COURT HOUSE TROUBLES.

THE STRIFE AMONG OFFICIALS AGAIN DISCUSSED.

Councillor Reynolds Says a Halt Must Be Called—Clerk Edwards Denies a Charge of C. H. Corbett, Who Replies.

The county council met again on Friday morning at ten o'clock. A report was received from county solicitor Whiting regarding the opening of Raglan street. The solicitor reported that as this street appears to be in the village of Portsmouth, he was of the opinion that the county council could not assist the petitioners, the jurisdiction over the street being in the village of Portsmouth. Regarding the sidewalk on the Front road beyond the asylum, the solicitor reported that this matter also was one for the local municipality to deal with. It was under their jurisdiction, and not of the county. The report was adopted.

Auditor Minnes reported that he had examined the books of the county engineer and found them correct.

Councillor Avery again brought to the attention of the council the advisability of granting aid to the township of Oso towards paying the big expense incurred by that township in connection with the Burk small pox case.

Councillor Reynolds suggested that the county council purchase the house in which the patient had been, bring it to the court house grounds, and have it as a club house for the council. The other councillors smiled at this suggestion, but shook their heads. The warden stated that the township board of health should have notified the provincial board of health, and have had an expert examine into the matter. The township was disputing Dr. Coutlee's bill of $150, which was considered too large. It was further held in the township that the disease might not have been small pox, and that the board of health there neglected its duty. Councillor Campbell pointed out that the council had started the township of Hinchinbrooke 200 when small pox was in that township, and he thought that Oso should also receive aid. Councillor Reynolds thought that Dr. Coutlee had perhaps charged far more than he expected to collect.

On motion of councillors Campbell and Avery a grant of $125 to the township of Oso was made.

Moved by councillor Campbell, seconded by councillor Avery, that the county engineer's salary be fixed at seventy five dollars. The salary up to the present time was sixty dollars. The motion was carried.

Councillor Fair asked for particulars regarding the complaint of clerk Edwards that the sheriff's office was being used as a sleeping apartment, and if there was any danger of the insurance companies raising their rates. Councillor Trousdale said he understood that the office at present was not being used as a sleeping apartment.

Councillor Reynolds stated there was trouble among officials regarding the doing of work around the court house. Jailer Corbett had stated that caretaker Sheppard should cut a certain portion of the grass as the prisoners had been ordered not to do so any longer. The speaker said that there seemed to be no one in control around the place, and the county property committee was at a loss to know whose duty it was to do anything. The council should at once act and stop the friction among the officials. If this could not be done, then he would suggest that the council send councillor Hunter to Toronto to ask the government to dismiss the officials at one end of the court house, and the county council would make a general dismissal at the other. A certain official should be made to know that he is not almighty in the court house. Mr. Reynolds further stated, jocularly, that he himself might occupy the position of sheriff, make a good showing and have a good time. He would like the council to pass a resolution empowering the property committee to look after the matters he had spoken about.

Clerk Edwards referred to articles in the Times newspaper regarding county officials, and to a statement made by C. H. Corbett that he (Edwards) had given information contained in these articles to the Times. Clerk Edwards denied the charge and read letters from the editor of the Times and a Kingston lawyer, the former denying that Mr. Edwards had given the paper any information or written any articles for it, and from the lawyer, claiming that he had made no such statement about Mr. Edwards.

Mr. Corbett was present and stated, in reply, that he had simply repeated what had been told to him and that was that Mr. Edwards had been seen in the Times office frequently, and that therefore suspicion was directed against him. That was all there was in the matter. Mr. Corbett emphatically denied saying anything against Mr. Edwards on his own account.

Councillor Reynolds asked Mr. Corbett about cutting the grass, and the latter stated that he could not order the prisoners to do any work without orders from his superior officer.

An adjournment was made at noon until two o'clock this afternoon.

Musicale At The Parsonage.

The women's missionary society of Sydenham street Methodist church, held a private musicale at the home of Mrs. (Rev.) E. B. Langley last evening. There were a number of ladies present, but very few gentlemen. Mrs. D. H. Starr, Mrs. H. R. Chown, Miss Alice Chown, Miss Daisy Chown, Miss M. Shaw, Miss R. McCartney, Miss Ethel Armstrong, F. Cunningham and others took part in the programme. Refreshments were afterwards served.

To Have A Conference.

The street railway employees' union will confer on Sunday with superintendent Nickle, concerning some demands the members of the union will likely make. The men complain more of the long hours they have to work than anything else. They say that if the company would put on four extra men, instead of two the hours of labor could be satisfactorily arranged. The feeling exists that the union and the company can amicably arrange matters.

PRISONERS WERE TRIED.

GOLDSMITH GETS EXTRA SENTENCE OF TWO YEARS.

Dolhensy Off on Suspended Sentence—Goldsmith Denied All Knowledge of His Assault—Docket of Non-Jury Sittings on Monday.

The last cases before the court of general sessions this morning were against two prisoners in Kingston penitentiary who were both charged with serious offences. The charge against Charles Goldsmith was, on March 28th, unlawfully wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm to Miss Mary Smith, assistant matron of the women's ward. As a result of the desperate assault, committed with the aid of a blunt knife, Miss Smith was in a dangerous condition for some time. The charge against Timothy Dohensy was an assault upon Charles H. Martin, steward of the penitentiary, on February 26th last. Dohensy threw a bucket of hot soup at Mr. Martin because the latter reported him for using bad language to him. Both prisoners pleaded "not guilty" to the charges.

The evidence submitted against both prisoners was very conclusive, although Goldsmith denied all knowledge of the charge against him. The jury returned a verdict of "guilty" against both prisoners, without leaving their places. The judge sentenced Goldsmith to two years in the penitentiary, additional to his present term of twenty-one years, of which he served five. Dolhensy got off on suspended sentence.

David Granger, township of Kingston, was sentenced to three months in jail for assaulting his wife.

The court concluded at half past eleven o'clock.

Non-Jury Sittings.

The non-jury high court sittings open on Monday afternoon before justice McMahon. These cases are entered for trial:

Frederick Foxbon vs. the Hamilton steel and iron company, limited. Action for payment of price of phosphate ore.

Catharine M. Campsall vs. R. W. Folger and the Kingston, Portsmouth & Cataraqui railway company. Action for balance of price of real estate.

John Sigsworth vs. the Kingston & Pembroke railway company. Action for mandamus to continue railway station and siding; also for damages for destruction by fire of plaintiff's stable and shed.

Maud VanVoughnet vs. George Claxton. Action to set aside a tax sale of land.

Jacob Ritter vs. J. D. Fairfield. Action to recover amount of United States judgment obtained in Pennsylvania.

William and Miles Wellbourne vs. Mary Jane Scott, administratrix. Action for administration of estate of the late Marmaduke Wellbourne.

Mourning A Faithful Priest.

Erinsville, June 13. The sad news of the death of our parish priest, Father Cicolari, who died in Kingston last week, has cast a gloom over the community. He was a good, faithful and upright clergyman and will be greatly missed. He was ailing for a long time, but attended to his duties a month prior to his death. A number from here attended his funeral on Thursday. Fr. Mahar, Kingston, is here for the present and will remain until further arrangements are made. Thomas O'Neill, after spending a couple of weeks with his friends here, returned to Washington last week. Michael Welsh, son of Patrick Welsh, formerly of this place, is visiting his friends after an absence of thirty years. He finds many changes since he left here. W. M. Phelan returned on Tuesday. A. J. Stewart is visiting his friends here. The little son of William Hopkins died last week. The marriage of Thomas Murphy and Miss Finlin was announced on Sunday. The Misses Burns entertained a number of friends the evening, and a very pleasant time was spent. Visitors: B. Scanlon and sister and A. Kenny and sister, Enterprise, at M. Burns'. Miss C. Thompson and Miss F. McMullen at Miss Gertie Murphy's. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kilborn at Mrs. McMullen's. The river drivers are expected at the station next week. Arrangements are being made to haul out the timber.

Injured By Falling Scaffold.

Plevna, June 11.—A pleasant event occurred on Wednesday last at the home of Leonard Pring, when Miss Lena Pring and Edward White were united in holy matrimony by Rev. G. S. White. The bride was handsomely attired in white cashmere, trimmed with silk and lace, while the bridesmaid looked exceedingly pretty in black, trimmed with plaid silk. The number of presents was large. Samuel Barton held a large bee last week building a shed. One of the scaffolds broke down and with it fell ten men. The only two injured were James W. Stalker and Haggard Young. The former left for the hospital in Kingston the next day. Visitors: Dr. Richardson and Mr. Bishop at Robert Stewart's, Thomas Southworth, clerk of forestry, at A. W. Woods'; Mrs. F. Ostler, sr., Kingston, at G. Ostler's.

Injured At Collins Bay.

Collins Bay, June 14.—A number of our young people attended a Free Methodist meeting at Cataraqui last Sunday. Quite a serious accident happened a young man while unloading the boats; he had one leg smashed and the other broken. Rev. Mrs. Johnson, Sudbury, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Purdy. Miss Frances Smith is visiting at William Clement's. Miss D. Reid is the guest of the Misses Marsh. Robert Henderson, Stella, spent Sunday at Miss Jennie McKay's. Bert Letherland, Elginburg, spent Sunday at Mr. Marsh's.

Coming On A Cruise.

The second annual cruise of the members of the Brantford Y.M.C.A. will be held this year from July 9th to July 27th. They will embark at Hamilton on the schooner Maple Leaf, and will call at Charlotte, Rochester, etc., on their way to Kingston and the Thousand Islands. Among the latter they will spend a week. So far forty-three young men have planned for the trip. When the vessel returns the ladies' auxiliary will engage it and take a similar trip. Twenty-three ladies have signified their intentions of going on the cruise.

Dr. Creegan, Delta, is in the city visiting friends.

THE PLACE OF ROWS.

So It Has Been For Over a Dozen Years.

Kingston News.

The Kingston post office is still conducted in such a way as to leave room for criticism. It was thought that after the last investigation the officials would endeavor to bring about harmony in the staff, but it seems, that if they tried to do this, they have signally failed. Another investigation will have to be held, and the affairs of the office will again be told to the world.

A letter carrier was suspended recently for an apparent error in the performance of his duty. He took a batch of letters to a citizen. The carrier examined them carefully, stamped them, and tied them up. They were delivered in the morning, and in the afternoon he found on his desk two letters which had been returned after being opened by the citizen he had delivered the parcel of letters to in the morning. The letters were not for the citizen in question but for another, and the carrier was charged with having performed his duty in a very careless manner.

He denied the accusation to Mr. Driver in a warm way, and when the deputy postmaster came towards him, he put up his hand and said: "I do not want you to come near me." The deputy warned him against putting up his hand to strike him. The carrier replied: "I do not want to strike you, but all that I desire is for you to keep away from me."

The letters in dispute bore the letter carrier's stamp, but he denied that he ever stamped them or that he had delivered them to any one. The first he saw of them was when they were on his desk. He put the letters in his pocket, and in spite of protestations, went to the house of the resident, to whom they were wrongfully delivered, and asked for an explanation. Before he could get it, the deputy arrived, and warned the citizen to refuse to tell the letter-carrier anything. When he returned to the office, Mr. Gunn, a very nice man, but a poor postmaster, called the letter-carrier in, and suspended him without giving him a chance to tell his side of the case.

The case is rather mysterious. The two letters which the carrier says he never saw, were found on his desk with his stamp on them, and had been opened by a citizen to whom he said he never delivered them. If this cannot be satisfactorily cleared up it will show a loose way of running business in the Kingston postoffice. The reporter has learned from different sources that the stamp which each letter-carrier uses is left on the desks in the office. Why this is the case, has not been learned. Each carrier should have the privilege of controlling his own stamp, and of putting it under lock and key when not in use.

The writer has been informed that an effort to bring about a reform in this matter was once tried. The carriers were allowed to carry the stamps with them. This system worked all right until one of the carriers lost his stamp and then all the stamps were recalled.

It is said that one time a letter-carrier found out that letters had been opened, stamped with his stamp, and then dropped into letter boxes. The carrier says this is a fact, which he will back up when the proper time comes.

There will be an inquiry held in connection with the suspension of the letter-carrier, and at this meeting there will again be some interesting developments. A certain official will be charged with being the cause of discord among the post office officials.

It looks as if a new order of things ought to be, and will have to be created in the Kingston post office, before it is brought up to the standard required for such institutions. Surely there is something wrong, when every little while something occurs which requires the government to settle. One cannot help but think that the postmaster allows too much latitude to some of those under him, and that he has not got that firm grasp on the affairs of the office which he should have in order to conduct it, as it should be. When the present government is changed for a strong conservative administration, the post office will be improved and officials will be got to run it, who are up-to-date, and business like in their methods. In the meantime the public will have to be prepared to hear startling reports about the Kingston post office.

The lady to whom the two letters in question were delivered, said she had opened them in mistake, that they had been left with her by a letter carrier. She gets between two and three hundred letters daily, and has to go over her mail hurriedly. On the morning she received the two letters she opened them without looking at the right side and consequently did not notice who they were addressed to. She is very sorry the mistake happened. She has been here a year, and during that time she has lost twenty-five dollars that had been sent to her in unregistered letters. The missing letters were mostly from the east. She has had no trouble with her mail from the west. Hardly a day passes without her missing letters that were sent to her. She has had the authorities at the post office try to trace up her missing letters, but she has never been able to find them.

The evidence grows stronger that the management of the post office is sadly deficient.

Oriental Steamship Rates Raised.

San Francisco, Cal., June 15.—The Trans-pacific lines to-day advanced their rates from all oriental ports. From Hong-Kong and Shanghai to San Francisco and Pacific coast ports the rate is raised from $185 to $225. From Yokohama to San Francisco the rate is raised to $200; from Kobe to $207.50; and from Nagasaki to $218.

From Hong-Kong to London by way of the Suez canal, the steamship rate is advanced from £57 to £62 in accordance with an arrangement with the representatives of the Suez line.

The rate from San Francisco to Hong-Kong has been $225 for some time, because of a lack of competition. With the present heavy travel to Asiatic ports this advance will mean a large increase in passenger earnings of the Pacific mail and Occidental and Oriental lines.

Cavalry For The Philippines.

San Francisco, June 15.—The Sixth cavalry is assembling here ready to depart for the Philippines, and another detachment will follow July 1st. These are the first troops ordered to the Philippines to relieve the volunteers now on duty there. The homeward movement of volunteers starts during the coming November, and as they are withdrawn their places will be filled by regulars from the United States and Cuba.
