Oakville couple searching for mysterious Good Samaritan

by David Lea

An Oakville man is hoping the Good Samaritan responsible for saving his life earlier this month will come forward and receive some much deserved recognition.

On Tuesday, April 2, at around 6:05 p.m. Brian Hoffman, 54, was cycling home from work when he suffered a massive heart attack and collapsed in the area of Upper Middle Road and Joshua Creek Drive.

Hoffman's wife, Denise Frenette, said several people rushed to where he had fallen, including one stranger who began performing CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation).

"Apparently there's good CPR and bad CPR and this person performed really good CPR," said Frenette.

"They knew what they were doing and that's why my husband is alive today."

Frenette said the skilled person was able to keep Hoffman alive until paramedics arrived minutes later.
