HERE'S A TIMELY WARNING.

A critic of the commons' proceedings, when the census was under discussion, declares that the race spirit is dormant, and that the power of the mischief-maker is disappearing. The troublers, however, are not allowed to perform without a warning. La Presse, of Montreal, conservative, but independent enough to speak out its mind when the party is going astray, has this to say:

"Three conservative members, Messrs. Barker, Bennett and Clarke Wallace, have displayed so much acrimony against French-Canadians and have given evidence of such hateful sentiments that it certainly will be impossible for any French-Canadian having any heart at all to march along with these gentlemen. Their fury at the simple idea of thinking that the French-Canadians will not be robbed of their representation as they were in 1891 knows no bounds and is absolutely grotesque."

The members referred to may be of the opinion that it is useless to conciliate the French-Canadians, that Quebec and its voters are hopelessly gone. But Mr. Borden may not think so, and if he does not he will lose no time in putting a muzzle upon his followers. La Presse does not veil its thoughts at all. It plainly intimates that its friends and compatriots will not stand the repeated insults of the Ontario Franco-phobes.

AN OFFICIAL VINDICATED.

Mr. Monk, M.P., in a recent speech, made a serious charge against the editor of the Labour Gazette, who is the deputy of the Hon. Mr. Mulock and a government official. In effect it was that Mr. King, while in Valleyfield, in connection with the cotton mill strike, had busied himself in the interest of Mr. Loy, the liberal candidate.

Mr. King was unable to defend himself. That is one of the unfair things about parliamentary criticism. It may be inaccurate, injudicious, and unjust, and it has to go so far as the individual outside the house is concerned. The member is a privileged person, and cannot be called to account for what he says in the commons. So Mr. King had to be under the imputation of misusing his powers until Mr. Loy had the time and opportunity to collect affidavits in Valleyfield, disproving Mr. Monk's assertions and relieving the editor of the Labour Gazette of all appearance of wrong-doing. It was a clear and emphatic vindication of the man.

It must be said of Mr. Monk that he made some attempt to have his statements verified. He had been "loaded up the wrong way," and when he applied to his informants for a recital of the facts in an affidavit they were unwilling to act. Mr. Monk has promised, if the evidence he asked for be not forthcoming, to withdraw the statement he has made in the house and injurious to Mr. King. It is the only thing he can do, properly.

WORTHY OF BEING MAYOR.

Tom L. Johnson, the mayor of Cleveland, is now one of the most-talked of men in the United States. He has always been active, full of tact and resource, and he has used them well. That he has not been unmindful of his own interests is indicated by the fact that at a little over forty he is a millionaire, retired from business and in a position to serve the people and promote their welfare.

Mr. Johnson made his influence felt during the last year by his opposition to the proceedings of the council. The Pennsylvania railway laid envious eyes upon a valuable piece of land on the water front, and proposed a swap of other land for it. The company wanted that which is worth four millions and was willing to surrender that which is high-prised at two hundred thousand. Mr. Johnson had an injunction issued, restraining the mayor from signing the ordnance, and entered office soon enough to defeat the deal. He has an expensive lawsuit on his hands, but he is tolerably cheerful under the assurance that he will win.

That he is "a forceful man" has been made evident by his removal of a city clerk who was accused of using his position in the interest of the corporations as against the people, and the change was made by a majority of republicans, while he is a democrat of the most pronounced character.

Now he has a number of men making maps and figuring on assessment of the city at his own expense, his idea being, by great object lessons, to demonstrate the inequalities of the assessment, and show the necessity for great reforms. He is a single-taxer who may not succeed in the application of the whole Henry George philosophy to his favorite city, but he will probably bring about a better assessment of some real estate and promote improvement by the exemption of the high taxation.

Moreover he is for a lower rate of travel with street railways. He contends from his own knowledge—as the owner of a little suburban line—that with modern equipment and appliances the companies can give the public three cent fares and make money. He has begun the fight to this end. He does not reveal his plans, but he declares that he will succeed and the people hope he will.

The man is being watched by others than those who live in Cleveland. He is showing what the mayor of a city can do, when he is a man of energy, of forethought, and persistency. His is therefore a personality which is deserving of special study.

EDITORIAL IDEA.

The Salisbury government appears to be getting weaker. It was well the election occurred as it did. If the party went to the country now it would be badly beaten.

Toronto expects the province to become involved in its battles with the telephone company. But Toronto thinks very little of any other place when it has fulfilled its purposes.

The Toronto Telegram is very much annoyed because Hon. Mr. Scott, in the senate, spoke against Toronto's side of the telephone disturbance. This is—if we understand the Telegram aright—the unpardonable sin.

What is this? That no decent man will kneel and kiss the hand of the king! Who said it? The editor of the Ottawa Journal. When this comes to the knowledge of Mr. Robins, of Walkerville, there will be pistols and coffee for two.

The Toronto World has been seeing a change in British sentiment in favour of protection. The Montreal Gazette, on the other hand, discussing the budget, declares that "the wedge of protectionism has not got in even its thin edge." People will differ, you know.

A Toronto clergyman has accepted a call to Cleveland because it promises him more rest. He has been criticised because he seems to love his ease. Is it not human? The Wesleys and Whitfields and other old workers, are dead. "Old things have passed away, etc."

A young woman out west is suing an institute which undertook to improve on the work of the Creator by altering or amending her face according to specifications. The institute failed in its contract, and the young woman wants consolation to the extent of $50,000. She ought to get it.

Sir William Macdonald proposes to do for the rural schools, in certain places, what he has done for certain urban schools. He is going to equip them for the practical study of farming, and will bring teachers from England or the continent. A commendable generosity and a benediction to the country!

MARINE INTELLIGENCE.

What is Happening Along the Water Front.

The schooner Lydon clears this evening for Oswego.

The steamer Pierrepont commences her daily trips to Gananoque to-morrow.

The tug Spray and grain laden barge cleared from Mooers' elevator for Montreal.

All the crews of the Canada Atlantic railway barges arrived to-day to man the boats.

The schooner Waubashene, light, from Collins Bay, arrived at the locomotive works wharf.

The Canada Atlantic railway company's barge Beauport is at the Mooers' company elevator loading grain for Montreal.

The schooner Tradewind cleared from Crawford's wharf for Oswego. The schooner Fleetwing cleared from Swift's for the same port.

Richardsons' elevator: Schooner Straubenzee arrived from Toronto with barley; schooner Maggie L. arrived from bay ports with grain and cleared again.

M.T. company elevator: Tug Hall, cleared for Montreal with six grain barges; tug Thomson from Charlotte with three coal laden barges; schooner Mowat cleared for Oswego to load coal.

The Montreal transportation company has leased the steamer Bannockburn and consorts to the Canada Atlantic railroad company for two trips between Duluth and Depot Harbor, carrying grain. The steamer Rosemount and consort has also been leased by the Grand Trunk company for two trips between Chicago and Goderich, carrying grain.

A POSTMASTER DEAD.

Peter Green, Charleston, Aged Eighty Six Years.

Brockville Times.

Peter Green, the well known postmaster, of Charleston, died Monday morning. Mr. Green was probably the oldest postmaster in eastern Ontario. For more than forty years he filled without complaint the difficult position of country postmaster and storekeeper, and was ever ready to reach a helping hand to a neighbor in distress.

Mr. Green was born in February, 1816. For more than sixty years he lived in Leeds county, and kept the esteem and respect of all with whom he came in contact.

He leaves five children besides his sorrowing widow to mourn his loss, namely, Johnston A. Green, Athens; Walter Green, Oak Leaf; Mrs. Robert Johnston, Lansdowne township, Mrs. Harriet Davis, N.W.T., and Miss Agnes Green, who has resided at home and of late years has been her father's trusted and valued assistant.

QUEEN'S STUDENTS' DAY.

UNVEILING OF PROF. DUPUIS' PORTRAIT

In Convocation Hall—Presentation of the '01 Scholarship—The Valedictories Delivered—Happy Gathering of Old and Young Students.

This was students' day at Queen's. Strange, maybe, to call it so, for most people regard all great doings at the university as "students' days." But the proceedings in convocation hall this afternoon were controlled entirely by the alma mater society. A very large assemblage was gathered at two o'clock when the pleasing ceremony of unveiling the portrait of Prof. Dupuis began. This was performed by Rev. Prof. Ross, Montreal, and J. R. Lavell, M.P., Smith's Falls, who, in eloquent addresses, told how Prof. Dupuis' old students desired to perpetuate his memory by placing upon the walls of the university a handsome oil painting. The unveiling of the portrait was the occasion of vigorous applause from the gallery of students and from all parts of the hall. Prof. Dupuis made a fitting reply in acknowledgment of the honor which his old students had conferred upon him. The portrait is a costly one, and is one of the best in the hall. The artist caught the true expression, and reproduced it faithfully.

PROF. N. F. DUPUIS.

Then followed the presentation of the '01 arts fellowship in history by J. A. Donell, on behalf of his class. The chancellor accepted this fellowship, making a happy reply.

The arts valedictory was read by J. Matheson, M.A., who said that the graduating class had passed through all the stages of undergraduate life and played their part with considerable dash. Whether they played a really winning game or not time alone would tell. Examinations were not a proper test of the real progress made by a student; they test scholarship only. By this test, however, there are great differences seen in the progress made by various students. One great reason for such differences is the faulty methods of study of many, which prevent them from being able to distinguish clearly between what they know, and what they do not know. It would be easy to toot the horn of '01, but their words will speak for themselves. The perfectoid alma materism of the Queen's graduate, the valedictorian said, is a wonder to outsiders, but it is explained by the personality of such men as principal Grant, Prof. Dupuis and Prof. Watson. Those now graduating will always be inspired by the memory of such men, and they will always have with them the spirit and ideals of Queen's in as perfect a form as they have been able to receive them.

James Anthony, M.A., was the valedictorian for the graduating class in theology. He said that the duties of a valedictorian of the graduating class in divinity were hard to define. In the first place he cannot give a valedictory, because his class knows that their connection with and their interest in their alma mater are but beginning. And in the second place, the class has learned that a criticism whether it takes the form of praise or blame is always best given in private. Queen's aims, he pointed out, to give her students an education that will fit them to take their place among living men and women. He dwelt upon the good comradeship existing between the professors and the students, and pointed out that that education alone deserved to be called practical, which appealed to the highest, the most spiritual in men and in nations. He pointed out the value of the students' learning to do a maximum of independent work while in college, and suggested some lines along which Queen's was already doing this and indicated how this work might be carried out still further. After congratulating the university on its bright outlook, he said in conclusion: "We to-day are thinking specially of the fact that Queen's children are recognizing the heroes and the leaders of the present day. To my right is the portrait of principal Mackerras, behind me is the portrait of Dr. Williamson in days of darkness and tempest they were Queen's trusty pilots, who guided her alma mater to her present commodious harbour. Last fall we unveiled the portrait of professor Watson, and today we have honored professor Dupuis. These are the men who along with their noble colleagues have taught us to love the truth and follow her fearlessly, independently, but reverently, no matter whither her footsteps tend."

The practical science department also had an able valedictorian in J. C. Murray, B.A., B.Sc., who gave a bright address on behalf of the youngest faculty of the university.

During the first part of the ceremonies, Sir Sandford Fleming presided, afterwards transferring the honor to G. F. Weatherhead, B.A., who took charge of the valedictory proceedings. It was a most inspiring meeting—that of the students of bygone days with the younger collegians of to-day; the former returning to the halls, where they had received their inspiration, to honor the source; and the present students seeing before them men who in their younger days drank at the same fountain of learning, and who had risen to high places in the world.

University Council.

Queen's university council was to meet in annual assembly this afternoon at a quarter past four o'clock. The first interesting ceremony was the presentation of Queen's doomsday book by Sir Sandford Fleming. In the doomsday book is a letter from his imperial majesty, king Edward VII., in reply to the address sent to him by the university council, after the death of queen Victoria. The king's letter is to be read at the convocation proceedings to-morrow afternoon.

Four To Receive Degrees.

In addition to the honorary degree of D.D., conferred upon Rev. Dr. McLaren, and the honorary degree of LL.D., conferred upon P. C. McGregor, the honorary degree of LL.D. will be conferred upon bishop Mills, of the diocese of Ontario, and Hon. David Mills, minister of justice, at to-morrow's convocation ceremonies in connection with the closing of Queen's university. It was hoped that Hon. David Mills would be able to be present at convocation ceremonies, but he has sent word that he cannot come, but will be present at the reopening of college next October.

Mining School Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the school of mining and agriculture was held last evening in the Carruthers science hall. John McKelvey presided.

Dr. Goodwin, director of the school, reported on the progress of the year. There were seventy-three students in the engineering courses and 156 students in the science courses. He also reported on the completion of the mining laboratory. There are now not more than four laboratories on the continent equal to the laboratory at Kingston.

J. W. Hart reported on the work of the dairy school, showing that there were 100 students in attendance, and that 419,573 pounds of milk had been received, from which were made 13,607 pounds of butter and 11,126 pounds of cheese. In order to secure a larger supply of milk next year, a higher price will be paid.

The following resolutions were passed:

"The stockholders of the school of mining and agriculture hereby express their approval of the action taken by the governors during the past year as set forth in the reports, and the statements made by the chairman; more particularly the act which they submitted to the legislature, extending the functions of the school to all the subjects usually embraced in a school of applied science, is hereby approved, and the governors are instructed to proceed with such extension as far as the means at their disposal will permit them.

"That as the new buildings must be furnished with the best modern apparatus, especially for mining and electrical engineering, and for applied physical science and for an enlarged museum of economic mineralogy and geology, the governors are instructed to appeal to the public for $50,000 for these purposes.

"That the government and legislature are hereby thanked for the grant of $22,500 a year for five years, to enable the erection of suitable buildings; the one to be for the geological, mineralogical and physical sciences and the other for general engineering, drawing and other purposes, included in the work of the school.

"That the government and legislature are hereby thanked for the increased sum placed in the estimates for salaries and maintenance of the school, thus enabling the governors to greatly increase its efficiency and its practical usefulness in furthering the material development of the province."

The retiring governors were: E. J. B. Pense, James Swift, E. W. Rathbun and Charles Livingston. Mr. Livingston tendered his resignation. Dr. Knight and G. Y. Chown also resigned from the board.

At a meeting of the governors immediately after the annual meeting, Hon. William Harty was elected chairman; Capt. W. B. Carruthers, vice-chairman; T. W. Nash and D. M. McIntyre, finance committee; Prof. Shortt, principal Grant, T. W. Nash, James Swift, E. J. B. Pense and D. M. McIntyre were elected governors.

MINUTES NOT AMENDED.

Ald. Graham Could Not Get a Seconder.

Before the minutes of the last regular meeting were adopted at last night's meeting of the city council, alderman Graham took objection to one clause, which read: "Ald. Graham refused to obey the ruling of the chairman and the mayor then left the chair and retired from the council chamber."

Ald. Graham moved, seconded by Ald. Dunlop, that the above clause be struck from the minutes, and replaced by one which set forth that Ald. Graham rose to a point of order, his point of order being that Ald. McLeod was out of order, but the mayor did not give a ruling and asked Ald. Graham to be seated.

Ald. Graham thought the minutes might just as well be corrected as not. As for himself personally, he did not care a fig whether the minutes as printed went on record or not.

Ald. Dunlop asked to be excused from seconding the resolution.

Ald. Graham asked Ald. Shaw to allow his name to be used, but the last named asked that Ald. Graham state his point of order, when he claimed Ald. McLeod was out of order.

Ald. Graham stated that he arose and asked if Ald. McLeod was in order, but the mayor refused to give him a ruling. It was not the speaker, but Ald. McLeod who was creating the disturbance on the night in question.

The explanation seemed not to satisfy Ald. Shaw, as he would not allow his name to appear on the resolution as seconder. Ald. Graham did not press the matter further, and the original resolution to adopt the resolution was adopted.

Police Court Tips.

At the police court this morning, Mary Leslie, a respectably dressed and pleasant looking woman of middle age, was arraigned on a charge of drunkenness; she was found on Ontario street last evening in an intoxicated condition. She said she belonged to Toronto and was employed aboard the steamer Antelope. She was remanded until to-morrow morning in order that enquiries could be made.

John Potts, drunk, was fined $5 and costs, with the option of going to jail for one month.

Cannot Come To Kingston.

Word has been received from Ottawa that the 43rd regiment finds it impossible to visit Kingston on Victoria day.

A few more warm, sunshiny days and the "trees on a thousand hills" will be bursting into leaf. Already the trees in the various city parks are in bud, and soon, if this weather continues, these beauties of nature will be clothed in their fresh, new garments of green.
