ANOTHER STRONG DEFENCE

IN FAVOR OF THE VACCINATION THEORY.

A Reply to Dr. Ackroyd—Medicus Relates Something From Experience—Vaccination Needs to be Carefully Performed.

Kingston, April 1.—(To the Editor): In the treatise on Variola Vaccinae, June, 1798, page 69, by Edward Jenner, we read:

"The importance of the enquiry to the whole human race naturally excited universal attention. Ingenuity and industry were set in motion; but as physiological discussions are ever liable to error from the complicated nature of their character, I soon clearly perceived that this theory so beneficial to mankind, was liable to fall into disrepute and to be wholly discredited by the force of hasty conclusions unfounded on experiment."

"The opinion of most people that vaccination is harmless and prophylactic against the disease," is probably correct as public opinion invariably is, when the public has had time to judge deliberately of results. Your correspondent appears to have his arguments entirely on the doubtful statements and special pleadings of the anti-vaccinationists. He says "the vaccinated as well as the unvaccinated take small-pox and die." This like most statements from the same source is based upon a partial truth only, and we see every day how partial truths form the sheet anchor of the "special pleader."

The whole argument turns upon the act of vaccination as to whether that is properly and efficiently performed or not, with properly sterile lymph, taken from a true cow-pock properly tuberculated in a person whose condition is absolutely healthy. Curiously enough and a point untouched upon by your correspondent or by the anti-vaccination literature from which he quotes; the protection afforded by vaccination under the conditions above stated, depends to a certain extent in the amount of cuticle involved in the operation. This has been established beyond peradventure by Marsden, Power, Sir Richard Thorn-Thorn and other observers. They have shown from the statistics of the local government board covering the results in Great Britain ever since the first acts were passed, that when your small scarifications were produced about the size of a five-cent piece (or an equal amount of cuticle involved) not one single person has ever died of small-pox, as far as could be ascertained from the various military and municipal small-pox hospitals or the hundreds of institutions under the care of the poor law board where accuracy of observation was unquestionable. A very small percentage of those vaccinated as described, ever contracted the disease, under five per cent., although in daily contact with it.

I repeat, "not one single person is known to have died of small-pox in Great Britain who has been properly vaccinated with true vaccine in four places the size of a five cent piece, or in whom an equivalent amount of skin has been involved." This is the statement of the late Sir Richard Thorn, head of the local government board of Great Britain.

Your correspondents' statements are very much beside the mark as they are all derived from the publications of the anti-vaccination league, and are based on the natural results of the careless and inefficient way in which vaccination was and is performed.

Sir R. Thorn Thorn, remarking on the careless and perfunctory way in which vaccination was performed in many of the urban districts, and the ignorance displayed with regard to conditions and environments of the subjects, said it was simply appalling, (which remark your correspondent, by his quotations, evidently endorses), and the results lamentable.

When vaccination is performed efficiently and with every safe guard, statistics show that the well-formed vesical of size as above is scarcely, if any, protection, either against taking the disease or against death from it, and the protective influence creeps up as more cuticle is involved, until it reaches the area of the four vesicales the size of a five cent piece, when the other conditions having been legitimately fulfilled the subject may be considered absolutely safe from death by small-pox.

On examination the arms of the patients in the various small-pox institutions of Great Britain it was found that in no single case had the patient four well defined vaccine licatuces. Amongst those who said they had been vaccinated, some had one mark and that but doubtfully genuine, some two and some three of more or less dubious character, while many showed scars which were not from vaccination at all, but simply the marks of local abscesses produced by the introduction of pus or other septic matter. In Leicester where the anti vaccination partly first obtained a hearing and became formidable this latter condition was notably found to be the case.

Your correspondent, with whom I entirely agree as to sanitary and hygienic precautions and treatment in checking small-pox, allows the whole of my side of the position in his last remark when he says "vaccination may have some little practical utility if performed immediately on coming into contact with the disease and in that way may have prevented the rapid spread of the disease."

I wonder whether Dr. Aykroyd would (just as a matter of form) like to be vaccinated if he visited with me to-morrow the Glasgow small-pox hospital, a place in which I have spent many an hour.—MEDICUS.

An Educational Dream.

Kingston, April 3.—(To the Editor): The education of our youth is a most serious question and ought to be subject of deepest consideration by every parent and guardian, in fact by all thinking people, for on it depends so much of the future progress or the reverse. It is refreshing to see our daily papers containing thoughts on such a subject by those most capable of leading thought on it. From the popular side let me ask: How are we to have religion taught in the school? That it ought to be taught, I think, Prof. Watson states, at the outset of his paper. That grammar as taught in our public schools is most confusing to young minds, I found when I went through it some years ago to help a youth. It is not nearly so clear as is Lennies or Douglass', etc. But why do our teachers give themselves so much work? Why not give the children text books, standard books, and let them study at home so many pages and rehearse them with the teachers' explanations and elucidations?

I wonder our teachers are not all worn out long ago. Their work is just double what teachers have to do in the old country. And is it any better? I doubt it. The children would find in the books what they find on the black board and the hours in school could be shortened by one hour. Of course French should be taught earlier, but not for the reason that we have French-Canadians among us, for they all speak English and it is better to have one language in one dominion, but because in Europe and in Egypt, French is everywhere understood. Would it not save a great deal of time and trouble if the old-fashioned system were adopted of learning the Latin and Greek roots? In reading to find out the principal words, give their meanings and the root from which the word sprang. Good old Butler's spelling could thus give a public school child all he wishes to know without any ablative, vocative, etc.

Would it not be better to have girls' schools and boys' schools from the very first? Girls should be trained to keep the home especially, and boys to go out into the busy world, and just as they are different physically so should their training be different. Do they not go to the university too young? A year or two between the collegiate and university would fit them for taking thorough advantage of the university training which to a great extent is lost because the students are too young to get the good out of it. It is memorized and forgotten. Some of our married men and women are just fit to get the good out of a university training, and many of our B.A's. and M.A's. have forgotten the most of what they learned there. Are we not driving ahead too fast?—AN APPRECIATIVE READER.

Kingston And The Cup.

This morning D. J. McDermott, shoe merchant, Princess street, received from Pittsburg, Pa., a picture of the cup, won for the third season by the Kingston hockey team, of that city. Five of the seven players are Kingston boys, viz., Lamb, Hamilton, Curtin, Reyner and Murray. Underneath the cut of this very handsome cup appears the verse:

"You're ours, old cup! We've done our best
To add you to our fair collection—
We've slashed and played the game for fair,
As thousands have the recollection."

Pleasant Church Concert.

The choir of Princess street Methodist church conducted a pleasing concert last evening, which was well attended. The pastor, Rev. T. Brown's address on "The place of music in the church," was much appreciated, as was also T. Rutherford's solo. Among the other numbers on the programme were: Choruses, by the choir; piano duet, Misses L. Walker and L. Wilder; solo, Miss Flossie Pipe; solo, Miss E. Wilder; quartette, "Forget Me Not;" solo, Miss B. Vanorder; dumb bell drill. Refreshments were afterwards served.

Realized Fifty Dollars.

The Dorcas society, of St. Andrew's church, held a very successful tea and sale of work in St. Andrew's hall yesterday afternoon. The work table was in charge of Miss Smith, Miss Minnes and Mrs. Gilfies. The prettily arranged tea table was in charge of Mrs. Strachan and Mrs. Reid, while Mrs. Hopkirk and Mrs. S. C. McBride presided at the candy table. The proceeds amounted to fifty dollars.

Tenders Awarded.

This morning architect Arthur Ellis awarded the following contracts for the erection of a three storey stone warehouse for the wholesale grocery firm of George Robertson & Son: Masonry, James Bews; carpentry and joiner work, Hunter & Harold; galvanizing and other iron work, Nugent & Taylor; painting and glazing, T. W. Milo.

Nurses Alumnae.

The nurses alumnae met at the general hospital last night. Miss Wilson presided. Two very interesting papers were read, one on "District Nursing," by Miss Baker, Victorian nurse, and the other on "A Trip Through Ireland," prepared by Miss Bennett, a graduate in New York.

Barbers In Session.

The barbers met last night and consumed the midnight oil in an endeavor to arrive at some amicable settlement of the difficulty existing as to the formation of a union. No decision was reached and another meeting will be held.

HIS HAND MANGLED.

By a Sawing Machine—Loudly Serenaded.

Colebrook, April 2.—The water in the river is raising very fast. The mills are running at full speed. G. A. Shangraw, merchant, was recently married to Miss Gertrude Wallace, Harrowmsith. The boys of this place, Yarker, Harrowsmith and Hartington gave them a loud serenading Thursday evening. He treated them well and the boys had a gay time. Henry Salsbury has moved on the farm recently bought from George Goudy. George Goudy has started for Manitoba, where he intends to reside. Charles Emburly had the wood sawing machine at his place, and was assisting in taking the wood from the saw when he accidentally slipped. His hand struck the saw and was fearfully mangled. One finger had to be amputated. Frank Elderbec, Harrowsmith, had his horse tied under the shed here on the night of serenading Mr. Shangraw. When he went after it to start for home, the horse was gone and he did not find him for two or three days. Fortunately he came home all right. F. S. Wartman and Willie Wartman have ordered new upright pianos. James Middleton and Hicks Ball have each a new organ. Miss Flossie Ward entertained a number of friends Saturday evening. Mrs. Alva Lee and son, Freeman, are visiting at her father's, C. N. Garrison. Mrs. Hiram Lucas has returned after spending a few days with her brother, John Wagar, Centreville. Albert Lucas has removed to Ernesttown. Miss Byerl Lyons has returned after spending two weeks with her sister, Mrs. Montgomery, Kingston.

PORTSMOUTH COUNCIL.

No Hospital Grants—Wants Railway Track Removed.

The Portsmouth council met last night, all members being present. Rev. S. Tighe again addressed the meeting in behalf of the general hospital, but his words did not have the effect of softening the strong heart of the council. It was moved by councillor M. J. Kennedy and seconded by councillor Simmons, that the general hospital and the Hotel Dieu be granted each $20, but the motion was defeated, the reeve and councillors Baldwin and Graham voting against it.

On communication from J. McLeod, asking remission of a year's taxes on his houses in Front street, owing to vacancy, and asking the council to pay part of the cost of moving the street railway track across town hall lot and up Bay street to Union, thence to Front, the clerk was instructed to write Mr. McLeod for definite particulars, or to meet the council at the next meeting.

Tenders will be asked for 100 shade trees for Aberdeen park; also for carting stone. An extension of time till May 1st was given E. F. Johnston to pay his taxes. Mrs. R. Arthurs, a lone widow, had her taxes remitted. The council adjourned till next Tuesday night when tenders will be opened.

Reached The Prison.

The convict Sharp who shot and killed a man recently near Peterboro, arrived at the penitentiary this afternoon to commence his fifteen year term.

Some Thefts Reported.

Police constable Bateson this morning searched the residence of a citizen, in the upper portion of the city, looking for a bull-dog which Adam Harley, manager of the bank of British North America, lost some days ago. The dog was not found.

Yesterday police constable Bateson searched the residence of a citizen, whose place is in Williamsville, looking for some game fowl, stolen from the residence of William Murray, Barriefield. The fowl were not discovered.

Monday night thieves visited the premises of John Purdy, Princess street west, and removed therefrom a game cock. The bird was owned by Richard Savage and had been left with Mr. Purdy only the night before. The thieves also visited the premises of Charles Fralick, but did not carry off any birds. There is a lot of petty thieving at present carried on.

The squad cadets of the Royal military college, forty strong, who are to take part in the military tournament at Toronto, will be in attendance and give an exhibition of gymnastic work and fancy drill.

Why Work Is Slack.

The reason, so an interested party says, that the cigar makers have been laid off is that the market is overstocked, the factories are full of manufactured goods, and until relief is secured by sales the trade will continue dull and little manufacturing proceed.

There are sixty men working at the new barge for the Calvin company, a large number being from Quebec. The barge will be ready for the second trip of the season by the company's steamers.
