SALES, MEETINGS, AMUSEMENTS, &c.

SALE of Fancy Goods at the Store next to Mr. John Crifford's, King Street, this evening at 7 o'clock.

COUNTY COURT and General Sessions at the Court House to-day at noon.

There is very little doing in Parliament, in spite of the many Bills before the House of Assembly. We mean nothing of any account. The Common School Act will be amended, but the amendments are not so numerous as was first intended. The School Boards will still have control of the amounts of the Teachers' Salaries, and pay them little or much as they please. The House continues to have great confidence in Sandfield Macdonald's Ministry, although upon some questions, he does not always carry it his own way. The granting of $2,000,000 for Drainage Purposes to the Public Works Department, is not only a good measure in itself, but shows the feeling we allude to.

It was hinted at by a Toronto Contemporary, that the Dominion Government was conquering with Mr. Blake about the vacant Chancellor-ship. We know not what grounds there may be for this insinuation, but we hope there are none. Whatever influence the talks the young men may be in the House of Commons, as well as in the House of Assembly, yet the principle of promoting a simple, to get rid of them is a bad practice, hitherto too much practised in Canada. Mr. Blake is quite too young to be made a Judge. He is said to be very clever, but this we are inclined to doubt, for really clever men are never talkative. He is the son of a comparatively young man, certainly not an old man, who after a few years' service, has retired upon a Judge's pension, unless the late Chief Justice Robinson, who may be said to have died in harness. There must be a great many clever men at the Chancery Bar, to whom the preferment is justly due, and we earnestly hope that the Telegraph was in error in making the allusion. Vice-Chancellor Spragge should take the Chancellorship, and Mr. Strong, or some man like him, fill the vacancy. This would be doing right; whereas, appointing Mr. Blake would be doing wrong.

County Court and General Sessions.

These Courts opened yesterday afternoon before Judge Burrowes. Thos. Wilson, J. P., and R. Sellars, J. P., associates. There was a very slim attendance of the gentlemen of the long robe at the opening of the Court, which may be accounted for by the small number of cases on the civil docket—there being only eight. This is really in extraordinary circumstance, but, nevertheless, it tells well for the prosperity of the County. The small number of cases at this Court however, may be attributed to the fact that, by a recent legislative provision, County Court cases may be tried at the Assizes; and at the last Assizes the majority of County Court cases then pending was disposed of at that time. There are six cases on the criminal docket, viz: Charles Smith, robbery; James McGuire, assault; John Turcotte, shooting with intent; and Wm. Barr, nuisance. The names of the Grand Jurors having been called, and a sufficient number answering their names, they were duly sworn by the Clerk, and chose Alex. Cowan, Esq., for their foreman.

His Honor then charged the Grand Jury in the usual way, explaining the nature of the different cases which would be brought before them for their consideration, and congratulated them and the County on the lightness of the calendar. The panel of the Petit Jurors was then called. There was a goodly attendance of both Grand and Petit Jurors.

The first business transacted was the reading of the naturalization papers of Julius Goldfreidson and John Dickson, aliens. And the usual order was made by the Court.

There are six cases on the appeal docket, but in the majority of them it seems the convicting justice has not returned the convictions.

BYSON, Appellant; GAGUN, Respondent.—Appeal against a conviction for an assault. Conviction confirmed with costs. J. McIntyre, for Appellant. A couple of undefended civil cases were then taken, and the Court adjourned at one o'clock for an hour.

We will continue our report of the proceedings to-morrow.

KINGSTON AND PHILLIPSVILLE ROAD.—Yesterday the annual sale of the gates of this road, now under the management of the corporation, came off at McNeil's Tavern, Pittsburg. A deputation of the Committee on Streets and Improvements, which has supervision of the road, left the city, with some of their friends, to attend it.

Band of Hope Festival.

A Band of Hope Festival took place on Friday evening in a large room at the Grand Trunk Depot, kindly loaned by Mr. Beaufort. The attendance was very large. Mr. R. M. Rose was called to the chair at 8 o'clock. Several pieces were played and sung by the Band. Mr. Lavery of the Express Co., added much pleasure to the audience by the recital of a piece entitled "The Drunkard." An interesting occurrence of the evening was a dialogue by four young ladies and two lads, (Dont marry a Drunkard.) Mrs. Campbell and several ladies and gentlemen interested themselves in supplying the audience with abundance of tea cakes and buns. The children were remarkably orderly and well behaved. Addresses were delivered by Mr. Rose, Mr. W. P. Lacey, Mr. Neilson and Mr. J. C. Wilson. Mr. Neilson in the course of his remarks took occasion to return thanks to Mrs. Campbell and other ladies who so kindly take such a deep interest in the children of the Depot. May this Band which is only in its infancy continue to go on and prosper and may it be as a light in a dark place.

Dr. Ryerson and the Common Schools.

The following is a letter from a correspondent of the Lindsay Post, and it affords us pleasure to give publicity to a case which, in a marked manner, illustrates the impartial management—as between Protestants and Catholics—which characterizes the Educational Bureau of this country:—

In a certain school in the county of Victoria, the master is a Roman Catholic, and about one half the children Roman Catholics, and the majority of the Trustees the same; a catechism of the History of England was used as a school book, to which some took objection. The author of the catechism has not given his name. The publisher is Adam Miller, 52 King street, East—Toronto. The catechism had seen its seventh edition in the year 1864.

At page 43, chap. XXXII, under the head "The Reformation" occurs the following question and answer:—

Q.—"What is meant by the Reformation?"

A.—"By the Reformation is meant the reforming of the Christian religion from the errors of Popery, and reducing it nearer to its primitive purity."

A copy of this history was sent to the Department, and attention directed to the objectionable passages, when the following decision was immediately given by Dr. Ryerson:—"I have received the catechism of which you complain. It is not authorized to be used in the schools. I never saw it before. It is very objectionable in the matters to which you refer, and very likely in other matters. I will thank you to show this letter or a copy of it, to the Trustees of the school in which the catechism in question is used, and inform them that if the use of it is continued they shall forfeit their share of the school fund, and become personally responsible to the ratepayers of the school division for the amount of it, on the complaint of any individual ratepayer."

I think it may do good to publish this decision, so that Roman Catholic parents may know what their rights are in matters of this kind in the common schools of Ontario. Test no history or other book containing matter offensive to the religion of subscribers to be used; that masters have no right to introduce such books; and that Trustees allowing these use become personally responsible to the ratepayers for an amount of Government grant withheld. A common school, in which such books are used is not recognized, has no existence in the eyes of the law, and the gentlemen at the head of the department do not outline themselves to a bare condemnation of such books, but go farther and indeed to the penalty and the means of redress. I think I can safely challenge the Educational Department of Quebec, with its well and widely known love of justice and even indulgence to the minority of that Province, to show on its records anything more just; more liberal or prompted by a high-toned manly sense of fairness, or showing a more honest and honorable love of fair play.

Dr. Briggs took of every substance known,
That ever healed, or stilled a groan,
And soon compiled by skill alone,
His own matchless Curative.

The people said, at last was found
A cure for every sore or wound;
They have used it, and were whole and sound;
And all their pain has left them.

Afflicted with corns, bunions, or bruise,
Thousands of sufferers heard the news,
The thing was found that met their views,
They bought and used the Curative.

No sooner was the sore part dressed,
The pain was stayed that spoiled their rest;
With tears of gratitude they blest
The man who made the Curative.

All signs of soreness soon went by,
Whether in hand, or foot, or eye,
Let every suffer this industry

Dinner to Lieut.-Col. Shaw.

On Monday evening the Public Dinner to Lieut.-Col. Shaw, on the occasion of his departure from the city on an Emigration mission to Scotland, came off at the British American Hotel, and was attended by about sixty gentlemen. There were no flaming announcements beforehand, no pushing of tickets, and those who attended did so out of sincere compliment to a worthy and popular officer and gentleman. The Mayor, Wm. Robinson, Esqr. presided, and thus gave expression to the public appreciation of Lieut.-Col. Shaw's past services. Lieut.-Col. Hamilton, 47th Vol. Batt., filled the vice chair. The guest of the evening sat at the Chairman's right hand, and Lieut.-Col. Macpherson, A.A.G., on his left. Many officers of the garrison attended, and that there exists a remarkable unanimity of feeling among the Volunteer officers of the city, as to the fair character of Lt.-Col. Shaw's past services and career, was evinced by the very large gathering of all grades of this still infant service. Not a prominent Volunteer officer of the city was absent. There were citizens present, to bear proof of Col. Shaw's estimable character as a citizen; and many gentlemen of the township of Pittsburg, which Col. Shaw has made his habitation for some years, to testify to his value as a neighbor.

The dinner, which embraced a capital bill of fare, was served up in Capt. Swaley' best style, which speaks volumes, and was heartily relished. After the courses were put out of sight, and the decanters began to circulate around the board, the Chairman opened the regular toasts with the toast nearest and dearest to all hearts—

THE QUEEN—God bless her—which was right royally drunk, and still more heartily honored with three times three.

Then followed—

THE ROYAL FAMILY,

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOV.-GENERAL. (for he's a jolly good fellow.)

To the toast of THE ARMY AND NAVY, right heartily drunk, and cheered, (as you like them,) Major White responded, and acknowledged the compliment handsomely. If any incentive was required in his arm of the service to loyalty and devotion, it was to be found, he felt assured, in the kindly feeling of their civilian friends and Volunteers.

Capt. Donovan, in response to very numerous calls, also replied to the toast on the strength of his connection with the victorious Vanguard, and returned thanks "for the extreme kindness they had done the Navy."

The chairman, then apologized for taking the liberty of breaking through the regular toasts to present a public address to Lt.-Col. Shaw, which after it was read, met with rapturous echo in the applause of the company.

Col. Shaw made a long written response which we had anticipated present with this report.

The order was still further interrupted to propose the health of

OUR GUEST, which the Mayor prefaced with some feeling remarks. He had known Col. Shaw 34 years ago, and found him to-day the same genial, sociable acquaintance he was then; in prosperity and adversity, always the same stalling friend. After reviewing Col. Shaw's early identity and subsequent valuable connection with the volunteer force, the Chairman felt that it was unfortunate for the Volunteers of Canada, and this district especially, that he was being called away. But what w[illegible] be a loss to the Volunteers will be again to the Emigration movement, for he felt assured that we would soon experience the good fruits of his mission. We can furnish, judging by the public works and improvements going on over the country, lots of work for the willing class, and the Kingston and Madoc Railroad not less than other projects.

The toast was received, with three times three, and Col. Shaw responded. He felt that for the hearty enthusiasm with which his name had been greeted he was greatly their debtor; he knew no expression which could convey his appreciation of the compliment. Reference had been made to his connection with the Volunteers. Since his first introduction to the force in 1855 he had seen a great deal of volunteering and had no degree much hard work in connection with it; and it was a gratification that no man had it now in his power to say that he had exceeded his duty, or had not done it as ably as he could. Circumstances at times had made his duties a course of intricacies, very difficult to perform, while the manner in which he performed them could not well suit all parties. But, their presence that evening, to drink a parting glass with him, assured him that all differences were abandoned, and nought but good will prevailed. He had found in the Volunteer officers friends and gentlemen in every sense; and he regretted very much parting with them, if only for a time, though accompanied with the pleasant reflection that they parted on cordial terms. In regard to the Force generally, he prided it on its efficiency and standings it was not surpassed by any Volunteer organization whatever. With all due deference and respect to the Regulars, to which the force is so much indebted, should the time come it would hold its own in Canada, in the endeavor to maintain British supremacy. But they would always feel it a pride to be associated with the Regulars, and it would be a lasting regret when they were called away. As to disloyalty, when he went home, he would tell them there that Annexation feeling was all up in Canada; that she was loyal to the core, and would never pull down Britain's flag to raise an inferior one. (Great cheers). With regard to personal matters he felt somewhat difficult. He could never repay the present honor; it was the highest and pleasantest episode of his life. Wherever he went he would remember this kindness, with feelings more truly felt than described. In his public office he would strive to the utmost to maintain the honor and importance of our New Dominion, and not less her noble Volunteer force. (Applause).

Lt.-Col. Hamilton then gave THE MAYOR AND CORPORATION, prefacing the toast with a substantial acknowledgment of the praiseworthy management of city affairs, whereby debt was reduced, and a dawn of brighter days in store opened to our view, through new enterprise and energy. The toast was one in which they could all do honor to themselves. Drunk with enthusiasm.

The Mayor, in acknowledging, referred modestly to the heavy efforts the Council had made to reduce debt, and still later to force the expensive and increase the prosperity of the city. For the volunteers he felt that the Corporation could not do too much.

In response to overpowering calls, Mr. Ald. Tossklin rose to respond, addressing himself with commendable respect to the chairman and the various arms of the service represented in independent order. He felt his incompetency to do justice to the toast, more especially as he did not come prepared to speak. But he felt most grateful at his friendly reception, and the next time he appeared at a public dinner would be prepared to say more. For the present he would say "Good-night." (Cries, Oh no, Oh no.) We regret that the misplacing of our reporter's notes has prevented our putting on record the most valuable portion of the worthy alderman's happy effort.

The Vice-Chairman then, in felicitous terms, proposed the health of THE PRESS, saying much that was true, and some that might be construed into flattery of the Fourth Estate. After the toast had been drunk with spirit, it was responded to by Dr. Neish and Mr. Pease, followed by Mr. Walkem, for the Globe, and Capt. Drummond, for himself!

The Mayor called for the health of Lt.-Col. Macpherson, A.A.G., and referred to the popularity of that officer, which had followed the short acquaintance we in Kingston have had with him.

Lt.-Col. Macpherson responded. He said in regard to the Mayor's compliments that he had found his duties rendered very pleasant by the readiness with which he was assisted by those under his jurisdiction. The Volunteers were never in a better condition than at present, and a finer force than that of this district he had never seen, or had reason to feel prouder of. The guest of the evening, Lt.-Col. Shaw, he had known since his first connection with the militia, and a more zealous and energetic officer could not be found. In his new position he felt that he would do credit to himself and honor to the country.

Col. Shaw in giving the toast to the oldest Volunteer Officer in the district called on Major Drummond of the K. F. B., who responded in his peculiarly pleasing strain.

Col. Shaw then asked permission to give the prosperity of the Township of Pittsburg, his late home, and Mr. D. D. Rogers and Mr. Wilmot responded, expressing the regret they felt in losing such a good neighbor.

Lt.-Col. Hamilton gave THE LADIES, and called all gallantly to their feet. Mr. Smythe, being called on, responded in a very happy speech, which kept the company in roars of laughter while it lasted. We agree, though, with the speaker, that the rule of toasting the ladies is something more honored in the breach than in the observance. It is generally given at a stage of festivity when men are primed for idle jest, and its omission would not detract from the respect and esteem in which woman is sacredly held.

The healths of Lt.-Col. Callaghan, 14th P. W. O. Rifles, and Major Phillips, Brigade Major, each being complimented on his new appointment, were followed by those of Wm. Ferguson, Esq., Sheriff, M. Flanagan, Esq., Lt.-Col. Fowler, and the 47th Vol. Battalion, which were all fitly acknowledged, and the company broke up in good spirit.

Lt.-Col. Shaw leaves this week or next for the scene of his fresh labors, and may we not say, with all the others, "success attend him."

The Pantin Tragedy.

DISCOVERY OF THE REMAINS OF THE ELDER KINCK.

The body of the elder Kinck was found on Nov. 25, near Cernay, in Alsace. The Gaulois gives the following particulars of the discovery:—"The body was discovered in a wood by the side of a ruined château, in the small commune of Herrenfluth, near Wattwiller. The population of the neighborhood would not discontinue their search notwithstanding the want of success, and the departure of the police again sent from Paris by M. Claude. They had given up all hope of finding anything under the trees, and were extending their examination to the brushwood on the skirt of the wood, when they remarked a number of crows, which fled away at their approach. The collection of them was so great on the same point that the attention of the searchers was aroused, and they proceeded toward the spot. Several of those birds remaining on a small heap of stones, fighting for some pieces of flesh, and only abandoned their prey at the last moment. There could be no longer any doubt—a corpse was certainly there; in fact, the mangled remains of a human foot were protruding through the stones. In a few moments the earth was cleared away, and a body in an advanced state of decomposition was exposed. 'It is John Kinck!' all the persons exclaimed at the same moment. The examining magistrate of Belfort, who had not quitted the neighborhood, was sent for, and on arriving proceeded to an investigation. No doubt as to the identity of the body was possible, although the features were not recognizable, the knitted stockings being similar to those worn by the children, while the clothing was remembered by all those who had seen Kinck before the crime. The body was moved with great precaution, and placed on a small mound of earth, and a number of men having been appointed to prevent idlers from approaching too near, a medical man was sent for from Guebwiller. The legal identification, and the post mortem examination was fixed for the next day. It appears, adds Galignani, "that M. Souveras, the Police agent on returning to Paris after his unsuccessful search in Alsace, went without delay to Troppmann and informed him of the failure of his exertions. The other declared that he had given correct indications, and that a wrong path must have been followed: He then repeated his former statement, which, it may be remembered, was to this effect:—"He had enticed Kinck into the Haut-Rhin. On leaving the railway station on the Mulhausen line, at about 3 in the afternoon, they entered an inn, and afterward, under the pretext of going to discover a method of fabricating base coin, proceeded towards the forest. Not far from the ruins of the château Herrenfluth, between Cernay and Oberwiller, Kinck felt tired and thirsty. Troppmann, who had provided himself with prussic acid, gave him some in a glass of water, and the other fell dead on the spot." After this statement he again entered into a description of the place where he had buried the body, which, it seems, agrees with the spot where the corpse has now been found.

It is said that one of the vacant English Garters will certainly be offered by Mr. Gladstone to Mr. Disraeli.
