind, about one o'clock, died away and the water became very smooth. The Vigilant, somewhat behind, ran up by the Defender, but could not hold the position. At 1:37 p.m. it looked as if the Vigilant was ahead but another report at 2:15 says the Defender seems to hold her breeze and is increasing her lead. The Vigilant seems to be becalmed; the wind was very light.

At Seabright, at 3:12 o'clock, the Defender passed a mile and a half off leading the Vigilant by five minutes and fifty seconds.

More Watches Recovered.

Three more of the watches stolen from the establishment of the Goldsmith stock company were recovered by the police and sent to Toronto. All the watches have been recovered but one open faced. It is held by a young man who cannot be found at present.

The chief of police received a letter, to-day, from W. Barr, manager for the Goldsmith stock company, in reference to the robbery of watches from the establishment. The chief said the officers under him are getting all the watches they can find belonging to the company and forwarding them to Toronto. When the case is ready for investigation the chief says there will be some startling particulars.

THE OLD WAYS ARE EASIEST

REV. M. MACGILLIVRAY'S SERMON IN CHALMERS' CHURCH.

The Intriguing of the Priests Was Manifest in the Manitoba School Matter—Separate Schools Are a Shadow of the Dark Ages—How Liberalism is Stifled.

At the morning service in Chalmers' church, yesterday, Rev. Malcolm Macgillivray preached a vigorous sermon in which he referred to the Manitoba school question. His text was Exodus xxxii., 7, 8: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Go get thee down; for thy people which thou broughtest out of the land of Egypt have corrupted themselves, they have turned aside quickly out of the way which I commanded them."

His passages about the Manitoba school question were: Why did they turn aside so quickly from the right way? There were causes—causes that are as terrible and masterful to-day as then.

The old way was easier. The worship of the idol was easier than the spiritual worship of the invisible God. They were confronted with very great difficulties—not by any means insurmountable but still very great. Their old habits would return and cast their spell upon them. A man who has never been taught to think for himself, or rely upon himself, is unstable as water, the victim of every passion that strikes him.

(a) Some of the slaves of the nation south of us thirty years ago would say: "Leave us alone; we are content." That very fact damned slavery. Well, with ancient Israel, the old way was easier. That which a man has been doing for thirty, forty, fifty years is that which by preference he will continue to do, and do with the greatest ease, is that which under any stress or difficulty he will turn to most readily, throwing the new method to the winds. So slowly did those pilgrims adopt new methods that they did not adopt them at all. Except the merest handful—except two—they all died in mastering the new lessons, and they were left for their children to learn, as some new lessons are left for ours to learn that we cannot master.

We do not like to be turned out of our accustomed ways, and even when we have made some progress we revert unconsciously to our old way under sudden impulse, or trial, or emotion. The foreigner will drop into his native accent; the convert will fall into the old regenerate ways; the brain cells, as life advances, will not respond readily to new impressions. The old man falls back into the dialect of his youth. The old way is easier, and if it was a bad way how serious a menace it always remains! How supremely important is the right beginning!

(b) In our own country we have had a striking illustration of this recently in the political arena. The old politics of Quebec is the politics of the church, i.e. the politics of the priest. Now and again we have a faint hope they have got beyond that, and that great questions will be considered on their merits—and men on their merits as well. But we are quickly convinced of our mistake. When Quebec has a say in the matter the old way is easier, and we see the priest sticking out all over. There is a school dispute at present in Manitoba; it goes from court to court till it reaches the judicial committee of the privy council. When the truth comes out, we find that the priest, the Romish priest, has been at his old intrigues once more. He appeals to the propaganda at Rome, and beseeches that sacred congregation, as it is called, to influence the Romish Cardinal Vaughan, at London, to influence the privy council to take the Romish view of the Manitoba school case.

You see they know the old way better and they find it easier. "The hands are the hands of Esau, but the voice is the voice of Jacob." That church has been so long accustomed to intrigue that she finds it hard to adopt nineteenth century methods. She drops naturally, when left alone, into her old mediaeval ways. Her ruling passion is still strong.

There may be a few men of that church in Quebec above the church machine in politics, but you don't require the fingers of one hand to count them. The old way is easier; and they keep falling back into it all the time. Hardly a man there survives the first breath of liberalism he draws. The air is too strong for him. The church throws her shield around him and his liberalism dies.

And this is as powerful an argument as I know in favor of the Manitoba school law and against separate schools. Separate schools would be a propaganda for this very intriguing spirit. Separate schools are a shadow of the dark ages! They are a blight on the promising life of our young nation.

And here is an invaluable warning to us to believe in our home mission work. Our increasing population often bring with them other traditions, and principles, and national and racial convictions than ours. For our own safety and for their good, they need just such schools as the public system of Ontario and Manitoba; and such gospel influence as our own church exerts among them in the newly settled portions of our land. They also, like old Israel and the French, will find the old Egyptian ways easier.

We are British here. Our tide of immigration is quite manageable, and our own unpatriotic and financial meanness, and political folly will be to blame, if our institutions are not fitted to build up here a nation endowed with all the best class of the great Anglo-Saxon race, and in sympathy with the best modern thought and methods.

"In his time," the writer proceeds, "J. H., the owner of Chloe, has owned many a good one, but none quite as good as Chloe, beautiful Chloe. In a letter to me Mr. Metcalfe writes: 'She is a most worthy winner. All the race-going public, particularly the ladies, like her.' And Chloe, well named after the goddess of corn, the chaste daughter of Wildmont (son of Egmont) and Blanche, of unknown ancestry, defeated Harry B in the 2:22 trot, taking five seconds off her record. Chloe, it might be stated, made a record of 2:22¼ in 1893. Last year she never had occasion to lower it, but this year she has reduced her mark at one swoop to 2:16¼. May her bin always be full."

The Jessie Bain Hit a Sunken Log Near Murray Hill Park—Fog on the River Delayed the Mail Boats—Orders For New Crafts Received by Davis & Son.

The mail boat was several hours late yesterday afternoon. She was delayed by fog.

The str. Jessie Bain left the dry dock on Saturday. She had a new wheel put on. While leaving the dock at Murray Hill Park, Friday afternoon, she struck the end of a sunken log, breaking two buckets from the wheel. The log had been on the bottom of the river, but in constructing the new dock heavy stones were thrown in and these resting on one end of the log pressed it down and raised the other sufficiently to occasion the trouble.

PAUL JUSTIN'S GREAT DIVE.

One of the Newest Sensations of the Circus World.

To the Barnum & Bailey's show never has the attendance and the overflow been so great as this season. The increased patronage is due to many decided novelties. One of the most interesting is the water carnival with Paul Justin's marvellous high dive. No water show has ever been seen with so many attractive feats, and the crowning act, a head-foremost plunge from a pedestal up under the roof, 85 feet, was enough to create a sensation. How can the intrepid diver, dropping into a pool of water four and a half feet deep, from such a height, escape instant annihilation? Yet he can day after day and night after night, and when stop watches were held on him it was found that he was less than one-fifth of a second under water.

Everyone proclaimed that it would be impossible to take such an exhibition on the road, a cumbersome tank, forty feet across, holding so great a weight of water. Mr. Bailey solved the problem, however, and the water carnival will be here just as given in New York, in addition to the three-ring circus, the two platforms, the hippodrome races, the aerial acts, the exhibition of trained animals in a steel-barred arena, the ethnological congress and its double performance on two stages erected in the menagerie pavilion, the collection of rare beasts, including a herd of twenty-four elephants, the band concert by Carl Clair's famous fifty musicians, assisted by the talented girl cornetist, Jessie Millar, and all the other 1,001 attractions of the big show.

So much was never before included in one exhibition. The entire big show will exhibit at Kingston next Friday.

A GRADUATE KILLED.

A Very Sad Accident at St. Anne's, Que., on Saturday.

Norman Ridout, who graduated from the Royal military college, in June, was accidentally killed, on Saturday, by a G.T.R. train, twenty miles from Montreal.

When Capt. Twining made up a party to do topography work for the dominion government in the province of Quebec, he included Mr. Ridout, a brilliant student in the college and company sergeant-major last year. Mr. Ridout was sent out to survey a district, near St. Anne's, about twenty miles from Montreal. On Saturday at one o'clock he was standing on a G.T.R. track near the village when the train came in sight. Another track being close by he stepped on to it. A train was coming towards him on this track also but he did not hear it on account of the noise made by the one he saw first. He was struck by the train and killed instantly. His body was found in a ditch beside the track and shipped to his widowed mother in Parkdale, Toronto. He was a son of the late D. Ridout, Toronto, and cousin of Mrs. (Dr.) Nielson, of this city.

During his career in the Royal military college he was a great favorite with the cadets. If another commission for service in the imperial army had been granted he would have got it, because he was the next graduate entitled to a commission. He was thoroughly honest and upright in his dealings. He remained with Dr. Neilson up to the time he left in July with the survey party.
