Saved by the Janitor.

NEW YORK, June 16.—A diabolical plot was discovered last night to burn down the tenement house, No. 177 Eldridge street. The janitor, when making his rounds late at night, discovered that the floors had been saturated with kerosene. A large pile of rags, soaked in the same liquid, were found in a closet which contains gas meters, and it is believed they were put there to cause an explosion of gas. The police are investigating. There were seventy-five persons residing in the house, and had the plan of firing the building been successful it is more than likely many lives would have been lost.

She Died in His Office.

MILWAUKEE, June 16.—Dr. Honene was arrested yesterday afternoon. He telephoned to the police to come to his office. When they arrived he was coolly smoking a long stemed pipe while two feet away from him was the dead body of Miss Annie Emblacker. The doctor said she was taken with a fit on entering his office and died. He refused to say anything further except that he did not know her. The girl, it was learned by the police afterward, had been peddling a patent medicine for Dr. Honene.

THE PRIZES IN TEA CANS.

KING STREET COMPANY CHARGED WITH BREAKING THE LAW.

Action Taken in the Police Court—An Unwilling Witness Tells How Game He Was—Buying Many Packages—The Prizes in the Boxes.

On Tuesday R. T. Pickett, a member of the associated tea company doing business on King street, was charged on two counts with having violated the lottery act. Mr. McIntyre, Q.C., appeared for Pickett and claimed that the company had been tried at Ottawa on a number of charges similar to the one preferred here, and the magistrate dismissed the case. The magistrate said that the associated tea company had been found guilty of violating the lottery act in Toronto by a superior court.

Mr. McIntyre asked for an adjournment as he had a great deal of business to do. Mr. Britton said the only trouble was that if the case was enlarged the young people of the city would have their cash depleted. The case would not take long to consider. Mr. McIntyre said the case would be a lengthy one for he would have to produce experts to prove that the tea offered for $1 per can was worth the money. At any rate he was not prepared to go on with the case. The magistrate was anxious to have the case enlarged.

A can of tea was presented and Mr. Britton tasted it and said it was very good. The tea had been purchased by W. B. Follest.

After some discussion the case was proceeded with and Mr. McIntyre took the ground that there was no objection disclosed in the summons. The charge preferred in behalf of G. Davey is that of selling tea containing gold watches, diamond rings and a certain sum of money, being a mode of chance. The statute said a lottery must consist of a sale of a lot, card or ticket. The case under consideration did not come within the meaning of the act.

G. Davey was called and hesitated about kissing the bible until he knew who was going to pay him for his time.

Mr. Britton said he could either kiss the bible or go to the cells. Witness replied: "Do you think I am going to loose my time to come and listen to lawyers talking for several hours."

Davey was induced to kiss the bible, and said that he went into the associated tea company's store and purchased tea, expecting to get a prize in the can. There were rings, watches, chains and other jewellery on exhibition, and he was led to believe there were prizes in the tea cans similar to those on exhibition.

He purchased two cans of tea containing prizes of small value. He was advised to come back again on a lucky day. He went back on the day following and purchased another can of tea and got a pair of brass ear-rings. He was asked to purchase two more cans, and a man told him if there was not a valuable prize in them he would give him a can for nothing. He did not get prizes in either of the two cans. Then the clerk gave him a can for nothing, and it contained a dollar. He spent the money in buying cans. The clerk offered him a row, containing seven cans, for $2.50; and a row, containing nine cans, for $3.50. In either of these rows was supposed to be found a diamond ring, gold watch or $20. Witness took them.

The magistrate and Mr. Britton said witness was game.

In one of the rows witness said there were no prizes. In the other row he got a diamond ring. He kept one can of tea and gave fifteen cans back.

T. J. Donohue, merchant, said he visited the associated tea company's premises and saw a crowd of people drawing prizes. He was told that every can of tea on the shelves contained a prize. Money was supposed to be in some, and gold watches and diamond rings in others. He bought a package for a dollar and drew a worthless prize.

The next time he drew he secured a diamond ring. When he was leaving the store he was invited back. The tea was worth 13c or 14c wholesale. The tea was Young Hyson.

Mr. McIntyre said the tea presented was the same kind as used in first class hotels in the city.

W. B. Follest asked a fat old fellow in the associated tea company's store for Japan tea. He said they had no such tea. Witness spent $1.50 and got a brass stud button and tea worth about 35c.

Officer McCullough said Mr. Pickett was the person in charge of the store. Chief Horsey said R. T. Pickett told him he was going to open a store on King street.

The case was enlarged until Saturday to allow the company to put in a defence.

The Cases Decided.

This morning when the magistrate was ready to hear the charges against Pickett investigated, it was learned that Mr. Britton, representing the crown, was in Napanee. Mr. McIntyre was present on behalf of Pickett, and contended that he had carried on a legitimate business and that he had not violated the lottery act in selling tea as he had done. The counsel was willing to have the cases adjourned if necessary, but he did not think the magistrate need go to that trouble because the firm had given up business.

The magistrate produced Chief Justice Rose's decision respecting the system of selling tea under adjudication. This decision was adverse to the merchants and they had to leave Toronto. A letter from the chief of police of Ottawa, stating that the members of the associated tea company had been fined $20 and costs for advertising the names of people who got prizes in their store. The magistrate contended that, although Mr. McIntyre argued in favor of the business, he could not be in sympathy with it. It was a despicable business, and denounced a fraud by all those who have had anything to do with it. He could not find language strong enough to convey his feelings in reference to the business. He characterized it as a very improper thing, and should not be tolerated. He called Mr. Pickett up and told him he would adjourn two cases for two weeks and would find him guilty on the first charge and fine him $20 and costs. Mr. McIntyre, Q.C., said he would appeal the case.

It Was Capt. Mackie's Body.

The body discovered below Cedar Island on Saturday afternoon turned out to be that of Capt. Thomas Mackie, of the ill-fated schr. Jessie Breck. The current had carried the body about five miles from where the disaster occurred. It is thought that Capt. Mackie was at the tiller when the accident occurred, and that the mit was on his hand so that he could handle the rudder without injury. The remains were conveyed to his late home and were carried yesterday to the grave. The services were conducted according to the A.O.U.W. ritual, many Kingston brethren being in attendance.

A Man in Her Room.

Late on Friday evening last vigorous screaming alarmed people living near the cotton mill. A young girl ran through the neighborhood in great distress and crying there was a man in her room. The landlady, with whom the girl was boarding, searched the premises. In the girl's bedroom, and under her bed, the figure of a man was seen. It was a dummy, dressed in clothes belonging to a boarder. The girl was so alarmed as to be unable to rest at night.

The people flocked to the wharf at 5 a.m., a band was ready to toot and a carriage was on hand to carry the distinguished guest up town. But he did not arrive and the crest fallen crowd hurried home amid great laughter.

Grand Musical Festival.

The management of the Kingston skating and curling association has secured the services of Liberati's great military band, of New York, for two grand performances in the Kingston skating rink, on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday, July 2nd. The celebrated soloists, Helen Pareppa, soprano, and Annie Russell, contralto, will take part in the programme, and the instrumental soloists are Mr. Felix Bour, oboe, and Sig. A. Liberra, cornet, both of whom are world renowned. The band consists of fifty select artists of the highest merit, and is at present making an extended tour through Canada and the United States. The skating rink is capable of accommodating several thousand persons, and it is hoped that Kingstonians will show their appreciation of good music on July 2nd by turning out in large numbers to hear probably the best musical combination that has ever visited the city.

Two Pugilists at Work.

Joseph Comeau was fined guilty at the police court with having assaulted Timothy Kennedy and fined $10 and costs. Kennedy stated that while he was working with his horse on the Military college grounds on Tuesday last Comeau asked him to come and help him draw logs out of the lake. Kennedy refused, and on Wednesday referred to the matter in an angry style. The result of the conversation was that Comeau hit Kennedy in the face and caused blood to flow. Kennedy, in retaliation, ran at Comeau with a shovel, and had he struck him fairly he would have been killed. The magistrate fined Kennedy $20 and costs and intimated that he had got off very easily. If a charge of assault, with felonious intent, had been brought against him he might have been sent to the Central prison.

A DAY OF BRIGHT THINGS.

FLORAL SUNDAY IN QUEEN STREET METHODIST CHURCH.

There Was Plenty of Flowers, Plenty of Music and a Deal of Talk—The People Crowded the Edifice and Enjoyed All the Services.

Floral Sunday, or children's day, in Queen street Methodist church was heartily enjoyed. The day was delightful, just such weather as evidenced brightness and gladness. The church was finely decorated with flowers. The altar and pulpit were almost hid from view by the abundant foliage and the bright flowers as varied as the rainbow. Beautiful bouquets of cut flowers stood in handsome vases both on and about the pulpit and on the window sills. The pillars were entwined with snowballs, peonies and cedar, and the organ front was relieved by drooping lines of flowers and huge patches of green and white. From the centre of the organ alcove suspended a beautiful basket of geraniums with numerous smaller ones gracing the walls. Altogether the scene was as delightful as any one could wish to feast their eyes upon. During the day the church was open and many walked in to see the decorations.

The services were largely attended, in fact there was not an inch of unoccupied room in the evening. The form of service was largely choral, the great audiences singing with a will the happy songs of children. In the morning Rev. Mr. Kines spoke to the children on the desirability of developing their lives in the best way. In the evening Rev. R. Whiting assisted in the exercises. B. M. Britton, Q.C., superintendent of the school, spoke of Sunday school work and of the necessity for co operation and sympathy if it was desired that the school should be up to the times. He dwelt on the wonderful advancement in the work in later years. Mr. Kines addressed the parents, urging them to recommend the religion of Christ to their children by the nobility of their lives. He dwelt on the training of children at some length.

In the afternoon there was an open session of the school. There was plenty of speeches and various charming recitations and solos by little dots. Mr. Britton conducted the service and did it well. Dr. Lavell, who went to Sunday school sixty years ago in the old Bay street church made a fine address urging the young men to stick to the Sabbath school. There was safety in such a course as the records showed. Rev. Mr. Kines, no longer a stranger as a year ago, was happy in his remarks.

The choir was a great force towards making the day one of delight. They led in singing the hymns with great vigor. In the morning the anthem was "Praise the Lord O, My Soul," by Michael Watson, and the voluntary, "Draw Nigh to Me Ye Weary," by Beethoven. Miss Bertha Greenwood taking the solo charmingly. In the evening the anthem was "Holy, Holy Lord Jesus; Thy Blood and Righteousness," by Conocone, Miss Orser doing the solo work with good taste. The voluntary, "How Long Wilt Thou Forget Me," by Pflueger, was rendered in a fine way by a quartette, Misses Hopkirk and Orser, and Messrs. H. Lavell and Liffiton. There will be many happy remembrances of the day, one of the best ever enjoyed by the church people.

THE FLAG INCIDENT.

The Alarming And Ludicious Statement Found in the American Papers.

Mayor Drennan will no doubt be surprised to find the way he is treated, editorially, in the New York Herald. That paper says: "It is high time to annex Canada. The mayor of Kingston, Ont., refused to allow British troops to go aboard an American steamboat because its owner would not haul down the Stars and Stripes."

NOW THIS IS TRAGICAL.

Oswego Palladium: "Capt. Estes said under no circumstances would he haul down the American flag and then he stepped beneath it and wrapped it floats about him. Hence the excitement ran high. Two thousand people gathered on the wharf and discussed the matter."

DID YOU HEAR THE CHEERS?

Watertown Times: "It is said that the Americans who were present when the demand was made by the band master, in accordance with his commander's orders, were not alone in cheering plucky Ben Folger as he made reply. The incident does not promise to lead to any serious international difficulty and the 29th Separate company need not put itself on a war footing."

A CANDID CONFESSION.

Utica Herald: It seems to us the captain and the bandmaster were both right. Stand by your flag, boys, on whichever side of the line you belong.

HONEST, REN, DID YOU SAY THIS?

Cape Vincent report: The "A" battery band was engaged to accompany the excursion, and when they arrived at the dock the bandmaster, with his hat set on three hairs on one side of his head, stepped forward and asked for Mr. B. Folger. That gentleman appeared and the bandmaster said:

"You will have to take down those American flags before we go aboard."

Mr. Folger replied that if he should make such an assertion to the captain of the steamer, the captain would "shoot him on the spot," and that furthermore those flags would remain as they were, and if they did not like it, they could stay ashore, adding that the bandmaster need not be surprised if he should wake up some morning and find that flag floating all over Canada.
