SPECIAL NOTICE.

Messrs Long and Brothers, No. 121 Nassau Street, New York, will publish in the course of a few weeks "THE SLAVE OF THE LAMP," the last production of the late Wm. North, author of "A Ite-Coningsby," and various other novels, which attained great popularity in England. Mr. North was also a frequent and esteemed contributor to the periodical literature of the United States, and presented another sad example of the fate of genius. In many respects there was a similarity—not only in character and temperament, but in genius likewise, —to the late Edgar A. Poe, in Mr North.

A gentleman, who is connected as a literary critic with the Press of New York, and who has read the work in proof sheets, writes—"I have read poor North's book—I never was so fascinated with any work in my life. I opened it after dinner, and the clock struck the hour of midnight before I laid it aside. I have finished its perusal."

Another writes, "For earnestness and intensity, no novel that I have met with equals this. There is a charm in it like that said to be possessed by the rattle snake; you wish to lay it aside, but you cannot—it overpowers you—you must read on—on to the end."

Several others have expressed similar opinions. All say that it is a most extraordinary Romance.

"THE SLAVE OF THE LAMP," will be published about the 1st of April, beautifully bound in Cloth, price $1. 77
