MISSION A FAILURE.

Mr. Taylor and Mr. Broder came to Kingston on Saturday for the purpose of getting Mr. Calvin ready for the nomination. He was understood to be independent, and the party has no use for a man of that sort. Mr. Foster has been especially severe upon him, which is remarkable seeing that he began his political career as an independent himself.

Mr. Calvin is a conservative, with independent leanings, and Mr. Taylor, the whip, thought he could convert him into a conservative without a conscience. There are some people who cannot be crowded, cowed or bullied, and Mr. Calvin is one of them. After Mr. Taylor was through with him he was the same independent gentleman, and to Mr. Taylor's mortification he announced his acceptance of the nomination with the condition that he would act according to his reason rather than the reason of the party whip.

Mr. Taylor completed the farce by announcing that Sir Charles Tupper would be delighted with the choice of the convention. Perhaps he will, but it is known to quite a few that Mr. Taylor was not satisfied, and that he regarded his mission to Kingston as a failure.

CONFEDERATION LIVES.

It is so long since the confederation of the provinces that only the older ones understand the meaning of it. Its anniversary is observed with certain holiday proceedings, but there is little or nothing to make the occasion one of special significance.

As things go it is only a question of time until Dominion Day becomes a meaningless event, and the purpose of its founders has been lost to view. Confederation thirty-three years ago meant something to some men. It meant the burial of local jealousies. It meant the laying of foundations, broad and deep, upon which the growing nation of to-day securely stands.

It is a custom with some people to cultivate the love of national events by periodical recitals. The word "Confederation" suggests enough to the patriot to cause him to give voice to his emotions. There should be annually, as the feature of the Dominion Day, the oration in which fitting tribute may be made to the men who were parties to the union, who made sacrifices in its behalf, and succeeded in bringing it to pass.

A contemporary quotes what a Canadian soldier said as the contingent entered the fight at Paardeberg, South Africa, and the bullets of the enemy whistled through the air: "If I die it will be that this may live," pointing to the maple leaf upon his helmet. He died in that engagement, and in defence of imperial unity. This is not to be confounded with Canadian unity, which is memorialized by the anniversary we have just observed.

The Jewish people had the right idea of preserving national sentiment. Their frequent festivals were attended with the pomp and ceremony that made them attractive. The young had to be educated, and each question they raised was answered very fully. He is a rare one to-day who asks, What is Dominion Day? What is it all about? And he is as rare a one who can make an intelligent and satisfactory reply. There is something radically wrong with the education and sentiment of our times.

NEW ELECTION LAW.

Experience has suggested a number of changes in the election law, and changes that will ensure a better, a safer, a more correct record of the polling.

The ballot is to be numbered. It is to have a counterfoil, which is to be taken off by the returning officer, and laid on the table until the elector has returned the ballot, when the numbers will be compared. If they correspond the ballot will be deposited in the box. This is a precaution against fraudulent ballots, the use of which, however, is practically abolished by the printing of the papers in the Ottawa bureau, excepting that the names of the candidate will have to be inserted. In this way there is little chance of them being duplicated.

The opposition made a great fuss because Mr. McNeill's suggestion was not accepted, and provision made for the initialling of the ballots by the scrutineers as well as returning officer. But this would be a useless proceeding, since the law provides for the initialling of the ballots in the presence of the scrutineers, and for the closest examination of them when they are being counted at the close of the election. There cannot be any mistake or fraud if the scrutineers do their duty.

The wisest provision of all is that the returning officer reside in the constituency or division in which he acts. This guarantees a certain acquaintance with the electors which is absolutely necessary. His functions would be made complete were the law to direct them to arrest, subject to examination, every one who attempts impersonation, duplication, or other offences. If it were known that a man could not attempt these crimes except at great personal risk there would be fewer of them reported.

A good feature is the penalty which attaches to the carrying around of anything like a ballot paper for unlawful purposes. The new ballot will be such that the elector cannot mistake where to put his name, and his instruction by facsimile is absolutely forbidden.

The bill is not yet through the house. Several suggestions are under consideration, and when some of these have been disposed of, and the work of the house is complete, the country will have an election law that ought to give it satisfaction.

EDITORIAL VIEWS.

The new election law preserves for the absent soldier his right to the franchise.

La Patrie quotes the World as a paper of unsound views. They are very much alike—two of a kind.

Mr. Taylor may be able to whip some members of parliament into line, but he cannot whip Mr. Calvin. The party lash has no terrors for him.

The French Canadians are a prolific race and in fifty years they will have increased their number greatly in Quebec. But they will not be running Canada as Mr. Tarte supposes.

Judge Dugas has completed his judicial enquiry into the charges against the gold commissioner on Yukon, and found them baseless. One by one the officials are being slandered to no purpose.

The New York board of education has abolished vertical writing from the public schools. It cannot be written well unless it is written slowly. So the authorities declare. Here it has been written in the schools faster than the slant system.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE.

Notes Regarding the Movements of Vessels.

The tug Active cleared to-day with four laden barges for Montreal.

The schooner Kate from Oswego, is unloading coal at Soward's wharf.

The steamer Persia, from Toronto, called at Craig's wharf this morning.

The tug Thomson arrived from Oswego, this morning with two barges, coal laden.

The schooner Monitor, from the islands, unloaded grain at Richardsons' elevator this morning.

Arrivals at Swift's wharf: Steamer Algerian from Montreal, late last night; steamer Toronto on her downward trip.

T. S. Wheeler's house boat, "The Duchess," is ready for use, having just been fitted out very lavishly. Mr. Wheeler and wife intended to go down the river on it to-day, providing that the wind was favorable. They will remain among the islands all summer.

The steamer Unique arrived at Swift's wharf last night, from Ogdensburg, having covered the distance, seventy-two miles, in four hours and ten minutes, or an average per hour of about seventeen and one-half miles. The Unique is a long, narrow steamer, fitted up for river excursion business.

The unfortunate accident to the steamer Spartan brings to mind the statement made by a prominent captain of the R. & O. navigation company last summer. He said that he did not mind taking a steamer down the rapids, but it would be done perhaps once too often. It was a most dangerous business, and some day there would be a terrible calamity.

There were some who speculated that the steamer Rideau Queen could not be well handled in stormy weather; but on Friday and Saturday, she encountered gales on the Rideau lakes, and ran in the teeth of them without difficulty. She steamed through the cuts, in the openings as if gales were an every day event. The wheelsmen had no trouble in handling the craft.

State Of The Spartan.

The vessel is not leaking and so Capt. Johnston, superintendent, thinks she will come off without harm. She is only eight inches above her usual height, so it is thought that when the tugs get to work she will come off in short order. The Calvin company have sent the William Johnston and the Parthia to the scene and they, with the assistance of a block and tackle, rigged ashore, will commence operations. When she is off she will be brought down the rapids immediately.

News Of The Schooner Picton.

On Saturday the schooner Annie Minnes sailed through a lot of wreckage, spars, fenders, etc., but saw no trace of the crew of the schooner Picton, though one of the Annie Minnes' crew says he thinks he saw the body of a boy in the water. The supposition is that the crew of the ill-fated Picton were washed off the vessel before she foundered.

The Picton's cargo was 270 tons of coal for the Rathbun company. It was insured. The vessel was classed as B. 1, and was not insured. It would be worth about $1,500.

Capt. Sidley was a son of the late Sylvester Sidley and was born in Belleville about forty-five years ago. Since his early boyhood he had been a sailor and was one of the best known captains on the lakes. Some eighteen years ago he married Miss Kate Murphy, of Gananoque, and she, with three little daughters and two little sons, survive him.

SPORTING PARAGRAPHS.

The Various Events Which Have Created Interest.

A cricket team from Haverford college, Philadelphia, has arrived in Liverpool to tour Britain.

Football managers in Buffalo, N. Y., and Ogdensburg, N.Y., are asking the management of Queen's to send the rugby team to those places in September. Dates will in all probability be arranged.

The standing of the Canadian lacrosse league is as follows: Capitals, won 3, lost 1; Toronto, won 2, lost 1; Montreal, won 2, lost 2; Shamrocks, won 2, lost 2; Nationals, won 1, lost 2; Cornwall, won 1, lost 3.

The Ponies' baseball team which played in Ogdensburg this afternoon was composed of these players: Elliott, c.; Sullivan, p.; Hunt, 1b.; Eaves, 2b.; Kennedy, 3b.; Corrigan, ss.; Daley, l.f.; Easton, c.f.; Guay, r.f.; Black, spare.

On the last trip the Toronto baseball team won eight matches and lost eleven. Toronto still stands seventh in the league, but will no doubt rise quickly now. The team won three out of four matches during the past two days, defeating the highest teams in the league.

"Jim" Sutherland thinks he is a much-abused sporting individual. He now fills the shoes of the official baseball umpire of Kingston, and as such finds that the honor does not equal the abuse. "Jim" has discovered that it is impossible to serve two masters—each on opposing teams.

The annual 4th of July baseball "dispute" between Kingston and Ogdensburg at the latter place, was to take place this afternoon. For several years this match has never been concluded as a squabble always results over the rank decisions of the umpire against the visiting Canadian team. This afternoon the same trouble is expected.

"BILL" CURTIS DEAD.

Father of American Athletics Perishes in a Storm.

Fabyan's, N.H., July 4.—The first fatality of Mount Washington in ten years took place last Saturday, when W. B. Curtis, sixty-three years old, and Allen Ormsbee, about thirty years, both of New York, lost their lives on the Crawford bridle path. Their bodies were found yesterday.

William B. Curtis, the veteran athlete, was often called the father of American athletics and was universally known as "Father Bill" Curtis. He was probably the best posted man on amateur sports in the country.
