TARTE AT IT AGAIN.

The Whig has already referred to Hon. Mr. Tarte's great weakness, that he will talk, and talk too much occasionally. He is understood to be unwell. Last year he went to Paris for an operation which was successfully performed. He was feeling the effects of it, or perhaps a return of the old trouble, as parliament met, and he got a commission from it. This was to represent Canada at the French exposition. He was going that way. He could attend to his personal and the public affairs at the same time.

That he is a man of marvellous activity nobody doubts. He was somewhat ubiquitous for awhile, appearing now in London and now in Paris, at a series of events, in such rapid succession that some wondered how he did it. That was Tarte, the man of energy. That he is a discreet politician few will admit. It is the London Chronicle that now comments upon his utterances in France. He has, it seems, been going to extremes in his adoration of La Belle France. French-Canada is still looking towards it, and he wants France to still look toward French Canada. "Frenchmen who come to us," he said, "can be certain of finding French laws and arms open to welcome them." This was gushing enough, but he went further last week, in a lecture in the Canadian section of the exposition, and hinted that Quebec was anxious to adopt the French tri-colour. It can never be. The French flag was lowered, as a national emblem, when French Canada passed under British rule, and there is no hope of it being restored to its old position. Mr. Tarte knows this so very well that it is surprising he should ignore it. French sympathy and friendship may be desirable, but if these cannot be had without false promises and deception they had better be abandoned.

The London Chronicle is warranted in asking whom Mr. Tarte represents at the exposition. He is the Canadian commissioner and has all Canada to talk about, not Quebec alone. "It is a pity," says the Chronicle, "that he does not imitate his predecessor in Paris, Sir Wilfred Laurier, the present premier of Canada." The opposition in the Canadian commons are after him at present, and some of their inquiries are not without reason.

A MALICIOUS ASSAILANT.

Mr. Sifton, away in Europe for medical treatment, was on Tuesday night submitted to a personal and malicious attack at the hands of Mr. Davin. This erratic member of the commons discovered that Mr. Burrows, of Dauphin, had procured a timber limit in Manitoba upon advantageous terms, because he was related to the minister of the interior, his brother-in-law, because the regulation had been changed from the system of tender to one of double fees. Mr. Davin charged nepotism and rascality against Mr. Sifton.

Mr. Sutherland, who has been administering the interior department in the absence of the minister, pointed out that the change in the regulations was made at the instance of the crown lands commissioner, in the interest of the settlers, and that the double fees imposed upon Mr. Burrows had netted the government $100 per square mile, while the highest revenue received before that, and from sale by tender, was $79.10.

Incidentally the discussion revived the trafficing by the conservative party in timber limits. All of 500 berths were given away to friends and supporters of the government, and one of these was Mr. Davin, who got a block fifty miles square without money and without price, and did not even pay the ground rent upon it.

Dr. Macdonald went into particulars, and because he mentioned Dr. Sproule as an applicant for a timber berth there was a scene. Dr. Sproule said he had not asked for any favour for himself, and, headed by the stentorian Foster, the opposition kept up such a row, with demands of "withdraw," that Dr. Macdonald was obliged to do so. But as soon as calm had been restored he said he was quoting from the return made by this conservative government, to which Dr. Sproule had not before taken exception.

It was a rare row all round and Mr. Davin had more than reason to be satisfied. He wanted, early in the day, some one to walk on the tail of his coat, and several members did it, and in the melee that followed he was severely hammered. His motion, too, implying nepotism with Mr. Sifton, was lost by a vote of two to one.

The house had better adjourn. It is doing very little that is commendable, and its rows and ructions are a disgrace to the country.

RE-ORGANIZING THE ARMY.

Several English writers have passed judgment upon the British army as it has figured in the South African war. They have generally come to the conclusion that it must be re-organized, and upon an entirely new basis. The latest, and perhaps the most pungent critic, is A. E. Hales, the war correspondent of the London News, who has been an eye-witness of many doings, who has travelled with the army and suffered with it, and knows its wants most thoroughly.

A recent letter of this old campaigner points out that if Britain gets any lesson from the one hundred millions of dollars it has spent in South Africa, and the one hundred millions more which must be expended ere the end is reached, it is that her officers must get their commissions by earning them. Its army has received many reverses, but he declares that "seldom have the generals been to blame; the blame lies wholly and solely with the British nation, for ever allowing the army to be hampered by raw lads, as officers, lads unfit, because untrained, to carry out a superior officer's instructions, mere lads who had not enough of the tried soldier in them to inspire their men to keep on fighting when the fortune of war was turning against them."

Mr. Hales says he knows that anyone may find fault—it is what may be called a fool's trick—but he has a remedy to suggest. What is it?

"As soon as there is a vacancy in a regiment for a commissioned officer let the post be given, as a matter of right, to the senior sergeant in the regiment. Let him thenceforth take his step with any other officer, even to the rank of marshal. If this is done, we will always have matured men to officer our troops in the field in time of war. They may not be too graceful at a ball; they may not shine at fashionable receptions; they may not even know just how to handle a knife and fork daintily at mess; but they will know how to put heart into a lot of panic-stricken recruits, who are funking in a tight place. They will know how to use a bayonet or a sabre when shot and shell was falling thick as hail, though they may be clumsy with knife and fork. They will not hash up a commanding officer's orders, and turn victory into defeat. They will not stand irresolute and feebly helpless when they ought to be acting a part. They will, in a word, be tried and seasoned soldiers, and the troops fighting under them will be thoroughly aware of the fact.

"If something of this kind is done we shall hear no more about the difficulty of getting good smart men to join the army, because young fellows with ambitious aspirations will see a reasonable chance of rising in life by joining the army. Give the private a fair chance of advancement and the British army in ten years' time will be an institution that all Europe will dread. The wealthy families who have sons whom they desire to be soldiers can have their youngsters entered as cadets at military colleges, where from early boyhood they can be trained to know, first of all, a private soldier's duty, then, if they are made of the stuff that officers should be made of, they can win their way to the front rank; if they are not fashioned out of the right material, let them fall out of the service. Better that they should so fall than that Britain should ever learn again the lessons learned on these African battlefields."

The most the military colleges should do for soldiers is to educate them as the technical schools are educating the youth for the trades. They should know what to do, how to handle the implements of war, and how to handle themselves, and then go into the service prepared to work their way to commissions upon their merits rather than their shape. The army must be relieved of all its social thraldom. It is the nations hope only as it is managed and directed with a regard to its fitness for the work it has in hand.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Sir Charles Tupper, visiting Toronto, intimated that he has no use for the independent in politics. They can return the compliment and say that they have no use for him.

Hobson, of American-Spanish war fame, the man who blew up the Merrimac at the peril of his life, has broken in health at Manila and been invalided. Has the nation no reward for a man like this?

Why did not E. F. Clarke go to the last meeting of the Orange lodge for North America? Is it so that he and Clarke Wallace have fallen out, that they do not speak as they pass by? So rumour has it.

The leader of the opposition is getting personal. "When a man enters the parliament of Canada," said Sir Charles, "as an independent, he goes to the highest bidder." One of Sir Charles' right hand men formerly posed as an independent. No reference is made to him of course.

Things have changed since Clarke Wallace became the head of the Orange order in Canada. He made his usual attack on the liberal party in his last annual address, and it was not endorsed by the committee to which it was referred and the lodge. Has this been any lesson for Mr. Wallace?

Would Leave "Christian" Out.

The story is going the rounds that when W. J. F. Mallagh, late secretary of the Y.M.C.A., was canvassing for subscriptions toward running the association, he met a citizen whose religious scruples did not inconvenience him very much. When asked for a subscription he replied that he would give $100 to the institution if they would eliminate the word "christian." He was informed that he did not own enough of this world's possessions to effect the word's removal, and he refused to give anything.

VOTE RESULTED IN A TIE.

COULD NOT APPOINT A JAIL PHYSICIAN.

Grants Received For Roads—Want Upper Portion of Johnston Street Opened—The Vote For Jail Physician—Other Matters.

The county council met at 2:15 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, all members being in attendance. Dr. Spankie, county inspector of schools, submitted his annual report, which was very interesting and well prepared and received the applause of the councillors. On motion of M. Avery, seconded by R. J. Spoor, the report was adopted, and reference made to the interest taken by the inspector in the schools under his able supervision.

The committee appointed to meet a deputation from the Kingston city council anent the G.T.R. railway crossing at Kingston Junction, submitted a report of their doings.

The delegation, consisting of W. T. Hunt, chairman, John E. Campbell and R. Mozier, appointed by the council to interview the minister of public works of Ontario regarding the granting of aid to roads in the county, and to assist the delegation from the township of Portland re legislation to remove a dam at Petworth for the purpose of draining the drowned lands in the said township, reported as follows:

"We secured grants on the following roads: Abinger and Miller, $350; Jones' Falls and Battersea, $300; Lavant road, $400; Mississippi Bridge, $400; Northbrook and Arden road, $300; Oak Flats and Wagar road, $500; Vennachar road, $400; Arden and Harlowe road, $300; Addington road, $400; total, $3,250.

"We and the delegation from Portland also succeeded in having the public works department engineer ordered to the township of Portland to make surveys and estimates of property affected, and to report to the government at its next session, when the government will reintroduce the township of Portland bill free of expense to the township, and deal with the damage as the facts warrant."

Joseph Gorrie, George Ford and Thomas Breck appeared before the council and asked that steps be taken to have Raglan street near Portsmouth (the upper portion of Johnston street), opened a distance of forty rods. On motion of R. J. Spoor, seconded by M. Avery, the council decided to visit Portsmouth and examine the road in question.

Jail Physician Vote.

Moved by William Toner, that Dr. Sands, Kingston be appointed jail surgeon, and that the by-law be filled out accordingly.

Moved in amendment by George Wright that the by-law be filled in with the name of Dr. McBride, Cataraqui.

The vote on the amendment resulted as follows:

Yeas—Avery, Hughson, Miller, Mozier, Spoor, Wright—6.

Nays—Campbell, Fair, Hunt, Reynolds, Trousdale, Toner—6. The amendment was lost.

The vote on the original motion resulted:

Yeas—Campbell, Fair, Hunt, Reynolds, Trousdale, Toner—6.

Nays—Avery, Hughson, Miller, Mozier, Spoor, Wright—6. The motion was lost resulting in a tie.

Moved by R. J. Spoor that Dr. Herald be appointed.

Moved in amendment by W. Toner that Dr. Sands be appointed.

Vote on the amendment resulted:

Yeas—Campbell, Fair, Hunt, Reynolds, Trousdale, Toner—6.

Nays—Miller, Avery, Hughson, Mozier, Spoor, Wright—6.

Vote on the motion:

Yeas—Miller, Avery, Hughson, Mozier, Spoor, Wright—6.

Nays—Campbell, Fair, Hunt, Reynolds, Trousdale, Toner—6.

Moved by M. Avery that Dr. Gibson, Kingston, be appointed jail surgeon.

Moved by William Toner that Dr. Sands be the appointee.

Mr. Reynolds thought the nominations were becoming a farce, and a halt should be called. He put in a strong plea for Dr. Sands, who had been a faithful resident of the county for many years, and had worked in the interests of the county. No better man could be got for the position. Mr. Spoor supported Dr. Gibson for the same reasons.

The amendment was lost on the same vote as before. The motion also resulted in a tie.

The council then rested awhile from their practice in voting, and listened to J. L. Whiting, Q.C., give his opinion on the question of the council appointing representatives on the collegiate institute board. He gave it as his opinion that while on a technical point the council might have the power to have representatives there, as a matter of equity it had not.

County engineer Smith reported that the Kingston-Napanee road was in excellent condition, with the exception of a few culverts which would be attended to at once.

Regarding the complaint of William Crallin, of Cataraqui, concerning a ditch from which his land is flooded, engineer Smith said that the county was not to blame for the trouble which was really caused by the G.T.R.

J. H. Hughson had something to say about the $69 which the late treasurer Vanluven swore he left in the office, belonging to the Waterloo-Sydenham road. The matter was left for the consideration of the committee on roads and bridges, which will hear the statements of the reeve of Loborough and the secretary of the road.

The clerk will write the G.T.R. company and ask them to keep the culvert at Cataraqui, which is causing over-flooding to the land of William Crallin, in order.

At four o'clock the council adjourned to meet Thursday morning at ten o'clock.

A "scrap" took place last night at about half past nine o'clock at the corner of King and William streets. It appears that a man wanted his wife to give up sailing and return home. The captain of the craft resented this interference on the part of the husband and "punched" him. The woman screamed and a crowd collected.

A meeting of the city property committee was called for four o'clock yesterday, but only Ald. McLeod, McFarlane and Farrell put in an appearance. An adjournment took place until three o'clock this afternoon.

The distinguishing trait about this store is— is it? Can you tell?

It isn't merely the size of the business, no improved facilities. It is, if you please, the effective combination of first-class goods at remar low prices. If we were to put in a few words constitutes the real attraction here, we should that we make a business of looking after the int of customers. Others do the same to a certai tent. It is said to us that we go beyond reaso looking after the interests of our customers. We mean to go beyond reason, but, when people say we do, they thereby prove that we are foremo liberal dealing. It is really nothing but busi Everything you see here has its reason in plain ness, and that business is to give all the people for little—not to seem to do it, but to do it.

George Mills, University avenue, says the finest tree in Kingston is near the general hospital, immediately in front of Dr. Third's residence. The tree is a hard maple, and is in the prime of life, being about twenty-five years old. It could not have been more symmetrical had it been planned and made to order. Its limbs are all graceful and its foliage is very dense and luxuriant. People are frequently seen standing beneath its spreading branches, and gazing up through them into the maze of limbs, twigs and green leaves above, through which no ray of the sun can pierce. It is a sight most beautiful to behold, and fills the gazer with admiration and thankfulness. It is about the most perfect piece of work fashioned by the skilful hand of Nature.

Do Their Own Business.

With reference to C. L. Meyer's letter to alderman Donnelly, regarding the employment of union labor in the construction of the proposed smelter plant here, a prominent member of the local labor unions stated that while the text of Mr. Meyer's communication was satisfactory, at the same time alderman Donnelly had no authority to write to Mr. Meyer. "You can say for me, and I voice the sentiments of the labor party, that we are quite capable of attending to our own business, and do not ask alderman Donnelly or any other outsider to look after our private affairs. Our secretary wrote to Mr. Meyer, and it is upon the answer to this letter that we will act."
