GAMBLING DENS RAIDED.

TORONTO POLICE ARE DOING A LITTLE BUSINESS.

The Cutter Gloria Won at Toronto—A Queen City Man Held up And Delivered of Eight Cents—Premier Ross Leaves For England Next Week.

Toronto, June 24.—A posse of police surprised a crowd of young men gambling in a large barn at the rear of the Morin house, Queen street east, on Saturday night. Ten players were captured and locked up, charged with frequenting a common gaming house.

Rear commodore H. C. McLeod's English cutter Gloria in her first race on the Royal Canadian yacht club course showed her superiority to the fleet. She won the trophy for thirty footers and first class yachts, offered by the Mail and Empire on Saturday, easily. E. Jarvis, Merry Thought, was second and A. C. Poucher's Viola, third. Canada, Viva, Woona and Sylvia also started. The Mail and Empire trophy for sixteen and twenty five footers was won by A. J. Philip's Whiteap, with J. S. Kenny's Vesta second and C. A. Goldmann's Frou Frou third.

A resident of the east end has informed the police that on Saturday night between ten and eleven o'clock he was attacked on George street by two men wearing masks, who pointed revolvers at his head and told him to empty his pockets. The man under the pressure did as he was told, and all the thieves got for their trouble was eight cents. The police are investigating.

In consequence of a complaint made by a Chinaman who complained to have been robbed of $100 in a fan tan game at the premises of Kwong Yook Soy, Queen street east, a posse of constables raided the establishment early this morning. The banker was not on hand, but the paraphernalia used in the seductive game of fan tan and fifty dollars in cash was, and these were seized by the police.

Premier Ross has completed his list of meetings in the province and will remain in the city this week to arrange his affairs prior to his departure for England next week. He leaves Toronto on Monday next, and sails on Wednesday, July 3rd.

AN INQUEST UNNECESSARY.

The Man Found Dead at Cataraqui Not Identified.

Cataraqui, June 24.—While returning from his day's labor, last Friday evening, an Englishman employed by the Cataraqui cemetery company, saw a peculiar bird fly from the attic of a small, deserted, roughcast house, situated on the York road, below the village, and owned by John Porter. The man's curiosity was aroused and he entered the house to find out, if possible, more about the bird. After stumbling across broken timbers and over loose boards he discovered a ladder, against the side of the wall, leading to the attic. Having mounted this and allowing a little time for his eyes to accommodate themselves to the darkness, he was astonished to see lying in one corner the dead body of a man. Hastening from the house he told of his discovery to Mr. Black, who returned with him to make a more thorough investigation.

Coroner Mundell, of the city, was notified and the body given in charge to undertaker Corbett. The coroner deemed an inquest unnecessary. Nothing was discovered about the man to establish his identity. From indications the man had evidently died in the early fall, the body, which vermin had mutilated beyond all recognition, being in an advanced state of decomposition.

The dead man had evidently been sober when he entered the attic, else he could not have climbed the ladder, and was doubtless ill and in search of shelter from the cold, and, as it proved, a place in which to die. No one has any definite memory of having seen the man before, and nothing about him gave any clue to who he was or where he came from.

The Late Archdeacon.

The funeral service for the lamented archdeacon Bedford Jones was held at Brockville in his own church in which he took deep fatherly interest. The afternoon the body arrived by railway and was taken to Cataraqui cemetery for the final rest. The clergy of Kingston attended, meeting the body at the outer station on their return from the burial of Mrs. Nimmo, mother of Rev. J. H. Nimmo.

The archdeacon was attended at Dansville by his son, Alban Bedford-Jones, of Toronto. On Friday night about eleven o'clock he was so restless that he arose and sat up, in which position he had laterly found occasional relief and comfort. The father felt so much better that he urged his son to take some rest on the lounge at his side. At three o'clock the latter awoke to find the archdeacon's head bent over in death. He had passed away without a pang, probably in his sleep.

G. L. Starr went to Brockville on Saturday night to conduct the services at St. Peter's church, the archdeacon's son being the assistant clergyman. The edifice was draped. In the evening Mr. Starr preached a memorial sermon. Canon Cayley, of Toronto, a relative, assisted in the offices of the day. This morning the body of the deceased was removed to the church where holy communion was celebrated at 7 a.m. At one o'clock the funeral service occurred.

The service in St. George's cathedral to-morrow evening for enthronement of bishop and evening service will be grand. His lordship will preach. Seats will be reserved for delegates to synod. The bishop's charge will be delivered in the afternoon at three o'clock.

William Teur, a retired farmer, who lived with his daughter, Mrs. John Etty, Mitchell, Ont., was found suspended by the neck from a rope attached to a beam in his stable. It was a case of suicide. No cause for the act is known.

INAUGURAL SERMONS.

By Brock Street Church's New Pastor.

Rev. Elci Crummy occupied the pulpit of Brock street Methodist church yesterday for the first time as its new pastor.

The morning sermon was on "The Power And Responsibility of Individuality," from Isaiah xxxii, 2. The prophet, said the speaker, has ever had the same duty to keep before the minds of men,—that the things that are not seen are eternal. The opposite is the creed of the crowd, though the particular form it assumes is determined by the circumstances of the time. Man to-day has two resorts in case of discouragement in connection with his mission of right—the past and the future. The former shows right triumphing; the latter, in the very nature of God, that right will triumph. Israel's past had no lesson of hope to the prophet, so he appealed to the future. There his faith enabled him to see that right would ultimately rule in government, and that upon that foundation a social superstructure would be built centered about human individuality. Individuality is all that God has given us, and all that he asks in return. Knowledge or property is ours only when it is woven into the fibre of our being. Illustrations were given to show that God's great workings in history and in the recent activities of the church have unfailingly been through the individual; and that the great need of to-day presented by the complicated duties of the church was this consecrated individuality.

The evening sermon was from the same text as the morning, the subject being "The Office of a Man." The trinity of thought—philosophy, prophecy, precept,—were shown to be included in the text. Read in the light of the illustration, it was based upon three great fundamental facts of life: the drift of sin, God's ultimate triumph, and this victory through an individual focussed on Calvary. And the church was but the widening out and completing of the individual fulfilment. Hence the Christ life was the type for the personal life of His followers; and the christian's office is not a game of grab, a case of winning in the struggle for existence, but, Christ like, to form a rock-like shelter from every injurious influence of every weaker man or woman.

AMERICAN GUN OF POWER.

New Wire Tube Gun Will Throw a Shell 25 Miles.

New York, June 24.—Upon the authority of Lieut.-Col. James S. Ingalls, U. S. A., retired, whose tables and measurements are accepted by all ordnance constructors, the great guns of Europe, which have hitherto been able to outshoot by miles our heaviest weapons, are themselves outclassed in range, velocity and effectiveness by a recently designed American weapon, now nearing completion. It is a rapid fire, improved Brown segmental wire tube gun. It is expected that with a calibre of four and one-half inches it will throw a steel projection of fifty-five pounds nearly twenty-four miles, with a velocity of 3,900 feet a second.

The extreme range expected is twenty-five miles, with a velocity of 4,000 feet a second. It would rise nearly ten miles above the earth. The time of flight of the projectile from its discharge to its fall is 198.3 seconds. The shell will have a striking velocity of 1,787 foot seconds at the terminus of range, a sufficient force to penetrate five inches of steel.

The weight of the gun is four tons and it will use a twenty-six pound charge of smokeless powder. The length of the projectile proper is twenty inches and the brass case containing the fixed ammunition is forty inches long. The brass cartridge case will hold, if charged to its utmost capacity, thirty-two pounds of smokeless powder, and with this range the muzzle velocity will be about 4,000 feet a second, giving a maximum range of twenty-five miles, which will be the world's record for any size gun.

The tube and main foundation of the body of the gun were composed of curled steel sheets one-seventh of an inch thick, extending the full length of the tube. These steel sheets are wound with square steel wire one-seventh of an inch thick, ten miles of which is consumed in harnessing in the enormous force and energy carried by the weapon. One inch square of the wire will sustain 25,000 pounds of dead weight. It is expected that the hitherto unheard of pressure of 96,000 pounds to the square inch will be withstood by the new gun.

Deseronto Camp.

Deseronto, June 24.—Military court Earl Roberts gave a vaudeville programme and dance at Foresters' Island on Friday night, when a large crowd attended; including all the officers of the brigade staff and a large number of citizens. The programme consisted of Sergt.-Maj. Gimblett and McIntyre, in a cake walk; Tpt. Robert, club swinging; Gr. Hart, comic song; G. Berbeck, sentimental song; Sergt.-Maj. O'Hagan, black face wench; Sergts. Turner and Hilton, instrumental selection; G. Cooney, buck and wing dance. Dancing was kept up until midnight. The members have been asked to repeat the programme on July 1st, in the Forester hall, Deseronto.

The 4th, 7th and 9th field batteries completed their training on Saturday and left for their respective homes.

The Good Not Exempt.

The women who do good work with a Y.W.C.A. tent came to grief Saturday evening in the storm. Ladies are not partial to lightning and when it comes in feu de joie order as it did on this occasion they are very limp indeed. While huddled within their tent, in absolute fear, the storm brought down the canvas, and alarm and confusion was added to their trials. They had to face the deluge and pyrotechnics of the sky and seek refuge in a distant tent. They did not reach home till very late and they will never disagree with anyone who says it was an awful night. Truly it was.

Cailles did not sufficiently control the populace to bring in all the insurgents in his district. The proceedings of surrender were orderly.

Working For Band Concert.

To-morrow the citizens' committee, taking an interest in band concerts, will canvass the citizens for an annual contribution, a time-honored custom with many. It is a kindly act of those who have money to spare to provide pleasant evenings in the parks for those who have to work hard during the day. It is a small fraction of the good in the brotherhood of man. It gives the greatest amount of the pleasure because it entertains thousands. The gentlemen leading in the good work should receive a cordial reception, and be sent away with kind remembrances.

Generous School Children.

Yesterday afternoon the children of the Princess street Methodist Sunday school contributed $40.58, which they will present to Mrs. Ireland, wife of the watchman who died as a result of the burning of the steamer James Swift. That so large a sum was given by the children is highly creditable to the generosity and sympathy of the little school. It is an example worthy of emulation.

A SCIENTIFIC REVENGE.

How a Man Got Even With the Murderer of His Cat.

"A big German tailor killed my cat not long ago," said a young man about town, "but I got good and even with him. I have rooms in one of the old buildings near Jackson square," he went on, "and this tailor's quarters were on the same floor. He had five or six canary birds that he used to turn loose in his bedroom during the day, and I had a big yellow cat of a prowling disposition. Naturally the combination was dangerous, and one evening a couple of weeks ago the tailor came home just in time to catch my cat wiping yellow tail feathers off his whiskers. The best bird in his collection was missing, and it didn't require a Sherlock Holmes to tell what had become of it. I don't blame the tailor for being mad, but he certainly had no business throwing my cat out of the window. He might have selected some other method of execution. The cat struck the brick paved court three stories below, and I picked it up dead as a doornail next morning. Then I got mad myself, but I didn't lose my head. I planned a scientific revenge.

"The cat, as I said before, was yellow, and the breed seems to be rather common. At any rate I had no trouble finding an almost perfect duplicate of the animal that afternoon, and I promptly bought it for 4 bits. I carried it home in a basket and bribed the darky janitor to unlock the tailor's bedroom and put it inside. I knew the poor cat was doomed, of course, but consoled myself with the reflection that it was avenging its species and would wear the crown of feline martyrdom. The tailor returned in an hour or so and was astounded to find the cat sitting on his bed licking its chops. Two more canaries were gone.

"'Donnerundblitzen,' I heard him say awesomely, 'he eat so many birds he must haf wings already! I guess he must fly some when I throw him dot window out!'

"He caugh the cat after a desperate chase and took it to the back porch, where he dropped it with his own hands.

"'I bet dot settles you!' he muttered as he came in.

"I rescued the remains from the ash barrel and immediately hired a boy to take them away and match them with another live yellow cat. My conscience smote me, but I determined to vanquish the tailor if I had to exterminate the entire tribe of yellow cats in doing it. My boy brought me a fresh specimen next day, and five minutes after I heard the tailor go I had it in his den. He returned at about 6, and as soon as he opened his door a yellow cat dashed out with a canary in its mouth.

"'Himmel!' he gasped and turned as white as a sheet.

"I was coming up stairs at the time, and the animal almost ran into me.

"'Do you know dot cat?' he asked tremulously, swallowing in his throat before he could speak.

"'What cat?' said I, looking around, and I thought he was about to have a fit.

"He glared at me a moment in silence. Then he went straight down stairs and notified the landlord he was going to move out of the house. Next day he departed, bag and baggage, but the best of it was that I succeeded in smuggling the cat into one of his big boxes just before he left, and he carried it away with him. I don't know where he went and am all curiosity to learn what happened. It wouldn't surprise me to hear of him in one of the hospitals, being treated for temporary insanity. If I can locate him and find he is out of cats, I have another yellow duplicate ready to slip in at his window. Meanwhile I consider my murdered pet fully revenged."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.
