KNOWN TO PINKERTON.

Two of the Gold Brickers Have Criminal Records.

Montreal, July 4.—While the Pinkerton detective agency had nothing to do with the arrest of the gold brick swindlers, they have furnished the police department with some interesting information about two of the men. The Chicago criminal records contain photographs of the men calling themselves White and Saunders. White's true name is Cameron Boettetter, alias H. Wells, alias C. F. Adams, alias "Red" Adams. He was arrested on May 10th 1900, at Fort Worth, Texas, for attempting to work a gold brick game on a farmer named George Lupe, of Forney, Texas. He is now under bonds for personating a United States assayer.

The man under arrest as Saunders has also several aliases, but his true name is said to be John Blackwell, and he was implicated with Boettetter in the gold brick scheme in Texas, but escaped punishment through the influence of a brother, a conductor on the Missouri Kansas and Texas railway, residing at Dallas, Texas.

The Avowed Purpose Of Those In Power.

AT THE LAST EXTREMITY.

TO BATTER DOWN THE WALLS ABOUT LEGATIONS.

The Rumors Afloat in Shanghai Brought in by Chinese Runners—Severe Fighting in Progress About Tien Tsin—Viceroys in South Deprecate War.

London, July 4.—If the rumors current in Shanghai, and transmitted here, are true, there hardly can be a foreigner of any nation left alive in Pekin, while the position at Tien Tsin is one justifying serious anxiety. All the reports, however, are from Chinese sources, and it is impossible to test their accuracy. A Chinese runner, who is represented to have left Pekin on June 25th, seems to be the chief authority for the statements cabled. When he started from the capital the members of the legations, he says, were at the last extremity. They were without food and their ammunition was gone, but they were keeping thousands of besiegers at bay. Its casualties, however, were heavy and annihilation was a question of only a short time. The Chinese who possessed ammunition in unlimited quantities were wholly undismayed by their own numerous losses, and were preparing to batter down the walls of the court yard of the legation, where the foreigners had sought refuge.

The story goes that Prince Tuan, who is said to have had the anti-foreign revolt plotted to lure the envoys into the streets in order that they might be more easily killed. He invited them to a conference at the Tsung Li Yamen, but Baron Von Kettler was the only minister who responded and fell into the trap and was murdered.

According to one account (German) and to another (British) sailors vainly tried to protect him; and it is added that German guards avenged his death by burning the buildings of the Tsung Li Yamen.

It is rumored that there is severe fighting around Tien Tsin, and that admiral Seymour has been wounded. The rumor cannot be verified. The Times' correspondent at Shanghai, to whom the foregoing reports were doubtless accessible, but who discriminatingly sifts local gossip, does not mention them, but he confirms the statement that authorities at Pekin are making common cause with the Boxers against foreigners. Dating his despatch July 2nd, he says that an edict issued at Pekin, on June 26th, accounts for the open challenge to the powers. It practically declares war against all foreigners and continues the provinces to enroll Boxers and the troops to assist in the expulsion of the whites. The obvious intention of the party which has seized the supreme power in Pekin is to extend to the utmost the area of the anti-foreign operations. The effect of this and similar edicts must be considerable in spite of the avowed policy of the southern viceroys and their joint declaration with the consuls of foreign powers, that warlike operations would be confined to the north. The gravity of the situation is recognized by the Chinese officials lies not in immediate danger to the foreigners in Pekin, but the prospect of future widespread devastation by the uncontrolled Kuhu, and other troops.

The British consul in reply to a telegraphic message for advice sent to Yun Shi Kai, has received an assurance that the latter will co-operate in the policy of the viceroys. It is generally necessary that viceroy should be supported by the presence of a powerful force at Nanking, and the lower Yang Tse Kiang valley sufficient to restrain the officials with reactionary sympathies and to prevent the spread of anarchy and pillage, of which the elements are always present in the Chinese.

A despatch to the Daily Telegram from Canton, dated July 1st, says that business is almost at a stand still. The large Chinese steamship companies are applying for leave to transfer their vessels to the American flag. An attempt to demolish the Wesleyan missionary hospital at Fatshan was defeated by Canadian, American and English missionaries. An other revolt to the allied troops would precipitate a massacre of foreigners in the south which Li Hung Chang would be utterly unable to avert. He recently outwitted the Sun Yatsen party by buying thousands of Mauser rifles at Macao. He is increasing his troops, the correspondent says, adding another thousand guards to those at Canton and occupying the two divisions of 7,500 each.

Did Not Wish War.

Paris, July 4.—In the chamber of deputies yesterday M. Delcasse, the minister of foreign affairs, during the debate on the credits declared that France did not wish the disintegration of China, and did not desire war. But France must protect her citizens. No power, he said, had ulterior motives at the present time and France's efforts would be directed toward fortifying international solidarity.

The arrival at Taku, on July 1st of the first detachment of French troops is announced. They are marching to Tien Tsin.

The following note is in reference to the deliberations at Delcasse's meeting last evening: M. Delcasse, minister of foreign affairs, has received only one French telegram. It was dated July 2nd, and was from the French consul at Shanghai. The consul says it is certain a revolution has broken out in Pekin. The Taun and Kong Yi have their troops surrounding the imperial palace. They have ordered the viceroys of the provinces to open hostilities against foreigners, but the viceroys of the centre and west have refused to obey them. They look upon them as rebels. The government has no direct news from Pekin, and no confirmation of the murder of the German minister. The exchange of views between the powers is still proceeding and the most complete agreement continues to reign, as regards the measures to be taken for the repression of the trouble, and the settlement which is to ensue. The French troops from Indio-China, must now have arrived in China. They represent an effective force of 3,500 <<<&
