STRANGER THAN FICTION.

A Remedy Which Has Revolutionized The Treatment of Stomach Troubles.

The remedy is not heralded as a wonderful discovery nor yet a secret patent medicine, neither is it claimed to cure anything except dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach troubles with which nine out of ten suffer.

The remedy is in the form of pleasant tasting tablets or lozenges, containing vegetable fruit essences, pure aseptic pepsin (government test), golden seal and diastase. The tablets are sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Many interesting experiments to test the digestive power of Stuart's Tablets show that one grain of the active principle contained in them is sufficient to thoroughly digest 3,000 grains of raw meat, eggs and other wholesome food.

Stuart's Tablets do not act upon the bowels like after dinner pills and cheap cathartics, which simply irritate and inflame the intestines without having any effect whatever in digesting food or curing indigestion.

If the stomach can be rested and assisted in the work of digestion it will very soon recover its normal vigor, as no organ is so much abused and overworked as the stomach.

This is the secret, if there is any secret, of the remarkable success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, a remedy practically unknown a few years ago and now the most widely known of any treatment for stomach weakness.

This success has been secured entirely upon its merits as a digestive pure and simple because there can be no stomach trouble if the food is promptly digested.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets act entirely on the food eaten, digesting it completely, so that it can be assimilated into blood, nerve and tissue. They cure dyspepsia, water brash, sour stomach, gas and bloating, after meals, because they furnish the digestive power which weak stomachs lack and unless that lack is supplied it is useless to attempt to cure by the use of "tonics," "pills" and cathartics which have absolutely no digestive power.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can be found at all drug stores and the regular use of one or two of them after meals, will demonstrate their merits better than any other argument.

CITY MEMORIAL SERVICE.

VAST CROWD AT THE NEW ARMOURIES.

Kindly Tribute by Col. Twitchell—The Bulwarks of Peace—Music by 14th Regimental Band—A Beautiful Service Heartily Entered Into by the Audience.

It was something deeper rooted than curiosity which attracted 7,000 citizens to the armouries Saturday night. In the death of Victoria, the gracious and good, all felt that they had lost a true friend, and it was this sense of loss which took them to the public memorial service, arranged by the civic authorities and the different ministers of local churches. Though it is estimated that 7,000 citizens wended their way to the armouries, at least 2,000 were disappointed at not being able to gain admission, owing to the crowded condition of the immense auditorium. Every available inch of space was occupied; as early as seven o'clock half the seats were taken. A sense of solemnity prevaded the building, and the vast audience entered heartily into the service. The singing was grand; the volume of sound was immense, thrilling those who love good music.

A platform for the band and speakers was erected at the south end of the building. On this a desk had been placed, fronted by a large photograph of the queen, draped in royal mourning—purple and black. On the platform were seated Adjt. D. O. Moore, of the Salvation army; Rev. M. Macgillivray, Rev. Prof. Ross, Rev. principal Grant, mayor Kent, Lieut.-Col. Twitchell, United States consul; Rev. Dr. Richardson, Rev. E. B. B. Lanceley, Rev. Douglas Laing, Rev. T. C. Brown and others.

The service was opened by mayor Kent, who read a copy of a resolution adopted at a meeting of the clergy of the city. Never was the loss of a sovereign felt so deeply, said mayor Kent, as our late good queen Victoria. We all loved her and her memory will ever be fresh with us. We are gathered together as citizens to pay a tribute of respect to her memory. She was wise and judicious in her rulings and to her the world owes a lot for the advancement of knowledge, science, art, literature and peace.

Chopin's "Funeral March" was rendered by the 14th regimental band, followed by scripture reading by Rev. Prof. Ross, whose text was part of the xc. Psalm. Rev. Dr. Richardson read a portion of xv. chapter of the 1st. Corinthians, and Rev. E. B. Lanceley followed with prayer for the repose of the soul of the dead sovereign and for divine guidance of the new ruler of the empire. Three hymns were sung: "O, God of Bethel," "O God, Our Help," "Forever With The Lord." These were announced by Rev. D. Laing, Rev. M. Macgillivray and adjutant D. O. Moore.

Col. Twitchell was the first speaker. He considered it a tribute to the advancement and enlightment of the age that he, representing the United States, should be asked to speak at a memorial service to queen Victoria.

"It is from no accident that to-day the flag is at half-mast over the executive mansion at Washington," said he. "It is not from gallantry or a sympathetic burst of emotion; not because a great and good woman has passed away; not alone that the remains of the revered sovereign of the mighty British empire are to-day committed to their last resting place. The president of the United States is not unmindful that he is the chief executive of 76,000,000 of citizens, who bend the knee to no earthly sovereign and are generally antagonistic to kings and queens. He is not lacking in tact or experience. The hereditory, unemotional and cautious characteristics of his nature have been intensified by a long life in the public service and four years in the executive mansion; he is making no mistakes.

"Perhaps in the secret archieves of the state department he knows of reasons why Columbia and Britannia should this day mourn together, or with his remarkable perception, knows that the hearts of the American people are touched with sadness, demanding of him an outward display of their grief.

"Queen Victoria's predecessors filled the hearts of the American people with hatred and contempt for royalty. Victoria, the great and good, by her conduct, private and public, has rooted out those noxious weeds and planted the flowers of love and respect; may we not let them die of neglect.

"In the dark days of 1861 an overzealous United States officer, forgetting the plain mandates of international law, forcibly took passengers from a British mail boat. The despatch prepared by the British government left no room for apology or reconciliation; it was national humiliation or war. The wise queen took to her husband, then upon his death-bed, the despatch, and the last official act of his life was to aid his royal wife in so modifying its tone that the lamented Lincoln could find room for apology without humiliation.

"Canada and the northern states were saved from the scourge of war, with its desolated fields, burning buildings, and mourning widows and orphans; the British empire from the ignominy of an alliance for the perpetuation of human slavery, and the United States from unknown suffering and probable dismemberment. So great was the effect of this act upon mankind that had it been the first and last of their official lives, it should have entitled the names of Victoria and Albert to be canonized as the wise, good and just. The pious black man of our republican closes his prayer with thanks for the life of Abraham Lincoln; if he knew events better he would add a prayer for the existence of queen Victoria. At the tomb all meet on a common level, sovereign, subject and citizen. Creeds are brushed away, nationalities become but one.

"In the grave we bury the faults while the virtues rise like the pillar of fire of old to guide the footsteps of the living. Let us place upon her tomb what I believe would be the most acceptable offering—a wreath bound with the golden cords of mutual respect and confidence and consisting of the shamrock, the thistle, the rose, the maple leaf and the violet."

Principal Grant's Remarks.

Principal Grant confined his remarks to the religious life of Victoria. What is this sentiment that causes universal sorrow and mourning. Why is it that the whole world mourns? In one word, it was the queen's religion. Hers was a real religion, not a sham or superstitious religion, but a reasonable religion, which she carried into her every day or common life, and a religion which does not carry one there is no religion at all. The first sermon which she heard as a queen struck the key note of her life and made her what she was. The queen had no idle moments; one has only to read her books to see how busy a life she led, even when holidaying. She spoke three languages fluently; how many in this vast audience can boast of a like accomplishment? When comparatively an old woman she began the study of Hindoostani, because it was the language of a nation over which she ruled as empress, and she wanted her people to know that she could speak their language and read their literature. She possessed an extraordinary knowledge of her empire and gave frequent exhibitions of her grasp of details of matters connected with her dominions. The last time Rev. Dr. Barclay had the pleasure of preaching at St. James, he was obliged to express surprise at the ignorance of certain cabinet ministers as to knowledge of this country, and was equally astonished to find the extent of knowledge her majesty possessed, and knowledge of a far away land is not acquired except by industry.

The queen's religion did not lead her to discriminate between things secular and things religious. Her religion was at the back of all those beautiful features we so much admired in her. To her all life was sacred. It was the same clear idea of what religion demanded which led the queen to take the high stand with regard to her ministers and affairs of state. She refused to believe that statecraft could be separated from religion, and she asked of every measure "Is it just?" and if she thought it was not she would have nothing to do with it. It was this same religion which led her to receive all sects alike, according to worth, believing that creed, rank, race, etc., faded away before the realities of humanity. Her religion was that of Jesus Christ. The religion of the queen made her the greatest force for peace in the world. She always stood for peace, but she knew there were worse things than war, and that to secure peace the nation must ever be ready for war. And so we have the explanation of the high honor in which she held her army and navy—she looked upon them as the foreign police, whose duty it was to see that nations were kept in peace. In this we also find an explanation as to why she, a peace-loving person, honored the army by desiring to be borne to the grave on a gun, that modern instrument of dismemberment, because her common sense taught her that in order to secure peace, the precept of the ancient Romans must be adhered to and the nation be ever ready for war. And so the peace loving sovereign was borne, like a soldier, on a gun carriage. She was the bulwark of peace and would have had peace in South Africa had not the enemy of the empire taken to the field and declared war against her dominions. So it was with the north and the south. The immortal Lincoln wanted peace, but he was forced to defend his country from dismemberment. Why is our brave Col. Twitchell without arms?" Simply because he had them shot away that millions of others might retain theirs. Boys respect the uniform when you see it. It shows for something more than mere show or gratification of personal vanity. This is the combination we find in Victoria and which endeared her to the nations of the world. She left a loving memory behind her, a memory which shall never be forgotten.

The service closed with the "Dead March in Saul," and "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's Messiah."

In the hymn "O God, Our Help," bandmaster Trendell, who had charge of the musical portion of the service, had arranged a beautiful paraphrase, which the band rendered between the fifth and sixth verses. The clever arrangement secured for the painstaking bandmaster many warm congratulations. The bandsmen acquitted themselves with their usual excellence, playing with crispness and finish, marking close attention to the interpretation of the compositions rendered.

Notes Gathered Together.

In most of the churches the emblems of mourning still remain.

A vast crowd, unable to gain admittance, stood on the street outside the armouries.

It did not take many minutes to empty the hall; there was not any confusion nor trouble, the immense crowd going out quietly and orderly.

The members of all the church choirs occupied seats directly in front of the platform and led the singing, which was of the heartiest kind.

The attendance at St. Andrew's memorial service on Saturday of Col. M. H. Twitchell, United States consul, in full uniform, was a pleasing feature.

Where would the public memorial service have been held Saturday evening had the armouries not been available? Where else could such a vast crowd have been accommodated?

Besides the memorial services held in Trinity church, New York, by bishop Potter, for the queen, St. George's society held one at St. James' church. A mass meeting was held also.

The service was a great credit to mayor Kent, under whose direction it was arranged and carried out. Perfect order was maintained and there was not a hitch in the proceedings.

Saturday night, generally so active in the business part of the city, was far quieter than Sunday. Princess street was deserted and dark, only a few stores showing lights. The shadow of death brooded over the city.

Between four and six o'clock Saturday afternoon a squad of "A" field battery, under command of major Caines, fired eighty-one minute guns from Fort Henry in respect to the funeral of our late queen. Master gunner Stroud had the honor of firing the last shot. At each charge five pounds of powder was used.

From the armouries on Saturday night the great crowd poured forth in silent march. The procession on the road to Princess street seemed like a funeral cortege, the great black mass slowly moving along in the darkness. It was a most impressive sight. No sound of laughter was heard; all were sad and silent.

A memorial service for good queen Victoria was held on Sunday at Spokane, Washington, in All Saints' cathedral, under auspices of the British benevolent society. The church was half filled with Britons, wearing bands of mourning. The altar was draped with black. In the churches of other denominations the sermons or services were partly memorial.

PORTSMOUTH ELECTION.

Kennedy Was Elected—Annexation Again Discussed.

The election for councillor at Portsmouth on Saturday resulted: Kennedy, 78; Halliday, 71. The contest was very close, and both candidates were quite confident of election. Mr. Halliday lays his defeat to the fact that he did not canvass enough during the week.

After the election returns were announced, both candidates spoke. Mr. Kennedy stated that he would be quite independent, and work in the interests of the village. Mr. Halliday announced his intention to retire altogether from village politics and devote his time to the question of annexation of the village to the city. This, he thought, could be done without much objection, and he intended to circulate a petition in the village towards this end. A gentleman, who owned property in both city and village, told him that he paid just as high taxes in Portsmouth, in proportion.

Debate At Queen's.

There was a debate at Queen's alma mater society meeting on Saturday night. The subject was: "Resolved, that at present it would be impossible to disarm the nations, and resort to arbitration as a means of settling international disputes." R. A. McLean and John Allen, of '03, took the affirmative, and A. R. Evans and A. Bright, '04, the negative. The affirmative won. Prof. Dyde, E. L. Fraleck, B.A., and N. M. Leckie, M.A., were the judges.

TROUBLE HAS RESULTED.

REV. MR. MACKIE MAKES VIGOROUS PROTEST

Against Batterymen and Cadets Being Ordered to St. George's Cathedral—He Has Taken Active Steps in the Matter.

There was a large congregation on Sunday morning in St. Andrew's church which is still wearing all the signs of mourning for the death of queen Victoria. Rev. John Mackie, M.A., preached an affecting sermon from the text: "I know their sorrows," Exodus iii., 7. At the close he spoke as follows to men of "A" and "B" field batteries and cadets of Royal military college, who were in attendance: "Batterymen, Presbyterian soldiers! I wish to express to you my very great regret that you were not present in your own church yesterday, to take part in the solemn memorial service for her majesty, queen Victoria. I wish to tell you what you may not know, that I wrote your commanding officer, informing him of the service, and requesting him to give you an opportunity of joining in it. He replied that orders had been received from Ottawa, that you were all to worship in St. George's, which you may know, is one of the Anglican churches in this city; that on receipt of my letter he wired to Ottawa for instructions. He was told to obey the orders already issued. Consequently, you were marched away to a communion altogether foreign to you. I regret this exceedingly as a flagrant infringement of your religious liberty, and also as an indignity to your church—a church that has given to the imperial forces the wisest of generals and the bravest of soldiers, and been pre-eminently the nursing mother of patriotism. I need not assure you that I shall lay the matter, if necessity should appear, before the highest ecclesiastical and civil tribunals in the land, as involving important questions which should forthwith be authoritatively answered."

Then addressing the cadets, of whom there was a large muster, Mr. Mackie said: "Gentlemen cadets, I desire also to let you know that I wrote the acting-adjutant, informing him of the memorial service to be held in St. Andrew's, and expressing the hope that you would have an opportunity of being present and sharing in it. He replied that it had been the intention to march you all in a body to this same St. George's church, but that on receiving my letter he had given permission to Presbyterian cadets, so desiring, to attend the service in St. Andrew's. My reply to him was that such intention and such permission would have to be examined in the light of the regulations bearing on the subject. I regret your absence from the very solemn service of your own church, for you are all the sons of Presbyterian parents, attending the Royal military college on certain conditions. Some of you are well known to me as the sons of members of this church, as being yourselves communicants in it and as having been members of my young men's guild. I intend to carry the matter from your acting-adjutant to the supreme authority. Meanwhile, I charge you, under all circumstances and at all times to honor your church, even as I expect you will through the training of your church honor your king."

It might be stated that Mr. Mackie has already taken steps in laying the matter before the government authorities, and is receiving the support of various ministers of the city evangelical churches. His object is to have it settled for all time that there is no state church in Canada. Objection is also taken to reading the proclamation of king Edward's accession, at St. George's cathedral. It is held that the market square was the proper place for this to be done.

The Pipes Fell Down.

Early yesterday morning the fire brigade was called to Chatham street to extinguish a burning chimney on the house of the late Mrs. Hartrick, who died on Friday. This was accomplished without the use of water. An unpleasant circumstance, however, occurred. Mrs. Hartrick's remains were lying in one room, through which the stove pipes ran. By some means the pipes were knocked down, soot was scattered about and the room was filled with smoke. The firemen carried the pipes, with their burning contents, out of doors.

CAN FOOD DO IT?

Importance Of The Food Cure.

To discover a food that will cure a nervous wreck is indeed a Godsend. Mrs. Stella Penal, 1227 West Thirty-first street, Los Angeles, Cal., had a very remarkable experience. She says: "About twelve years ago, I was run over by a carriage and my spine injured. My left arm was partially paralyzed, walking was difficult and I had continual pains and aches in my whole body.

"To induce a movement of the bowels, I invariably had to resort to mechanical means. I would sit up in bed for hours, suffering severe colicky pains, caused by the non-digestion of the starch of the food. My heart was so weak that at times no pulse could be felt, and it seemed at times as if I must die. I fainted very often, sometimes lying in a half-fainting condition for hours, unable to move or speak, though conscious.

"Shortly after Xmas Providence directed me to buy a box of Grape-Nuts food, which I have since eaten twice a day.

"The improvement in health has been wonderful; now I can eat and digest food, my bowels act naturally and regularly, circulation is better, catarrh moderated, and I have gained much in weight and am better every way. I can read and think, while before, my eyes and brain felt too weak to do either. I can walk a long ways and have not used my air cushion for some time, and I have no further need of it."

This is a direct demonstration of the fact that Grape-Nuts food surely does rebuild the soft, gray matter in the brain and nerve centres, and any depleted person can prove this by use. One can not get well of nervous troubles without the right sort of food to rebuild this curious substance which is found in the brain, and this must be rebuilt from the food. Grape-Nuts food is made especially for the purpose.

AT THE POLICE COURT.

One Drunk and Two Boys Arraigned For Theft.

At the police court this morning Daniel Moriarity, an old offender, but who has not troubled the court for four or five years, was arraigned before the magistrate on the familiar charge of drunkenness. He pleaded guilty, saying he had been out west working on the C.P.R., and returning home had met some companions who led him astray. He was given a chance to do better.

Moriarity told a tale of how he had been robbed of $165 after he arrived here. He was "held up" right and left and his money taken. He went into one hotel and put down a $5 bill in payment for a drink and all the change he received was a "tin" quarter and four nickels. When he tendered the bogus piece of money again for another drink the bar tender refused to take it, but under the threat that he would either accept it or stand a police enquiry, the bar keeper took in back.

Two lads, accused of the theft of a pair of boots and skates, were remanded until Wednesday.

The Cheapest Book On Earth.

The Whig offer of "Picturesque Canada" is the most extraordinary offer ever made in Canada. It is only necessary that the book should be seen for everybody who has not bought one of these standard works at its previous high price to jump at the opportunity. The book contains all the pen drawings and letterpress as in the original edition; it is printed on heavy coated paper and well bound in cloth. It is being sold in other cities at $3. Here it is $2.
