CITY AND VICINITY.

THE POOR will be rejoiced to learn that flour advanced twenty five cents on all grades again yesterday; keep the ball rolling, gentlemen, for the higher the price the better the times.

CRICKET.—The return match between the Prescott and Kingston clubs will be played on the ground of the latter here, some day next week. An excursion party will accompany the Prescott players up.

ENLARGED.—The Tribune of Toronto appears this week in an enlarged; eight-page form, in which it cuts a handsome figure. This evidence of its prosperity is pleasing to the admirers of the temperately conducted and very readable journal.

POLICE COURT, Friday.—John Wilson, drunk; dismissed. Michael Burke, drunk and driving at a furious rate on the streets, was fined $5 and costs or 60 days in gaol. James McGowan, summoned by the Commissioner for selling liquor on Sunday last, was fined $20 and costs.

ENCOURAGING.—Times are very dull in Texas; those Canadians who are fond of roaming in search of fortunes should go there by the first train. A private letter received to day from dall's City, in that State, says that every car leaving the town carries with men bound anywhere and everywhere. If a man make a living there he is counted as doing well.

THE SCHOOL MONEY.—Kingston's city council is at war with the School Board over the annual budget for the maintenance of the public schools. Luxuries such as rattan pointers must be dispensed with if Kingston wishes to take a high stand in educational matters. Thus the Oswego Palladium remarks, with every excuse for it.

THE DUST.—Punch once upon a time made the sensible suggestion that in order to prevent railway accidents a director should be placed on the buffer of each train. Possibly the only way to get the dust laid in Kingston would be to chain the Mayor and Ward Chairmen to a spot fully exposed to the dust blast. If they survived without blindness or suffocation perhaps something might then be done to abate the intolerable dust nuisance, to which a sand storm is not a circumstance.

SPORTS.—Ottawa holds a general holiday to day over the celebration.—The Rev. Mr. Traver of Brockville is dying.—In future there will be only one session each year of the Normal Schools at Ottawa and Toronto, from September to July.—The Brockville Literary Society have engaged the Maud for an excursion.—The Oswego Palladium can't shoot his pen because he is poor and use a pencil. Contributions, be they ever so small, will be gratefully received and promptly forwarded.—House rents are falling in Belleville.—On Thursday next the Picton Fire Brigade are to "excursh" to Alexandria Bay.—Brockvillians can do their civic holiday trip it to Montreal and back for $2. Seven hours are to be allowed in the city.

ARRIVALS AT ANGLO AMERICAN HOTEL.—George O Campbell, Montreal; O H Gores, Chicago; E F Potts, S H Phippen, J Harvley, John Campbell, Harry Corby, Wm Sutherland, Geo M Leavens, A Peacham, Yacht Union Jack, Belleville; T S Chamberlin, Belleville; P C Corby, Jr, New York; Mrs D Cameron, servant and children, Acron, Ohio; Miss A J Caron, Oswego; Thomas Caman and wife, children and servant, New York; Geo H Wilson, do; A T Stearns and wife, Boston; Fred M Stearns, do; A Stearns, do; D E Shephard and wife, Adams; Mrs S Brown, Oswego; J A Brown, do; N R Edgar, Petersburg, Ill; W W Boanson, do; J A Pamer, do; Miss Alice Edgar, do; E Pews, Cressy; Miss McLeod, Bowmanville; J Redmond, Picton; Mrs Pews, Cressy; Miss McDonell, Picton; John Gordon and daughter, Montreal, A S Smyth, wife and three children, St Louis, Mr and Mrs Howard, Buffalo; E G Ferren, Bath; Rev A Matthews and lady, Jersey City; L Boman and wife, Picton, Thos Ford, Travelling Agent, GTR; A Murch, Oregon, Ill; William Pearson, England; Mrs A T Moore and three children, Chicago, Ill; Mrs B Clark, do, do.

YESTERDAY'S S. S. PICNIC.—The annual excursion and picnic of the United Methodist Sunday Schools proved a complete success yesterday. The children, with their teachers and friends mustered to the number of fully 500, and soon after the appointed time the "City of Kingston" steamed out from Swift's Wharf with one of the largest and happiest crods ever bent upon enjoyment and recreation. The weather was delightful, the Summer commodious, and the trip up the lake to Fairfield's was keenly relished by all on board, particularly the young folks. After a pleasant run of an hour and a quarter, the party disembarked, and without ceremony, pitched into all sorts of fun incident to these pleasant gatherings—base ball, cricket, croquet, swings &c., &c., furnishing to all who desired it the necessary sport. The steamer lay at Fairfield's wharf during the afternoon, and rendered excellent service by furnishing many conveniences suggested by the kindness of Mr. Anglin and the officers of the boat. The large crowd repaired from the grove to the boat about 7:30 and after the giving three hearty cheers to Mr. Fairfield for his hospitality started for home. After a most delightful return trip, varied and enlivened by excellent music, the excursionists arrived back safe and happy on the early side of 9 o'clock, abundantly pleased with their well spent holiday.

The Sneaking Skulking Mr. Jaskins.

(Detroit Free Press).

'Can I be protected here, Mister?' asked a woman yesterday, as she entered the office of the Chief of Police.

"Yes'm.'

"Can my family—my innocent children—also be protected?' she demanded, striking the floor with her umbrella,

"Yes'm."

"If there is any law I want it," she went on, dropping into a big arm chair "If there isn't, I propose to take a club to him!'

"My dear woman, this world is full of sorrow,' said the captain as he looked up from his writing each one of us has his own separate and distinct grief to grieve over. Tell me yours!'

"Do you know old Jaskins!" she asked.

"Jaskins? Jaskins? Seems as if I had heard the name sometime.

"Man with a limp—one eye gone—red neck—sandy hair—got a skulking, sneaking way with him,' she said.

'And he has stolen your poultry, eh?'

"Poultry! Naw! It's worse than poultry—it's next to arson or murder?'

"Go on, Madam—go into the particulars!"

"Well, he boards next to me. I'm a widow. Been alone these fourteen years, and if I do say it myself I've always had the respectablest kind of a name. I've a daughter Jane. She's seventeen. She's a good girl.'

"Yes, madam."

"And that sneaking, skulking Jaskins is after her!" she exclaimed.

"Possible?"

"He just is! Was after me first. For weeks and weeks he'd hang around our gate, and smile at me and inquire if I wasn't lonesome, and send up strawberries, and look his lovingest out of that one eye!"

"And then?"

"And then, when he found I wouldn't marry him to save his neck, and he couldn't get my property to run through with, what d'ye s'pose he done?"

"Cut his throat?"

"Naw he turned right round and went to loving Jane! He has sent notes to her in those long, pink envelopes, he has sent her boquets and cocoanuts, and perfume and cherries, and he is skulking around yet! I've talked and talked, but it don't do no good. If sunthin' ain't done I believe Jane'll marry him!"

"How does she act?"

"She's grinning around and looking soft and loving like, and she won't mind half I say, and is getting notes and writ- answers, and—and—!"

And she sat down. She wiped her eyes, softly rubbed her nose, and after a moment jumped up and demanded:

"Is there any law?"

"Lots of law—dead loads, madam."

"And you'll put the law to him?"

"I will, madam—I'll make this town a volcano for him before he's a week older!"

"And you'll break up the match?"

"Either that or break his back!"

"Good! The police are worth sunthin' after all! If you say you'll wait on him and tell him he's got to back right down or go to jail, I'll chain Jane to the table-leg and sit by her for four weeks, but I'll make her forget him!"

"I'll do it, madam!"

"Think of my Jane marrying a man with one eye! And a red neck! And a limp. O-h-h! when I think of that skulking Jaskins sneaking around my innocent Jane to make her his wife, I could t-o-a-r this house down!"

She sat down and they fixed up a plan, and Mr. Jaskins had better leave for the West this very day.
