THINGS IN GENERAL.

—They now call retired printers express men.

—The revenue officers who have been examining the affairs of the Collector's office at Louisville report a defalcation of $82,900.

—A Kansas girl says nothing makes her so mad as to have a grasshopper crawl up and down her back just as her lover has come to the proposing point.

—General John McDonald, late Superl visor of Internal Revenue, and Colonel Joyce, late Revenue Agent, and several accomplices, have been indicted at St. Louis for connection with the whiskey frauds.

—Two boys, Ed. Shanks and Charles B. Campbell, escaped from the House of Refuge at Rochester on Tuesday. The former is 17 years old and from Lewis county, and the latter is 14 years old and from Buffalo.

—Copy was out. The devil picked up a paper and said, "Here's something 'About a woman'—must I cut it out?" "No!" thundered the editor; "the first disturbance ever created in the world was occasioned by the devil fooling about a woman."

How to Stop a Paper.

1. Do not take your paper to your postmaster and tell him to send it back. In nine cases out of ten you will fail to stop it in this way.

2. Do not attempt to return it yourself, and write on the wrapper to discontinue. This is against the law, and lays you open to a fine.

3. Before your subscription expires, send to the publisher a postal-card saying your subscription expires on such a date. Please discontinue at that time. Sign your name, also the town and State where your paper is sent, in full.

If the paper has been sent two weeks or more over the time for which it was paid, don't send a postal-card. It will do no good. Rather write a letter and inclose what is due for arrearages, always allowing that one number will be sent before the letter reaches the publisher and his list is corrected.

By observing these simple rules your requests will always be promptly attended to, you will have a clear conscience and sleep well, and the puplisher will never be tempted "to take the name of the Lord thy God in vain."—N. E. Journal of Education.

Anecdote of Sir Walter Scott,

An English archdeacon—John Sinclair—has just published a volume of "Sketches of Old Times," in which he tells this story of the great Scotch novelist. "Before Sir Walter Scott acknowledged himself to be the author of the 'Waverly Novels,' my sister Catharine said to him: 'If you tell me which of these novels you prefer, I shall tell you in return which of them has the preference given it by Edgeworth.' Sir Walter agreed, and she told him that Miss Edgeworth had said: "There is a freshness of originality about the first novel, which, in my opinion, gives it a decided superiority over all the rest." 'Well, Miss Sinclair,' said Sir Walter, 'I, for my part, enjoy the Antiquary more than any other. There are touches of pathos in it which much affected me; and I had many a hearty laugh at the expense of the Antiquary himself.' 'Yes,' rejoined my sister, 'the author of these novels, whoever he may be, is always laughing at somebody, and in the case of the Antiquary, the person he is laughing at is evidently himself.'"

English Literary Ladies.

Mrs. Henry Wood, the popular and prolific novelist, who is perhaps best known by the story and play of "East Lynne," was born in 1820, and in her maiden days bore the name Ellen Price. Her father was a leading manufacturer in Worcester, and her husband is connected with the shipping trade. It is said she has educated her family by her labors with the pen.

Miss Braddon, one of the most sensational as well as successful writers of fiction, is the wife of Maxwell, the publisher of Shoe Lane, and lives near Blackheath on the Thames. Gossips, whose words are to be taken with great caution, say that at one time her imagination became demented through excessive action, and she had to endure enforced retirement for two years.

The lady who wears the nom de plume of 'Holm Lee,' lives in Devonshire, but annually spends a portion of her time on the continent. When past the period of youth, she lost her property by the failure of some banking or mercantile house, and was obliged to resort to the pen for a livelihood.

Rhoda Broughton is the daugnter of a clergyman, and is said to be "nice looking." Yet the gentlemen do not admire her. She has too sharp a tongue: and dares to be peculiar. She is a niece of the late Sheridan Lefanu, author of 'Uncle Silas' and many other striking novels.

Genius is a heritage to the Sheridans. Lady Dufferin, a grand-daughter of Richard Brimsley Sheridan, has produced some meritorious poems. Her son, Lord Dufferin, Governor General of Canada, has added honor to that title by his brilliant writings.

Miss Charlotte Mary Yonge is the daughter of on army officer, and for many years her home has been in Hampshire. She began publishing in 1848, at the age of 26, and has ever since been a most industrious writer. The number of her books, some three volume novels, had several years ago reached 50. She attempts history and geography as well as fiction. She is a very devoted churchwoman.

Julia Kavenagh, although born in Ireland, may be regarded among English authoresses. Her favorite stories, 'Nathalie' and 'Grace Lee,' were popular in America 20 years ago. Her last novel has been severely treated by the critics, who declare it a very weak successor of her early works. She is one year younger than Miss Yonge, having been born in 1824.

THE LETTER "Y."—There is no letter more often cheated out of its rights and put into its wrong place than the letter "y." There are no greater offenders in this respect than the people who are always finding occasion to talk of the "sphynx," instead of the sphinx, and the novelists and story tellers who will write "Sybil" instead of Sibyl. But if the unfortunate letter often appears as "an abomination standing where it ought not," it may also fairly complain of being left out where it has a clear claim to be used. There used to be a rule that in such words as "pony," "amnesty," "injury," "sky," etc., where the final "y" follows a consonant, the plural termination should be "ies;" but that when the singular ended with "ey," as in the word "key" the plural should end with "eys." And yet even in Parliament, the Queen's English is so abused that the Queen herself has signed Acts in which her legislators have talked of "monies," and nothing is commoner than the words "attorneys" "flunkies," and "chimnies." One has even seen such monstrosities as "turkies," "monkeys" and "donkies;" but these are more rare.

LAYING THE CORNER STONE.—The corner stone of the new City Hall at Ottawa was laid yesterday afternoon by Alderman John Heney, Chairman of the Board of Works, assisted by the clerk of the Works, Mr. Thomas Pidgeon, and the foreman of the masons, Mr. William McEvela. The ceremony was a very quiet one.
