The Slater Shoe for Boys

Made with the knowledge that most foot distortions are the result of wearing ill-shaped shoes in youth, when the bones of the foot are passing through the developing stage.

Boys who wear "Slater Shoes" will never be troubled with foot ills in after life.

Just made as carefully as father's, same selected material, same expert workmanship, same perfected machinery.

GIVE THE NOTICE.

The editor of the Canadian Magazine sees in the announcement that Sir Charles Tupper, if given the opportunity, will have a government of strong and clean men only, a bid for the public confidence. "Sir Charles," he says, "will never lead the conservative party back to victory unless he gives assurance that some of the members of the cabinet of 1895-6 are not to be re-called." Perhaps this is what the Montreal Star has been trying to say, yet has been veiling its thoughts so that its readers have wondered what it meant. "There are at least three men in that cabinet whom the Canadian people will not tolerate." Who are they? Foster, Haggart and Montague. One of them is Sir Charles' right hand man, and the others his most obsequious followers. It may be, as Mr. Cooper asserts in the Canadian Magazine, that the sooner Sir Charles passes the word that they will be kept in the background the better for the conservative party." But Sir Charles is in no hurry to act. He is afraid of the trio. Mr. McLean is authority for the statement that two of them have been under suspension ever since they turned on Sir Mackenzie Powell, and the Mail is authority for the statement that McLean is more desperate than any of them. The people have been given some glimpses of the men who are posing as purists and publicists, and they can be trusted to take care of the conspirators should Sir Charles fail to do it.

PUBLIC SCANDAL MONGERS.

At a political meeting in Rokton Mr. Whitney and Mr. Carscallen made addresses. Mr. Whitney referred to certain pulp land agreements as bare-faced steals. "Cass" went further, being more audacious, and charged that certain members of the government got a "benefit" from supporting the Spanish River agreement. "All these," said he, "are matters which should be carefully thought out by the people."

At first blush one is inclined to regard this as election scandal, for purely campaign purposes. Somehow public men, in discussing politics, will reflect upon each other without meaning very much. It seems that there was some objection to the agreement in question, when it was first presented, but the objection was not confined to the liberal side in the house. There was a seeming misunderstanding, and when it was removed the bill received a cordial endorsement by the house.

Mr. Carscallen, in his place, did not charge any man with political crookedness. He did not allege that any one was "benefitting" by the agreement to which he gave his consent, and he ought to have gone in pursuit of the assumed offenders if he had any evidence against them.

The Brantford Expositor, whose editor is a member of the legislature, says that Messrs. Whitney and Carscallen will not repeat their insinuations on the floor of the assembly, and if they are wise they will not repeat them on the public platform.

VEILED SARCASM.

The Canadian Magazine quotes the action of the American school children in sending a message of sympathy to President Kruger, and adds:

"And Canada, is not behind. The children of Windsor, Ont., are getting up a similar message of sympathy to be sent to Aguinaldo. We cannot afford to be laggards in such grand and noble work. All honour to the children of Windsor, Ontario! Kruger would be a national hero in the United States, and, therefore, why not Aguinaldo in Canada? We are housing the Doukhobour, the Galician, the Pole, Dr. Barnardo's boys, and all the European outcast classes, why should we not offer an asylum to this hero of a thousand battles in the Philippines?"

There is more sense in elevating Aguinaldo than Kruger for the admiration of the people. Kruger chose war, and deliberately invited a waste of life and property rather than enlightened legislation, and he precipitated the crisis when he thought it would redound to his benefit. He was the oppressor; Aguinaldo the oppressed. There is nothing similar in the lives of the men. Aguinaldo represents the native element in the Philippines that was in rebellion against Spanish misrule when America and Spain went to war. He fought for independence because it meant, to his mind, the betterment of the Philipinos. Unfortunately he did not get the impression that under American government the natives would be the better off, and so the war, so far as he is concerned, has gone on, and at last accounts was still in progress.

The school children cannot wisely be taught to regard either Kruger or Aguinaldo as heroes. They may be esteemed as such by their own people, who look at their work with partizan eyes. But American and Canadian scholars can hardly see in them the great characters to whom it is theirs to pay homage in unstinted measure. The heroes they should study, whose [illegible] have their inspiration, are the men of great ideas, plans and purposes. These are not to be found in either Kruger or Aguinaldo, and the day may come when the foolishness of the time may be deeply repented. For the Canadian Magazine sees the matter in the same light as the Whig and writes, "When we have offered Aguinaldo this"—the worship of the children—"the world will know that there are at least two fool nations on the North American continent."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mayor Macdonald is punishing the people because they elected him. He is not carrying himself in that dignified way which is becoming to his office. He is curing the electors of their indifferentism for all time.

The new British Columbia government is conservative, and dominated by Turner, the turned-down of other days. Perhaps it will not be supported by the house, in which case there will be another appeal to the people.

Rev. Dr. Eby estimates that the ravages of consumption among people between twenty and thirty-five years of age cost the province $20,000,000. How? Why is the man not a little more specific? Where did he get his figures, and what do they represent?

There is talk of the school board subsidizing the cooking class of the Y.W.C.A. A proposal to that effect is being discussed. It cannot be acted on by the board. The education to which it makes grants hereafter must be directed and governed by it and it alone.

He was a humourist who invited Sir Charles Tupper to address the picnic near Odessa in whatever manner he chose, and added "politics excepted." Fancy Sir Charles deprived of the privilege of abusing the grits! It was like asking him to dinner and forbidding him to eat.

The Mail now has it that the clean liberals sympathize with Mr. Martin. And what about the conservatives? Mr. McLean is Martin's friend, and, according to the Mail Mr. Lean carries a knife and has been seeking the life of the best men in the party. The clean liberals do not count against this contingency.

Bourassa's bolt in the commons is having the expected effect. It has been referred to as an evidence that the war policy of the government is disapproved in high circles, and it has given the Trifluvien, L'Evenment, and Mr. Thibault the chance to talk. Yet French-Canadian sentiment is tolerably solid for the war.

THE WIT OF THE COUNCIL

Concentrated in Ald. Walkem's Noddle—Scenes Monday Night.

Ald. Walkem is credited with being the wittiest man in the council, and were it not for him many of that body's sessions would be most uninteresting and prosaic. He always manages to get in an expression—sometimes a mere word—while some other alderman is speaking, but the effect it produces is electrical. Monday night's meeting was no exception. A few instances are given:

Ald. Taylor was discussing the Victoria street main. He does not often speak, and when he does he takes his time at it. "We all know," he said in slow and measured tones, "that good water is essential to the health of the city."

"When there's something in it," interrupted Ald. Walkem.

A few minutes later Ald. Donnelly was speaking on the same point. Ald Kent, attired in his closely fitting uniform, was defending the waterworks committee, of which he is chairman. He kept contradicting misstatements of Ald. Donnelly (that gentleman, by the way, seems to make a good many of them, accidentally of course). Ald. Donnelly at last became impatient, and, addressing the mayor, exclaimed, "Mr. mayor, keep that jumping-jack down!" When Ald. Kent rose to reply, he began: "Donnelly Ald. Donnelly, I mean has made some remarks about ——"

"Jumping Jacks," exclaimed Ald. Walkem, amid laughter.

NAPANEE NOTES.

Drove to the Circus—Have Left For Michigan.

Napanee, June 20.—Lemen Bros.' circus drew quite a crowd to the town on Monday. One family of seven, with father and mother, drove forty-five miles to take in the circus. The usual number of fakers accompanied the circus and did the unsuspecting men and boys out of their dollar bills. A team of horses belonging to the Rathbun company broke out of their stable on Sunday night and wandered away. At first it was thought they had been stolen, but yesterday they turned up at Switzerville, in the pound.

The Maggie L. loaded oats for Vanluven yesterday and cleared for Kingston. The cargo was for Richardson & Son, Kingston. Adam Ming and two children left Monday for Cheyboygan, Mich., where they will reside.

"Our soldiers," to the number of about forty, left yesterday morning via B. of Q. railway for a twelve days' drill at Barriefield.

ORANGE LODGE IN SCHOONER.

Incident in Connection With an Institution of the Order.

Toronto Telegram:

One of the leading Orangemen in Winnipeg, when asked for the early history of the order in Manitoba and the north-west wrote as follows: The first lodge was instituted in Manitoba by a few of the officers and men of the First Ontario rifles under Col. (now lord) Wolseley, who commanded the first Red river expedition in 1870. The warrant was carried in the knapsack by ex-alderman C——, of Emerson, all through the Dawson route, and was numbered 1,307. Owing to the large influx of the military and voyageurs who accompanied them it was found impossible to procure a room in which to open the lodge. A little schooner named the Jessie McKenney, which had lately arrived from the lake, lay at anchor in the Assiniboine river. In the cabin of this boat, on the night of October 9th, 1870, the officers of the first Orange lodge west of Owen Sound were appointed and installed. A small table had been taken previously from the room inside the fort in which Louis Riel slept, and on this table was laid the first warrant. Around it sat the following persons, who formed the quorum, in the order named: Stewart Mulvey, lodge 839, Hagersville, Ont.; J. E. Cooper, lodge 136, Toronto; R. J. Hinton, lodge 272, Oakville; R. B. Alberton, lodge 272, Oakville, Wm. D. Derry, lodge 11, Kingston; W. Fargay, lodge 102, Ross Lynne; W. McKee, lodge 811, Picton; Robert Holland, lodge 1111, Millbridge; W. Hickey, lodge 65.

Of the nine seated around that table thirty years ago the writer can only trace two who are now in Manitoba.

FATAL DUEL OF BROTHERS.

James Bearden Kills Robert After a Desperate Fight.

Lawrenceburg, Tenn., June 20.—A desperate duel to the death was fought last evening by James and Robert Bearden, two sons of William Bearden, a well-to-do farmer a few miles from this town. A few days ago a younger brother rode away on a horse belonging to James, without leaving word as to his destination. James and Robert were in a field overseeing the gathering of a crop last evening when the subject was mentioned by James, who was disposed to condemn the younger brother for his action. James spoke harshly of the laggher, abusing him, when Robert told him he would have to stop his vile talk.

The brothers became angered, when James pulled out a knife and attacked Robert. The latter ran to the house and securing a shot gun returned to the scene. After a few words they proposed to lay aside their weapons and fight a battle with their fists. This had progressed to a certain stage when James was being worsted. He seized the gun, and Robert the knife. They battled desperately for a couple of minutes, when James turned the gun on his brother and fired the load of shot through his heart. Robert fell to the ground and died instantly. James has been arrested.

American Wheelmen Tour Europe.

Boston, June 20.—Secretary Bassett, of the league of American wheelmen, announces that 500 members of the league have availed themselves of the opportunity to tour in foreign countries this year under the arrangements that have been made by the league touring bureau. Each of these riders has taken a membership card in the cyclists' touring club. The tours are about to start, and will extend through Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy.
