KING EDWARD.

The Sentiment in the Western States.

Spokane Spokesman.

"Edward VII will make as good a ruler as the queen," said Charles Charlton. "He sporting proclivities only endear him to the English people, who are essentially a sport-loving nation. The sentiment when he horses wins a great race like the Derby is related of the idea that Englishmen condemn him by his style of life. His love of amusement brings him nearer to the hearts of the people, and I know from experience that he is a general favorite."

"There can be no question of the future of the empire so far as the prince can affect it," said C. O'Brien, Redlin. "He has had nothing more to travel all over the dominion which England controls. To the throne he brings a wide and comprehensive knowledge, and with every class of society he is a popular man. He follows all the ranges of society and can not help but be liked. While he will make a most exemplary ruler, he is overshadowed by the prestige of his mother, and this will make it difficult for him to win himself a name. Every Englishman knows of the great troubles left by the new king's predecessor, and I look for a land of unusual cheer under his rule."

Similar sentiments are left by Ben Maxwell, of the Hotel Spokane. "Edward VII is perhaps the most popular man in Europe. He has been abused and maligned, but he is only an ordinary mortal, full of good common sense, with a love of good things. The average Englishman approves of him because he lets the good have alone and leaves the matter of reform in the hands of the people."

"My sentiments can scarcely be expressed too strongly when I speak of the merits of Albert Edward," said commissioner W. R. Holmes. "Edward will make as good a ruler as ever graced a throne in my territory. His amiable qualities, his broad experience, and, above all, the character of the man himself all point to the one direction—that England is destined to see another happy and wise reign not inferior in any respect to that which has gone before."

Alexandra, The Fair.

Lady Jeune in New York Advertiser.

"The new king has had one great helper in his work, and this the most powerful one any human being can have, and there is no man or woman whose heart does not go out to the new queen, whom we have learnt to love with a variety of which English people alone are capable. The day comes not for dreams when the fair, bright-eyed Danish girl drove through the streets of London, on her way to Windsor to become the wife of the heir apparent to the English throne, and we can truly say, that from that day every action of the princess of Wales' life has endeared her to the country of her adoption. Beautiful with all the charm of a good heart and nature in her face, ready to help, always sympathetic in sorrow and rejoicing in everyone's happiness, she has the gift of winning the love of all, and her public life by the side of her husband, aiding and helping him in his efforts for the welfare of the community, finds its fuller complement in the life of Sandringham, where the happiest and daughter of English homes is found. The power that great beauty and charm gives a woman is difficult to exaggerate and the princess of Wales was endowed by Providence with that potent gift. She has used it to the country's welfare, and the homage and admiration which she spoke when she came to England has never wavered for an hour. It is difficult to realize when one sees that nearly fifty years have passed and that the graceful, youthful-looking woman is a grandmother, but she, like all English women, has learnt the secret of looking young, in the full life of work and interest in all matters which affect the social life of the country, and in which she has taken such a leading part. Little is known to the outside world of the inner life of the prince and princess of Wales. The leisure of the royal entourage, both there and at Windsor, is a marvel of discretion. Considering the extraordinary interest that is taken by everyone in the smallest incident which affects any member of the royal family, the absolute absence of any of the small gossip which commonly creeps about the lives of other persons of public interest reflects the greatest credit on those who surround the royal family. The selection of the royal household has been made with great wisdom, and whatever side glimpses may be given to the world at large, they do not come from those who live in the royal midst.

Thought There Was A Fire.

Just as the congregation had left Queen street Methodist church last night, the firemen who remained behind began to fear that the church was alive. The basement and vestry room were filled with smoke. The small stove in the minister's vestry obstinately refused to use the chimney as a means of outlet for the smoke.

Stole A Jar Of Whiskey.

A young farmer from the township of Loughboro, complained to the police today that while on route home from the city a half-gallon jar of whiskey was stolen from his sleigh. The young man accused of the theft was apprehended, acknowledged his guilt and promised to make good the value of the whiskey.

From reports received by the department of crown lands, it is estimated that the cut of pine logs in Ontario this winter will amount to 750,000,000 feet, board measure. This is a hundred millions more than a year ago, which was slightly less than 650,000,000 feet. At present there are about 17,000 men employed in the various lumber camps, housed in 300 shanties, and getting wages averaging $27 a month and board. This wage rate is higher than it ever was before. The active demand for lumber both in Canada and the United States is largely the cause of the increased cut.

In a gas explosion at the Cayuga, near Scranton, Pa., soon after the miners descended this morning, one man was killed and thirteen seriously injured.

Rochester merchants claim that they will gain $25,000 a week in trade by the new reduced rates given by the Central railway.

THE FUNERAL TO FROGMORE

THE LONG WALK WAS BLACK WITH SPECTATORS.

The Day Was Bright and the Throng Large—Obsequies Were As Stately As the Initial Stages—Kings in Attendance.

Windsor, Feb. 4.—Hundreds of people passed into Windsor throughout the morning and by one o'clock the long walk was already black with people, mostly from the surrounding country, waiting for a last glimpse at the coffin containing the remains of the queen. The sun was shining brightly. The final obsequies promise to be as stately as the initial stages. The representatives of the royal families arrived from London about ten o'clock and drove to Windsor castle.

The streets of the old town are still hung with wreaths, really faded, since Saturday. The stores were closed during the interment.

The final act in the passing of queen Victoria took place at three o'clock this afternoon when the remains were taken from the Albert memorial chapel and borne to the royal mausoleum and there placed in their resting place, beside the ashes of Albert, the late king consort. Military bearers removed the coffin from St. George's chapel, where it had rested since Saturday on a gun carriage and then the small, but impressive cortege moved slowly away. First in line were the queen's Grenadiers, preceding the Highland bag-pipers, playing weird, dismal music as at the Cowes ceremonies. Behind these were the bishop of Winchester and the dean of Windsor, followed by the rumbling gun carriage and its royal burden. Immediately following the coffin walked king Edward, kaiser William, king Leopold, of Belgium, Carlos, king of Portugal, the duke of Connaught, prince Henry, of Prussia, and other princes. Then came queen Alexandra and the other royal ladies all afoot. The procession moved through the castle gates and through the castle grounds to Frogmore, where the royal mausoleum is located. The public was permitted to assemble along part of the route.

On the arrival of the mausoleum the queen's company opened outward and formed in double rank on the steps. The choir met the funeral cortege on the steps. The Highlanders, pipers, and servants on their arrival went straight into the mausoleum and took up the position allotted to them. Then the coffin was carried into the mausoleum, preceded by the clergy.

The members of the royal family, on entering, took places on each side of the sarcophagus, the royal household standing in the transept on each side.

The final ceremony was private, as there was room only for the mourners and the clergy. The choir sang Sir Arthur Sullivan's anthem, "Yet, Though I Walk," the hymn, "Sleep Thy Last Sleep," and Tennyson's "The Face of Death is Turned Towards the Sun of Light," set to music by Sir Walter Parratt.

Left For Windsor.

London, Feb. 4.—The kings of Portugal, Belgium and Greece returned to Windsor, this morning, to attend the ceremony of placing queen Victoria's remains beside those of prince Consort at Frogmore.

American Flag Was Missed.

London, Feb. 4.—H. Hales, the Australian newspaper correspondent, in the course of a description of the naval pageant in the Daily Mail says:

"I looked for Russia's flag and looked in vain. No Russian flag marked the last pathway on the seas which our great queen should take. I saw the flag of France and saw how every mark of courtesy was shown our sweet queen by those who manned the Frenchman's decks. I saw the flag of Spain drooping in honor to our sovereign lady and then looked afield for the flag of all flags I thought to see hard up against our own, the star spangled banner of America, and I saw that it was not. Has memory so soon outrun her race that they who live beneath that flag can now forget the debts they owe to us? Be stood between them and a frowning world has yesterday."

Lamentations Of Hindoos.

London, Feb. 4.—Despatches from Calcutta describe 100,000 Hindoos as assembling there in the open air, clad in white and in many cases barefooted, to sing hymns of lamentation.

A despatch from Durban, Natal, says that 500 Hindoos assembled around the queen's statue in that city with the same object.

The Service In Detroit.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 4.—Three hundred people braved the storm last night to attend the special service at Grace Episcopal church in memory of queen Victoria. The Canadian-American club, the brotherhood of St. Andrew, met at the headquarters of the Canadian-American club, and marched to the church. It was intended to have a large number of the Canadians, in Windsor, meet at the British-American hotel and come across the river on the ferry and march to the church, but this had to be abandoned owing to the storm. The pulpit in the church was decorated with the union jack and the stars and stripes, and the choir rendered a special musical programme. The services were conducted by Rev. John McCarroll, rector of Grace church.

Declined Another Call.

Rev. G. L. Starr, priest-vicar of St. George's, has declined another enticing call, to remain in Kingston, where he is among warm friends and meets with common acquaintance, not only in the cathedral, but among all classes. He is filling such a useful place in the church and the community that his departure would be sincerely regretted. This is the third excellent call he has declined to remain here, and his friendship is deeply appreciated.

Spencerport, N.Y., Feb. 4.—Mrs. H. R. McClure, a widow sixty-six years of age, committed suicide at the home of her sister, Mrs. J. W. Shearer, with whom she was visiting. Mrs. McClure's dead body was found in a cistern back of the house. The suicide was deliberately planned. The woman tied flatirons about her neck before jumping into the cistern. She had fastened on top of the water, and she had to break the ice before dropping in. Mrs. McClure was a sufferer from rheumatism, which recently became complicated with the grip she got out of a sick bed to kill herself.

NEW BIDS FOR RAISING MAINE.

One Firm Offers Three Per Cent. of What Wreck Brings.

Havana, Feb. 4.—The bids for raising the battleship Maine, twelve in number, have been opened. The highest was from Schwartz & Co., New Orleans, who asked $167,000 for the work. The lowest bidders were Chamberlain & Co., Chicago, who offered to pay the government three per cent. of the value of the vessel when she is sold. Various plans were submitted for raising the vessel. Several of them provided for the use of pontoons, while one bidder proposes to cut up the wreck and haul it out piece by piece. Cavanagh, Boston, still bids $325,000 for the work.

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—Captain Fall, of Strathcona's horse, who has just arrived in the city, says Col. Steele has been offered the command of a division for the Lydenburg district of the Transvaal. This probably indicates the location of the Canadians, and Col. Steele is likely to be placed over them if he accepts the offer of command. It is stated that Col. Steele has been authorized to select the officers who will be given commissions in the Canadian contingent.

Capt. Fall and Lieut. J. G. Larkin, Strathcona horse, have been recommended by lord Dundonald for the distinguished service order as a reward for bravery in South Africa.

JESUIT FATHERS HOOTED.

Demonstration Spreads to Other Parts of Spain.

Valencia, Spain, Feb. 4.—The anti-Jesuit demonstrations which began in Madrid in connection with the anti-clerical play "Electra," have spread to Valencia. Sunday crowds gathered in front of the Jesuit church of the Sacred Heart, where a confirmation of children was in progress, and shouted "Liberty forever," and "Down with the Jesuits." A Jesuit leaving the church was hooted, and then the crowd marched to the Jesuit college and stoned the windows and doors, still shouting "Down with the Jesuits." Finally the demonstration was dispersed by gendarmes.

It is stated that several of the prominent members, during the recent strike, used all the funds of the association for themselves, on the ground of poverty. Those who did not share in the distribution are vigorously protesting, and will hold a meeting to air their grievance.

A Brilliant Company.

The company which appears at the Victoria theatre to-night in "Mr. Drawler," a witty farce, is spoken of as being composed of clever artists, who enter into the fun of the production and make the audience forget that what they see before them is only a play, so real and thrilling are the situations. The fun is crisp, music bright, costumes dazzling and artists noted humorists.
