A Wonderful Flower.

J. M. Machar, Sydenham street, is the possessor of a very rare plant. Crowds of citizens, hearing of the beauty of the flower, have visited the residence. The flower is what is called the datura and grows in New Zealand. It has an immense stalk and the flowers are the shape of a trumpet at the big end. They are huge blossoms and on the stalks have appeared eleven of the beauties already. The flower is not only beautiful to look at but gives out a magnificent perfume.

The Figskins.

The Granites will get out at once to play football. There was some talk of the Granites going in the intermediate championship series this year, but by the wise ones this scheme was deemed altogether inadvisable. There is no use of the Granites trying to tackle London for the intermediate, while the boys all feel that the Kingston team has a cinch on the junior championship.

Henry Was Convicted.

David Henry, secured in Kingston after a hot chase, appeared on Monday before magistrate Daly, Napanee, charged with procuring liquor for Charles Pierson, a prohibited person. From the evidence adduced Henry was entirely to blame, as he was apprised of the fact of Pierson being a prohibited party. He was fined $25, and costs $8.25, or the option of getting out of town before Monday and foregoing the fine, or thirty days in jail.

DEFENDED BY THE SENORA.

HER HUSBAND WAS A GREAT MAN, SHE SAID.

The Charge Against Dr. Ryckman now Qualified by an "if"—The senor has a Big Estate but Refused to Bow the Knee to Don Carlos—The Tricks Performed.

Whatever enemies Senor de Ovies may have he has at least one true friend and zealous champion, his pretty and accomplished wife. This lady and gentleman, who have been so much in evidence of late, gave an entertainment in the opera house last night, and Senora de Ovies appeared as the defender of her husband's honor. The senora, it may be mentioned, is a woman of many talents. She can advocate her cause like a Portia; she presides at the piano with taste and skill; she dresses charmingly; she sings delightfully; she recites passably; she is an exponent of Delsarte and an expert in palmistry. She opened the entertainment with a little speech in defence of her husband. "Being a woman of the nineteenth century who loves her husband," she began, "I think I have a right to say a word in defence of my husband. Having lived with him day by day, month by month and year by year, I think no one knows Senor de Ovies better than I do." Referring, evidently, to some statements made by Rev. Dr. Ryckman and printed in yesterday's WHIG, she said that if that gentleman was the minister of the Mountain street church, Montreal, he was the gentleman who would not allow their agent to finish his sentence, but almost slammed the door in his face. He was the minister who refused to allow them the use of his church, and he was the minister who denounced all who believed in phrenology as humbugs. As to whether or not he had paid to go into the Y.M.C.A. room on Sunday night, that was a matter of no importance. Their agent said that he had not paid. Dr. Ryckman's statement, however, is well backed by unimpeachable witnesses and the agent must be mistaken.

She then went on to tell who her husband was. He was the de Ovies of Spain, and the only de Ovies. His father was a colonel of infantry during the late revolution. The senor attended the military college, but broke a plate over the head of a scion of royalty and was forced to leave. He went to join his father, fighting against the reigning royal family, and on his nineteenth birthday was raised to the rank of a captain, the youngest captain in the army of the revolution. He was heir to an estate on which there were seventeen Catholic priests, and which yields an income of $52,000 per annum. All he had to do was to go to a Spanish consul and say, "I am glad my father's head was blown from his shoulders on the battle field, and I am glad to know that in fighting for what I did fight for, I was wrong," and he would be reinstated. As it is, nothing stands between him and his estate but a baby king. And to think that he has to come to Kingston and be judged by a few upstarts—not including the minister among these—who never were outside of their great grandfather's dooryard. "In my estimation," she went on, "the senor has very few faults. But he has some. One is that he does not care one iota for money. Another is that he is too honest. I was sent away from home when there was a law suit, for fear I would tell the truth and spoil the case. Another fault he has is that he will never allow me in the room with him when he is shaving. That shows that he has a bad temper, and a man should be able to control a small thing like a razor." He was one of the most christian men she had ever known—"better than I am," she added, "because I was brought up next door to a Methodist minister." And she went on to explain that this Methodist minister sent for their servant to tap a keg of beer, and when "Billy" returned he complained that the minister hadn't given him a damned drop, not even the drippings that fell from the spigot. Her husband was the master of twenty-seven different languages and had compiled a commercial dictionary of four different languages and was recognized by Yale and Harvard as a master of the English language; yet when he got up to talk on Sunday night she never heard the English language butchered as he butchered it. The psychological surroundings were at fault, and pointing a dainty finger to a part of her tastefully draped anatomy not far from the region of the stomach, she said that she felt it there at the time, in the psychological region. She then related some of the marvellous psychological feats performed by Senor de Ovies. And they were truly marvellous—bringing murderers to justice, blindfolded; saving innocent men from the gallows without ever seeing them or knowing anything of the case, and such like. She then read his full name and title to the audience. If there is anything in a name he has plenty of it. She also declared that the senor had a parchment, now locked for safety in a New York vault, which was an acknowledgment from Ferdinand and Isabella, of Spain, of a contribution by a member of the de Ovies family to a fund for fitting the expedition in which Columbus discovered America. "And yet," she added with a touch of scorn, "this is the man who had to come to the Kingston Y.M.C.A. to advertise himself for dollars and cents."

Senor de Ovies took up the next part of the programme. He undertook to expose the tricks of the spiritualists. He did expose a few simple tricks, such as table-rapping, the writing of messages on slates and the reading, blind-folded, of names written on slips of paper. These tricks have been exposed time and again on almost every stage in Ontario. One trick, by which he was enabled, with his hands tied behind his back, to fasten himself to or release himself from a chair at will, he declared he was under oath to a Chicago firm that dealt in tricks not to reveal. He told many marvellous things he had done by his psychological powers, but gave no demonstrations. A bit of information he did give, however, and that was that nine-tenths of his audience had greater psychological powers than he had, and that the first step towards the development of them was to abstain from the eating of fat pork.

Senora de Ovies announced that she was an expert in the science of palmistry, that is, in portraying character from the lines of the hands. So adept was she in the science that she had become almost a fortune-teller. She had foretold the resignation of Major General Herbert, the appointment of the lieut.-governor of Manitoba and many other important events. She got D. F. Lloyd from the audience to go into the cabinet and stick his hand out between the curtains, and from an examination of his palms she gave a portrayal of his character. Lloyd told a WHIG reporter afterwards that in some of the generalities she was all right, but that in some of the details she was away off.

The senor then gave an exhibition of his gifts as a phrenologist. His subjects were Oscar F. Telgmann and John McIntyre, Q.C. Without touching them—he was blindfolded—he professed to tell their respective ages, the colors of their hair and the fact that one of them was defective in his eyesight.

Prof. McKay contributed some pantomimic recitations which lent variety to the programme.

"She Couldn't Marry Three."

This play is presented by one of the cleverest companies in existence, every one of them being specially selected for their adaptability in portraying the character they represent. The star, Miss Lillian Kennedy, is the brightest ingenu soubrette in America, and in this comedy she has a role which gives full scope to her wonderful versatility.

Enthusiasm In Kingston.

The bulletin boards were never more eagerly watched in Kingston than they were yesterday afternoon over the yacht races. The scenes reminded one of the old-time enthusiasm displayed when Queen's football team was absent on some important match and the scores were gradually coming in. As the Valkyrie held her lead from the start and pulled away from the Defender in the eight mile breeze the people became excited and local yachtsmen declared that this was proof positive that light breezes were what the Englishmen wanted. There were congratulations and even cheering when the final result was flashed over the wires. If England thinks Canadians are not patriotic they should see the Canucks' enthusiasm for the boat floating the union jack.

Death Of Miss Young.

Deceased was a sister of Miss F. E. Young, teacher at the orphans' home.

JAMES TONER WAS KILLED.

THROWN FROM A RIG NEAR INVERARY HILL.

His Skull Was Fractured And Death Occurred This Morning—A Neighbor Accompanying Still Unconscious—Returning From Camp Meeting.

An accident of an unusually sad character occurred last night in the vicinity of Inverary in which James Toner, of Washburn, lost his life. Deceased was of a religious temperament, and early in the evangelistic career of Rev. Mr. Horner became one of his converts. It was while returning from a Hornerite meeting, in company with Robert Knight, a neighbor, that he lost his life. Knight and Toner started together from the meeting in a light cart, driving a somewhat frisky horse. Mrs. Knight and Mrs. Toner had already started for home in a buggy, drawn by a quiet animal.

While descending Perry's hill, on the east side of Inverary, the breeching on the horse driven by Knight and Toner, broke, allowing the cart to strike against the legs of the animal, frightening him and causing him to run away. Near the bottom of the hill the wheels of the cart caught in the wheels of a buggy, proceeding in the same direction, but strange to say, without doing any damage, merely pulling the hind wheels of the buggy around sufficiently to clear itself. On dashed the maddened animal, and when almost clear of the hill the cart swerved to one side, throwing the occupants out.

James Toner alighted on his head on the hard road, crushing in his skull. Knight was badly hurt and it is not yet known whether or not he will survive his injuries.

The injured men were picked up and carried into the house of James Perry and Dr. Freeman, Inverary, summoned, who did his utmost to relieve the sufferings of the wounded, but Mr. Toner died at three o'clock this morning.

The waggon was broken and scattered along the road. Up to noon to-day no trace of the horse could be found.

Deceased was about fifty years of age and a brother of ex-Reeve Wm. Toner, of Pittsburg, and George Toner, Gananoque. He was a hard-working, industrious, quiet man, and had the respect of the entire community wherein he resided for over fifteen years. He carried a life insurance of $2,000 in the order of Canadian Home Circles, No. 209, of this city, and was instrumental in having the Hornerite church erected at Inverary, giving a large donation towards the erection of the edifice. He leaves a wife and five children—four boys and one girl. His remains were removed this morning from Mr. Perry's house to his late home at Washburn.

Mr. Knight's injuries are of too dangerous a character to allow of his removal and he lies at the house of Mr. Perry where he was carried after the accident.

The late Mr. Toner was born in Pittsburg township, and resided there until fifteen years ago. His father, George Toner, sr., was killed somewhat similarly to the son, by falling from a waggon and breaking his spine. He was a conservative. His funeral occurs Thursday afternoon at two o'clock.

TENDERED A RECEPTION.

An Interesting Time in the First Congregational Church.

Under the direction of the ladies' aid of the First Congregational church, a reception was given to the Rev. A. W. Richardson, Congregational hall, last evening. Rev. Mr. Bamforth in the chair, called upon the Rev. Mr. Houston, senior member of the Kingston ministerial association, to open the meeting with prayer. Revs. Mackie, Laing, Starr, Houston and Shore welcomed Mr. Richardson and hoped he would carry on the good work done by Rev. Dr. Jackson. They congratulated the church and congregation on their choice. Rev. Mr. Richardson in replying, thanked his ministerial brethren for the kind words of greeting and expressed the hope that the members of the church and congregation would work with him in the "spirit of unity."

Interspersed between the addresses were a duet by Messrs. Ellis and Driver; quartette by Misses Savage and Gibson and Messrs. Ellis and Cook; instrumental solo, Mrs. Driver; solo, Miss Gibson, and recitations by Miss Edith Carmichael and Miss C. Bailey.

During an intermission, in which Mr. Richardson was introduced to his people, light refreshments were served. Before dismissing the meeting Rev. Mr. Bamforth thanked the members of church and congregation for their kindness to him during his short term as pastor pro tem.

MARRIED AT ST. THOMAS.

Miss McAdam and W. F. Nickle United This Morning.

A fashionable wedding took place this morning at St. Thomas, when W. F. Nickle, B.A., of this city, was married to Miss Agnes McAdam, eldest daughter of Joseph McAdam, of St. Thomas. The ceremony was performed at Woodside, the residence of the bride's father, at 11:30 o'clock this morning, Rev. J. A. McDonald officiating. The bridesmaids were Miss Lake, Miss Mann and Miss McAdam, the first two being cousins and the last a sister of the bride. Arthur B. Cunningham, B.A., of this city, discharged the duties of groomsman. The guests from Kingston were Mr. Nickle's immediate relatives and Mrs. George Richardson and daughter, the bride being a niece of Mrs. Richardson.

Would Not Grant Leave.

A special meeting of the water works committee was held this morning in reference to the raising of the Rousseau pipe. This pipe is now about all up. The last length was found to be imbedded underneath the city water pipe, and it was proposed to hitch a tug to it and drag it out. The committee feared that this could not be done without damage to the city pipe and refused to grant permission. The committee decided that it would be necessary to make an excavation under the imbedded length of the Rousseau pipe, sufficient to permit of its ready removal. It was decided to employ a diver to oversee the work. The diver will also be asked to make an inspection of the entire length of the city pipe.

They Wore The Bloomer Costume.

There are at least two local lady bicyclists who prefer the bloomer costume to the burdensome skirts when wheeling, but have not the courage to appear on the city streets clad in the "new woman" garb. However, on a recent Sunday the two ladies in question set out to ride to Napanee. At the house of a friend residing in the suburbs they discarded their skirts and rode forth in all the glory of their picturesque costumes. They visited Napanee, and on the return home donned their skirts and rode into the city in triumph. The thin edge of the wedge of dress reform has been entered and it is only a matter of time ere bloomers will bloom on the streets of this city as they do on those of larger places.

Witnessed Yesterday's Race.

George Osborne arrived back from New York at noon to-day. He witnessed yesterday's yacht race from the deck of an excursion steamer and says that it is not possible for the New York yacht committee to entertain the protest entered by the Defender. The Valkyrie was not to blame for the accident. It was purely and simply an accident, very well understood by yachtsmen. The Valkyrie out-pointed the Defender and sailed a good race. There was great excitement over the race.

At The City Hall.

There was a full house at the city hall last night to see the production of "An Irish Hero" by the Marks Bros. The company did a very good business last week, but it looks as if they were going to do even better this week. Tom Marks, as the "Irish Hero," and Myra Collins, as "Chick," were the strong features of the performance and the rest of the company were uniformly good. The piece to-night is "Driven From Ireland."

The Big Meet.

A letter received states that Bridgen, Gratz and McColl will be here on the 18th instant to compete in the races. Orman, the Yankee flyer, with associate riders, will also take part in the contests. The interest in this meet is increasing daily, and everything indicates that the affair will be a grand success. The track will be put in splendid condition, so that fast riders will be satisfied and leave the city with a desire to return.

WEALTH AWAITS M'CROBIE.

A STORRINGTON FARM HAND IS THE LUCKY PERSON.

Chief Horsey Gets a Letter and Locates the Desired Heir—McCrobie Said It Is His Uncle Who Has Left Him a Large Estate.

We often hear of runaways and castaways falling into wealth, but we very seldom find the lucky (or unlucky as the case may be) man right in our very midst. Such is the case, however.

A few days ago chief Horsey received a letter from a prominent law firm in Yorkshire, Eng., enquiring for one John McCrobie. The communication stated that it would be to McCrobie's interest to communicate with them at once, as he was interested in the disposal of a large estate. It was ascertained that a man of that name had worked for two years for C. H. Clark, who has the contract of sprinkling the streets. Mr. Clark was able to trace McCrobie up, and taking a rig drove out to Storrington township where the latter was engaged with a farmer. McCrobie was not very much surprised to hear of his good fortune, for, as he explained to the WHIG last night, he knew a fortune would be his sooner or later.

McCrobie is the eldest son of a very rich family in England. He has a brother and sister younger than himself. About twenty years ago, and he is now about thirty-five years of age, McCrobie left his comfortable home to come to America. It was a case of a wild youth starting out on a wild-goose chase, leaving everything man could desire behind to go and look for something on green hills far away—success in a strange country. However, he got away from home, and as the years rolled on and he became possessed of better judgment and sounder sense, his conscience pricked him so that he had not the courage to face his father and mother again. Gradually he got to writing home and a few years ago found out that his father had died. How his property was divided John could not ascertain. However, McCrobie had a very rich uncle, and he, the wandering runaway, was this uncle's favorite. John thought that some day he would be remembered by this uncle and when told of the enquiries being made for him was ready to proceed in his own interests. The uncle was not as much taken with the other brother and sister, and being an old bachelor it is thought that McCrobie will get the entire estate.

Before leaving England McCrobie knew of his uncle's estate consisting of ten large farms and fifteen or twenty houses in a fine situation. The uncle was also a runaway in his young days and McCrobie thinks that this is one reason why he was so attached to him. Since leaving England McCrobie has worked in and around Kingston pretty much. He is a medium built man of nice English accent and of a very gentlemanly demeanor. He will take steps towards looking after his own interests at once.

WILL REPLY TO DR. GRANT.

Separate School Board and Archbishop Cleary in Perfect Accord.

A meeting of the separate school board was held last night. The work was largely routine.

A communication was read from the minister of education, asking the opinion of the board with reference to some proposed changes in the truancy act. The secretary was instructed to forward the board's opinion.

Principal Grant's recent letter from Manitoba on the school question came up for consideration. In that letter it was implied that Archbishop Cleary and the board were not a unit in the matter of the removal of the Christian brothers. The board holds that in this Principal Grant was wrong, and a committee was appointed to draft a reply setting forth that his grace and the board were always in perfect accord on the matter and that no pressure was required from the board whatever.

THE PUREST OF ALL WATERS.

The Celebrated Mount Clemens' Spradel Mineral Water.

On account of the bad state of the water at present in Toronto, those that can afford to buy water are doing so. They all seem to agree that the celebrated Mt. Clemens' Spradel Mineral Water is the one to order. Every bottle is put up at the spring, and leading physicians acknowledge it to be the most healthful mineral water sold on the continent. It is put up in cases of fifty quart bottles, and Wm. Mara, 78 Yonge street, Toronto, is now selling about fifty cases per day.

The Tennis Tournament.

Eclipsed By His Son.

James Bute, sr., will be very sorry that he took a trip to New York when he learns that his esteemed son has caught a mammoth 'longe. The other day Mr. Bute told a reporter that he had caught every kind of fish that sweeps Canadian waters save a maskinonge and though he had wooed the gamey fish at all hours and all seasons yet it had never been his fortune to secure a prize.

A Terrible Accident.

It was a daughter of Herry Johnston, who lives near Atkinson post office, Pittsburg township, who was injured by a mowing machine on Saturday. She was hiding in the grain when the father came upon her unnoticed and before he saw her the knives of the machine struck her, cutting one leg in two twice below the knee and the other nearly off. Dr. Emery, Gananoque, was sent for and dressed the limbs.
