HEART DISEASE.

Some Facts Regarding the Rapid Increase of Heart Trouble.

Heart trouble, at least among the Americans, is certainly increasing and while this may be largely due to the excitement and worry of American business life, it is more often the result of weak stomachs, or poor digestion.

Real organic disease is incurable; but not one case in a hundred of heart trouble is organic.

The close relation between heart trouble and poor digestion is because both organs are controlled by the same great nerves, the sympathetic and the pneumogastric.

In another way also the heart is affected by the form of poor digestion, which causes gas and fermentation from half digested food. There is a feeling of oppression and heaviness in the chest caused by pressure of the distended stomach on the heart and lungs, interfering with their action; hence arises palpitation and short breath.

Poor digestion also poisons the blood, making it thin and watery, which irritates and weakens the heart.

The most sensible treatment for heart trouble is to improve the digestion and to insure the prompt assimilation of food.

This can be done by the regular use after meals of some safe, pleasant and effective digestive preparation, like Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which may be found at drug stores, and which contain valuable, harmless digestive elements in a pleasant, convenient form.

It is safe to say that the regular, persistent use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at meal time will cure any form of stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

PRINCIPAL GRANT'S IDEAS.

REGARDING THE ATTITUDE OF THE FRENCH CANADIANS

To the Present War—Says That It Has Been Admirable—Mr. Fielding Deserves Praise for Lowering the Tariff on British Goods.

Concerning the attitude of the French-speaking Canadians in regard to the present war, principal Grant says:

"On the whole, it has been admirable, but to understand it one must understand them and their position. 'Put yourself in his place' is always a righteous demand. Well, suppose that Canada belonged to France and not to Britain; that one province was British and had been British for two centuries before French settlers came to the country, and that the other six provinces were French; would that one province shout enthusiastically and give its children and its wealth lavishly for the glory of France, were France engaged in a distant war, on the merits of which our own mother country and the rest of the world were—to say the least—by no means clear? Not a bit of it. No one would expect anything so unreasonable from us. And, if a mob tried to ram the flag of France down our throats, it would not increase our love for that flag to any great extent. In such a case, we would jealously guard every constitutional right we had won. We would be true to the sovereign to whom we had sworn allegiance, but above all we would be true to the country which our forefathers had made and in the soil of which their ashes reposed.

"In time, doubtless, we would fuse with the new and more numerous Canadians and become one people with them; but they would need to have great patience with us and win our affections by legitimate means, if they wished to bring about such a consummation. Could we, little more than half a century after we had fought for political rights, be expected to say more than Mr. Monet said the other day?—I am a Canadian; I am not French, I am not English, but I am Canadian, loving this country because it is the land of our forefathers, who were Canadians, and I will defend inch by inch the bulwark of our political freedom?"

The Tariff Preference.

As to the tariff preference in favor of Britain, principal Grant gives this opinion:

"It is well to get at your opponent's point of view, and quite necessary when he is worth converting; but it is difficult to arrive at intellectual sympathy with professed and protectionist lovers of imperial unity who yet vote against the preferential tariff in favor of Britain. They say that it is a fraud, but can that be if two is less than three? Both parties declare that as the Canadian manufacturer cannot stand on the basis of free trade with Britain, he must have for a time the protection of a fence against all outsiders. But, say some of our friends, the government first made the fence higher and then lowered it in favor of Britain. Even if that were so, it proves nothing against the reality of the preference. Suppose they had made it 100 yards high, it was still only eighty-seven and a-half against the British manufacturer, then only seventy-five, and hereafter it will be only sixty-six and two-thirds. It would be precisely the same if the fence were one hundred miles high. The Canadian manufacturer having been encouraged to go into business has his rights, and the first of these is that the lowering of the fence must be gradual. As all admit that, how can it be said, even by people whose powers of counting are limited to their five fingers, that three and two are the same? What increases the difficulty of appreciating their position is that they contend that a preference in our favor by Britain of even one-fourth as much would be a wonderful boon. In a word, figures mean something on one side of the Atlantic and nothing on the other side. There is no sentiment in trade, says Dr. Montague. Certainly not, echoes Mr Bourassa, and he stands up and votes with the ex-cabinet minister. But the Quebecker adds, there should be no sentiment in voting away public money or in sending off our sons to a more distant and sterner fight than that of trade. Canada for Canadians alone, so far as trade is concerned, cried the Ontarian. Canada for Canadians alone, all through the piece, pleads the Quebecker,—neither cry is worth a cent, but there can be no doubt which is consistent.

"Mr. Fielding is to be congratulated that the state of the revenue enabled him to make the duties on British goods lower; but as the previous lowering had increased the revenue, he should have kept his old tone instead of hinting that he is weary in well doing. 'I do not think,' he gently hints, 'that the advocate of tariff revision would ask us to go, on that class of articles, below the rates we have now named,' that is thirty-three and one-third per cent. Will they not? We shall see. But, after all, it was perhaps necessary for him to throw a tub to the whale, and everything depends on what is meant by a reasonable time in the future."

"Leo" Produced at Rockwood.

Through the kindness and generosity of Mr. Telgmann and the players in "Leo, the Royal Cadet," the patients of Rockwood hospital had the pleasure of seeing the military opera produced last night in Rockwood music hall. The performance was greatly enjoyed by the patients who frequently applauded. Miss Maud Orser assumed the role of "Caroline," and Sergt. Bailey acted the part of "Wind." Miss Madeline Campion's sweet singing held the audience spellbound. Oscar Telgmann can fill any role in the play, but those of the lady principals, and he grieves very much over this limitation. He appeared in several last night, taking the part of the French professor with satisfaction. The orchestral music was splendidly rendered. W. Shea and D. P. Brannigan did the stage setting.

After the performance the players and a few friends were served with refreshments in the dining room. Here they were waited upon is splendid style by "Billy" Shea, and a number of the nurses. The guests were then granted an unusual favor in having the concert hall placed at their disposal for dancing. At eleven o'clock the vans started for the city, the party having had a delightful evening.

FINE MUSICAL ORGANIZATION.

Boston Ladies' Symphony Orchestra Attracts a Large Audience.

Seldom indeed have Kingstonians had an opportunity of enjoying such rich orchestral music as that furnished last evening by the Boston ladies' symphony orchestra. The character of tone, the attack, finish, volume and subdued features marks the organization as being above the average band of musicians appearing before the public, while the specialists are artists who look down from the mountainous heights to which their skill has raised them upon the struggling lesser lights below. The moment the first strains of the national anthem filled the spacious hall, the vast audience realized that a rare treat was in store for them, nor was this conjecture without reason.

The programme, from a musical standpoint, was heavily burdened, but varied. It contained eleven items, but the insatiable audience demanded more than the printed list called for, and succeeded in securing upwards of twenty-five numbers and even then were loth to depart. The opening March from the "Jolly Musketeer," a stirring composition, required an encore, a negro sketch being given. This was followed by Rossini's overture to William Tell in its completeness, calling for great execution on the part of the clarionet, trombone and violins, but the musicians played it through without a falter or error. Of a vastly different shade was Schubert's Allegro Moderato from an unfinished symphony, calling for shade, color and expression; the harmonies blended beautifully and finished soft and gentle like a summer zephyr waiting through the tree tops. The other items were the "Raymond Overture," "An Afternoon at the Races" and the Gypsy Love Song from the opera "The Fortune Teller," all as cleverly produced as skill and talent made possible.

Miss Oda Rudolph is undoubtedly "mistress" of that king of brass instruments, the slide trombone. Her tone is rich and her execution marvellous. Her solo, "The Message," by Brooks, the famous American trombonist and leader of the band bearing his name, was so capably rendered that the audience was enraptured. Her encore number was "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."

Another pleasant surprise greeted the assemblage when Miss Elizabeth Banks rendered her cornet solo, "Grand Russian Fantasia," by Levy, the world-renowned cornetist. Miss Banks possesses the ability of producing that velvety tone so rarely found, but so eagerly sought by all who play that instrument. Added to this is a wonderful execution and range of tone. No less than four encores were accorded and the fair soloist might have gone on playing for the balance of the evening without tiring the audience.

Miss C. Mabel Beaman proved herself another favorite as violin soloist. To say that she draws a "strong bow" would not convey an adequate tribute to her ability. Her power over the instrument lacks nothing in its completeness. Her first item was a pretty little sketch, "The Bird on a Tree," and was played almost entirely in harmonies on the "E" string. After playing three encores she was allowed to give way to Master Filson, mezzo soprano, whose rendition of "Rock of Ages" (Phelps) was inspiring. For an encore he gave that modern ballad, "Because I Love You," responding twice. He possesses a rich voice, well trained.

J. B. McKay had a few words of thanks to say to the audience for liberal patronage, and to the ladies for removing their hats. Should the orchestra ever return to Kingston just as warm a reception would be tendered it.

SANITARY POLICE NEEDED.

COMMISSIONER GORDON'S RECOMMENDATION.

Two Men Should be Appointed to See That the City is Kept Thoroughly Clean—The Medical Officer's Report to the Board of Health.

A regular meeting of the members of the board of health was held in the city solicitor's office at 4:15 p.m. yesterday. There were present: R. T. Walkem, chairman; Messrs. Fee, Fenwick, Simmons, Thompson and Gordon.

The chairman reported that the past month, as regards health matters, had been uneventful. Now that robins had returned, he thought it advisable to see that the by-laws for cleansing and purification of the city were strictly enforced. The city should be subjected to a thorough inspection. On March 9th the chairman wrote the mayor, respecting the appointment of vaccinating officers, and the council subsequently appointed Dr. Fee. The contract with the doctor is made particularly for the benefit of those who cannot afford to pay vaccination fees. Persons desirous of being vaccinated are not compelled to go to this officer. On March 9th the chairman had also written to the mayor respecting the drains which empty into the harbor. Dr. Walkem thought it important that action should be taken in this matter at once, as it was very dangerous to the public health to leave the mouths of these drains uncovered, thus allowing poisonous gases to escape into the air in close proximity to wharves, waterside stores and residences.

J. D. Thompson wanted to know if Dr. Fee had secured vaccine, so as to be ready if vaccination were required. Had the council appointed him vaccination officer?

City clerk Drennan, relative to the last question, reported in the affirmative.

The chairman read the section of the medical act governing the matter of vaccination. A place for the work must be opened in each ward.

Dr. Fee, medical health officer, reported two cases of measles, twelve cases of scarlet fever, two of typhoid and one of diphtheria. The health, generally speaking, was fairly good—exceptionally good, when compared with other cities.

Dr. Walkem asked concerning the cleaning of dirty yards. City commissioner Gordon replied that whenever a complaint was made attention was given to it. To carry out the work satisfactorily sanitary policemen were required. If the police commissioners allowed two men to give a entire attention to the work it would probably meet the requirements of the case. The members concurred in this idea.

NEWS FROM QUEEN'S.

Arts Examinations—Medicals Must Make Fifty Per Cent.

The examinations in arts commence next Monday. In former years the examinations started on Saturday, but this session's convocation takes place on May 2nd, later than usual.

A recent regulation of the educational department provides that any person holding an arts degree and who has spent two years in post-graduate work, in a university, may write at the final examinations of the Ontario normal college without attending. Several of Queen's graduates are taking advantage of this new rule, principally the tutors.

The medical oral examinations conclude this evening. The clinics were held at the general hospital.

Medical students are now required to make fifty per cent. on their examinations, instead of forty as formerly. This is the same percentage required by the Ontario council. The big increase is not at all relished by the meds., but perhaps the change is very desirable in view of the comparatively easy entrance to the medical course.

The programme for next year's theological alumni conference appears in Queen's Quarterly. Its scope is wider than ever. Besides theological, philosophical, political, social and economic questions, a scientific subject has found a place on the programme, which is now almost complete in its aim.

B. B. Bridge of the graduating class in medicine will give the valedictory at the convocation proceedings on Friday.

A CAREFUL CONTRACTOR.

Spent Hundreds of Dollars to Obtain Freedom From Asthma — Was Permanently Cured by Clarke's Kola Compound.

Mr. Albert Dixon, contractor, Nanaimo, B.C., writes: "For nearly nine years I have been a constant sufferer from bronchial asthma, night after night having to sleep sitting up in a chair. I spent hundreds of dollars with doctors and remedies, but got only temporary relief. My druggist, Mr. Stearman, recommended Clarke's Kola Compound. I took in all five bottles of this grand medicine, and am to-day completely cured. I can now sleep well every night, and now play my instrument in the city band once more." This remarkable cure is also certified by Mr. F. C. Stearman, Phm.B., one of Nanaimo's leading druggists. Sold by all druggists, or by the G. & M. Co., Limited, 121 Church street, Toronto.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Archaealogy and the Scriptures.

Kingston, April 3.—(To the Editor): Mr. Hoppins says that he can by no means possibly make what the bible says agree with modern archaeology. If there is one branch of evidence that overwhelmingly proves the truth of bible history that evidence is archaeology. It is too late to deny what all the learned archaeologists assert is unquestionable, the substantial agreement of their researches and the bible. Even Halevy, the eminent higher critic, prejudiced although he is against any view based upon the historical accuracy of the old testament, has admitted that his archaeological researches have forced him to believe in the essential truth of the early books of scripture. I understand that these are the very books which Mr. Hoppins is most certain are in irreconcilable conflict with archaeology.—THE ROSETTA STONE.
