MR. LOW LOOKS FORWARD.

THE TROUBLES THAT HAVE AFFECTED THE WORLD

One Unique Circumstance in the Present Age, the Franchise in the Hands of the Masses—Righteousness and Brotherliness Will Remove Caste and Classes.

LOOKING Forward was the subject of Rev. G. J. Low's address at the Workingmen's meeting yesterday. Mr. Low is an Anglican clergyman at Almonte. There was a very large audience, and much interest created as Mr. Low developed his essay. Dr. C. L. Curtis occupied the chair, and introduced the speaker. Dr. Grant was one of the listeners. Among other things Mr. Low said:

"We are living in a period of transition. The inventiveness of this age, the rapid succession of new mechanical appliances, and of discoveries in every field, is continually changing the condition of life and forcing us continually to readjust our ideas and modes of living. The Victorian age is a turning point of history.

"The history of the Anglo-Saxon race is compared to the flow of a river ever increasing in volume and smooth and rough at various times. What lies before us now? Let us look forward. But we must take a survey of our condition, past and present. There was an era of the war lord and his vassals; then an era of the landlord and his serfs; today might be called the era of the money lord and his dependents. Each system is, no doubt, the best for its day, but gave way to its successor. What signs of further evolution?

"We are at present, as a race, very numerous, powerful, prosperous, wealthy. But the wealth is so unevenly distributed that some are excessively rich and the many extremely poor. The gulf is ever widening between the house of have and the house of want, between Dives and Lazarus, between progress and poverty. This evil is not confined to monarchies; it is most glaring in the United States. It was always so in Egypt, Assyria and the empires of old. But must it always be so?

"One thing in the present condition of things is unique, viz: That the poor are not ignorant like the slaves or vassals of old. Lazarus is educated and has the suffrage. It is a struggle between over-bearing progress and intelligent poverty, conscious of its latent power. This makes the social problem of the day more involved. What solution is proposed?

"Economists and philosophers in general say: 'laissez faire.' Religionists and moralists say: 'We must preach patience and thrift to Lazarus and charity to Dives.' But such proposals do not solve the problem.

"To propose the equalization of wealth is futile; capital is as necessary as labor; though excessive capital on one side and excessive toil and penury on the other are injurious to the common wealth. But injurious all is the accumulation of wealth by unrighteous means. Much 'business' so-called is as much gambling as playing with loaded dice or marked cards. Instances thereof in the case of Rothschild's at the battle of Waterloo, and of 'Old Hutch.'

"Many accumulate wealth in such fashion and their success is attributed to 'thrift and economy.' These are well enough, but they do not take the place of justice, mercy and truth. Universal national thrift would mean degeneracy. Thrift among the poor alone—one-sided thrift—only widens the gulf between the classes and the masses. In labour competitions the thriftier men are the less; wages they need, and the less they get; that's the long and short of Ricard's 'Iron Law of Wages.' The economy now being practised so widely in the United States did not hinder the U.S. sugar trust senators from making $40,000,000 at one stroke.

"Much of the present distress is due to the displacement of labor by machinery, which displacement is incessant, thanks to the inventiveness of our times. Applied science is like a spirit which we have evoked, and which may become our God or evil genius, according as its services are righteously shared by all or exploited for the benefit of the few.

"Let us now look forward. We enquire of the philosophers and statesmen and we get a gloomy forecast, e.g. Macaulay, Herbert Spencer, Carlyle. We ask the poets and their responses are equally dismal, e.g., Goldsmith's 'Deserted Village' and Tennyson's 'Locksley Hall.' But surely the christian with faith in God, hope in humanity, charity for all, must have a brighter prospect. We pray "Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven" We conceive of the will of God in heaven effecting happiness for all. But we must work, as well as pray, for the end we seek. The masses have means of working now which they never possessed before—education, free speech, the suffrage. Let these powers be exercised righteously. The manifest tread of the day is towards a more socialistic condition of things. We have adopted the socialist principle in our postal system, in the very form of our government, and, above all, in the matter of education. We shall be logically forced to go forward on the same lines. The church is ideally socialist, where all meet together on a common footing as the children of one Father who is in heaven; but sectarian divisions have debased this ideal. But the time is surely coming when man to man the world o'er shall brothers be, for the Lord hath spoken it."

At the close of the paper Principal Grant was called on for his opinion, and he replied: "I will wait awhile until I can get a chance to cut up some one."

J. D. Thompson thought the church had a duty to perform. With such men as Rev. Mr. Low in the church the state had nothing to fear. The paper had given good thought for reflection, and he agreed with every principle advocated. He thought Mr. Low would even go further as he got older.

Mr. Baker agreed with the paper, as did also Mr. Machar. Socialism had to advance.

Principal Grant spoke of the address as an admirable sermon. Mr. Low had confined himself to general principles and was always heard with profit. He had advocated that the principles of righteousness would win in the end. The state was a very bad manager of enterprises. The Intercolonial railroad was the only railway owned by the government and it had run half or three-quarters of a million behind. It had to be carried on by the government. It was the same with the Gallonp canal, Curran bridge and everything else the government had a finger in. The government was not to be compared to a clever company of men. Right in the city of Kingston money could be saved if the work of the streets, etc., was under two or three heads. There was a lack of system and general waste in civic affairs. See that the right men were sent to parliament before the system of collectiveness was introduced. Men should not be sent there who went to look after positions for themselves. Until he saw some proof that the government was able to handle enterprises better than now, he would be slow to give them further power. If the city ran the electric railway system what a different expense it would take.

Ex-ald. Creegan wanted the paper published in full in the papers or in pamphlet form.

Mr. Wright thought an honest government could run enterprizes as well as anyone else. He was down on the man who sold his vote.

LOSS OF THE SCHR. BALTIC.

She Struck A Dangerous Spot At The Entrance To Oswego Harbor.

A despatch from Oswego states that the schr. Baltic, grain laden, went on the reef just to the east of the pier and was shattered. This is only another mishap added to the number of unfortunate vessels that have gone to wreck at this point. Capt. Saunders and others, who are in a position to know, claim that over twenty sailing vessels have grounded on this ridge. It is a very dangerous spot. There did not seem to be much of a wind on the lake Saturday evening, but it may have been blowing hard on the southern shore. The Baltic was loaded with barley consigned by Richardson & Sons. She picked up her load at different points along the Bay of Quinte. Capt. John T. Baird, Hamilton, part owner, was in charge. The Rathbun Co. has a claim on the vessel, and it is this fact that leads mariners to believe she must have been insured, as this company would take no risk. As for the cargo it is well insured. Richardson & Sons insure all their cargos, more particularly at this season of the year.

The vessel went aground on exactly the same spot that a tug and vessel went to pieces on last fall. The captain of the tug was drowned.

Capt. Baird had his whole family aboard with him and great difficulty was experienced in getting them ashore. It only requires a few minutes for a vessel to break into kindling wood so sharp is the ridge. Last fall the tug was in pieces in fifteen minutes after she first struck. The Baltic went ashore during the night and this made it even worse. The schooner was built in 1867 at Wellington Square, was rebuilt in 1874 and rebuilt again in 1890. It was through the repairs of 1890 that the Rathbun Co. got a lien on her. George Richardson left this morning for Oswego to see after the cargo. It is not expected that any of the cargo will be saved. The Baltic was considered an exceptionally staunch craft, but no vessel could possibly live when once striking this particular ridge. Capt. Baird is deserving of sympathy, and vessel-men can understand his position. His capital was all in this vessel.

The schr. Baltic had 14,700 bushels of barley on board. She was insured at 45c a bushel. On account of the vessel not delivering her cargo Richardson & Sons will not have to pay freight charges or duty. The insurance will let them out about even.

Telegraphic Particulars.

OSWEGO, N.Y., Nov. 26.—At eleven o'clock on Saturday night the schooner Baltic, Capt. Baird, of St. Catharines, went on the rocks at the mouth of this port. She was loaded with 12,600 bushels of barley from Kingston for Downey, Irwin & Co., of this city. Capt. Baird and his three sons, who composed the crew, the captain's wife and a passenger were rescued by the life saving crew. The schooner was not insured. She is breaking up.

Marine Intelligence.

The schr. Annie Minnes' last cargo was for R. Crew & Co.

The schr. Katie Eccles is reported as having run aground near Coborurg.

To-day the schr. Fleetwing cleared for Charlotte for a cargo of soft coal for Swift & Co.

The steamer John Maynard will be rebuilt, and a steambarge will be built for Ira Folger during the winter.

The storm signals were ordered up this morning to indicate a terrific gale from the west. Small vessels had better hug the docks.

The prop. Cuba is laid up at Toronto after a very successful season, making twenty-four Lake Ontario trips and two Lake Erie trips.

The schr. Tradewind got away Saturday night for Toronto. The wind was in her favor and she should have reached her destination last night.

A board, W. Carson, John Hendry, Toronto, and Peter Brunnelle, Quebec, will examine applicants for the inspectorate of hulls, vacant by the death of Capt. Harbottle.

The schr. Fleetwing cleared to-day for Charlotte to bring back the cargo of coal which the B. W. Folger would have brought over had she not been burned. The crew of the Fleetwing are: C. Chambers, Jerry Hurley, J. Deroche, J. McCann and E. Henderson.

Capt. Thompson of the steambarge Van Allen, arrived over from Oswego this morning and will accompany Capt. Bates up on the str. Hero this afternoon to the scene of the wreck of the schr. B. W. Folger. Capt. Thompson represents the Standard oil company, which firm owned the lumber which comprised the Folger's cargo. Capt. Bates does not think there will be much over 1,000 feet of the lumber fit for use. The Folger is a total wreck. Capt. Bates expects to have about $300 coming to him out of the insurance after everything is settled for.

AN ELECTRIC LINE

What Mr. Spotswood Thinks of a Line From Kingston to Ottawa.

SATISFACTORILY is the way G. Spotswood, C. E., thinks he can demonstrate to any level headed business man that a well equipped electric railway between Kingston and Ottawa, would not cost as much as a steam railway and would be of more benefit to Kingston and to the districts through which it would pass. If the electric railway was built to follow the turnpike roads between the city and Ottawa the passenger traffic would pay the running expenses for these people would not have to drive miles to stations to get a car. The electric cars would pick up passengers at cross roads and other points. There is power enough in the Rideau canal going to waste which might be utilized and if this is not sufficient power can be got through compressed gas and petroleum now being used in Germany. Mr. Spotswood intends as soon as he gets data to give the public his views on the building of an electric road between the city and Ottawa. He thinks $500,000 would build and equip the road and this amount might be got from the government and the bonuses could then be refunded to the municipalities. Kingston, Smith's Falls & Ottawa RR. Co. might be asked to take an interest in the scheme.

The str. Hero makes her last trip up the bay Saturday next.

REV. DR. JACKSON RESIGNS

HE NOTIFIES HIS CONGREGATION OF HIS PURPOSE YESTERDAY.

He Accepts an Invitation to a Congregational Charge in Barre, Vt.—A Statement Read to His People—The Severance of the Ties has Cost Him a Great Deal.

The members of the First Congregational church were not a little surprised yesterday morning upon the announcement being made to them by their pastor of his intended resignation. The preacher has been ailing in health for the past couple of weeks and was unable to preside at the thanksgiving service in the Bethel church on Thursday last. His son preached in the First Congregational church yesterday morning. The pastor entered the church before the service closed and going to the pulpit read this statement:

S. N. JACKSON, M.D.

"To the members of the First Congregational church, Kingston:

"Dearly beloved—I find it incumbent upon me to give you this public notice that it is my purpose, at the church meeting to be held on Wednesday evening of this week, to present my resignation as pastor of this church and to request the church, by the advice of an ecclesiastical council, to relieve me from the duties and responsibilities of that office.

"I do this now that I may be at liberty to accept a call from a church in a New England city which has been unanimously given without my being a candidate in any sense. I should have declined this pressing invitation at once had I not the conviction that it will be to the mutual advantage of both pastor and church that a pastorate now reaching into the eighteenth year should be terminated and other relations formed.

"As I have before stated, my coming to you and sojourning so long in your midst has not been with a view of serving personal ends, but to do you good and to honor the Master, whom I seek to serve. In so far as this has been accomplished I shall have my rich reward.

"This long pastorate has, on the whole, been to me a most happy one, and I trust it may be found increasingly fruitful in your lives. Its severance costs me more and seems harder to bear than anything that has occurred in my life.

"I shall ask that an advisory council may be called that I may not only lay down my pastoral office over this church, but also my connection with the sisterhood of congregational churches in Canada, with which I have been so closely identified, with such concurrence as the council may see fit to give.

"Wherever I go this church will have a chief place in my heart, and it will ever be a pleasure to serve it in any way possible."

The call is to the Congregational church in the city of Barre, state of Vermont. In population Barre is rivaling the capital being the next largest city in the state. To a reporter Dr. Jackson stated this morning that he had received several calls to American cities since his pastorate in Kingston, but so much Canadian was he that he found it hard to leave the country. He would have been satisfied with a much smaller salary in Canada if the way had been opened up to him clearly. It would be a hard matter for him to leave Kingston, where he had lived so happily such a long time. He considered is for the best, however, and he would go. When he received the call Mr. Jackson wrote for particulars of the church. He found that it had the largest Sunday school and christian endeavor society in the state of Vermont. It is the only congregational church in Barre, and had an enrolled membership of 420 persons. It also boasted of a ladies' aid society and all other church societies. There was a debt of only $1,000 on the church. In three years time the congregation had wiped out over $4,000 debt. Mr. Jackson would not say when his resignation would take effect. He wished to give this out at the church meeting first. The reverend gentleman has been on the staff at the Congregational college, Montreal, for several years and he does not know whether the appointment will interfere with his lecturing there or not. He came to Kingston from Toronto. The retiring pastor was popular with his congregation, as well as all christian workers in the city. He has been foremost in all onward movements and has always been ready to aid in any good work. He was a great friend of the Salvation army. This body will miss him very much.

Quite A Marine Artist.

Sylvester Staley, son of Capt. Staley, of the schr. John Gaskin, has proven himself something of an artist. A short time ago he finished a painting of the str. Bannockburn and it now hangs in the M. T. Co's office. He has now completed a fine painting of the str. Wilbur, for which he was offered $75. Sylvester is second engineer of the Wilbur and is now in Buffalo.

Police Court—Monday.

At the police court this morning Richard Harris, William Harris, Wm. Gavine and Charles Salby were charged with being disorderly. They threw stones at E. Law, which of course was against the "law." As Mr. Law had not subpoened his witnesses the magistrate gave him till the morning to get them.

Inspecting The Collegiate.

John Seath, high school inspector of Ontario, arrived in the city this morning and will inspect the collegiate institute. Mr. Seath inspects the institution once or twice a year. He is now on his regular trip of inspection.

"Outing" magazine for December has a warmth and cheeriness, all its own, which bids defiance to howling blasts. In text and illustrations the number takes now a higher standard than has been long maintained by this popular magazine of sport, travel and recreation.

The Kingston Hosiery Co. have twenty-five new automatic knitting machines running on hosiery, and are turning out 150 dozen socks, 100 dozen stockings and 100 dozen underwear per day.

D. Wilson, superintendent of the Kingston fire apparatus factory, arrived yesterday. He will start the manufacture of three machines which have been ordered by western corporations.

An alderman wishes it stated that in his opinion the electric light service in Kingston is the worst he has seen in any place in Canada. The lights are not going half the time.

On Saturday and Sunday evening the electric lights did not give satisfaction because of the machinery at the power house becoming disabled.

GENERAL PARAGRAPHS.

The Very Latest News Crowded Into a Small Space.

J. Hewton, jr., has written to friends from the steamship which is carrying him to Colton, Cal. He is enjoying the trip, notwithstanding that many of the passengers cannot speak English.

Rev. G. J. Low preached at St. James' church on Sunday morning taking as his text "That prophet which should come." He dwelt particularly upon the first lesson of the day, the last chapter of Ecclesiastes, because of the pessimistic views of the sacred writer. It was not the lowest depth of pessimism because he maintained a reverend faith in God which the latter day pessimist did not. When the materialist said there was no God, to whom could we turn to soothe and bless but the prophet which should come? He was born a humble Galilean, while Augustus Cæsar controlled the whole known world, yet the other day witnessed the new czar, controlling an empire greater than Cæsar's, falling on his knees and declaring in the Te Deum:

"Thou art the King of Glory, oh Christ!
"Thou art the Everlasting Son of the Father."

He truly is that prophet which should come; not only to tell us of the Life, but to give us the Life.

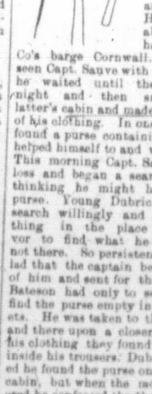
NABBED FOR STEALING

Capt Sauve's Purse Secured By a Frenchman on Board a Barge.



ARTICULARLY cute A. Dubric, a young Frenchman, about sixteen years of age, thought he was last night. He believed he could get rich quicker by dishonest principles than by pursuing an honest calling. He had been cook about a month and a half on the M. T. Co's barge Cornwall. He must have seen Capt. Sauve with a wad of bills for he waited until the quiet of the night and then sneaked into the latter's cabin and made an investigation of his clothing. In one of his pockets he found a purse containing $45. This he helped himself to and went back to bed. This morning Capt. Sauve noticed his loss and began a search of the cabin, thinking he might have dropped his purse. Young Dubric joined in the search willingly and upturned everything in the place in his endeavor to find what he well knew was not there. So persistent was the young lad that the captain became suspicious of him and sent for the police. Officer Bateson had only to search Dubric to find the purse empty in one of his pockets. He was taken to the police station and there upon a closer examination of his clothing they found the $45 pinned inside his trousers. Dubric at first claimed he found the purse on the floor of the cabin, but when the money was discovered he confessed the theft. He will be tried to-morrow morning.

Joyful Convicts.

Brockville Times.

Eight convicts caught in the act of robbery in Ottawa passed through here the other night en route to Kingston. They seemed quite joyful over their lot and one boastingly said when they served their sentence they would return to Ottawa and do the same thing. They say they were getting a high living out of it.

The System Satisfactory.

The lady superintendent of the public schools at Malone, N.Y., was in the city on Friday and made a tour of the schools to see how the vertical system of writing was progressing. She was well pleased with the system and will probably recommend that it be introduced into the schools of Malone.

THAT KINGSTOT HAZING

Hon Mr Patterson Speaks of Mr Plummer's Statement.

Toronto News.

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—The minister of militia was shown the "News," containing Mr. Plummer's utterances in regard to his son's treatment in the Kingston military college.

Mr. Patterson said that the charges as made by Mr. Plummer were substantially those he alleged at the investigation, but he said they were denied by the students. Some denied that any caning had taken place while others said that if there was any it was a mere pretence of going through the form of caning.

"Of course," Mr. Patterson said, "that was an indignity and would hurt a young man's feelings, but of one thing I am sure, young Mr. Plummer suffered no physical hurt. I am sorry for what has taken place; those who participated have been punished, and I have strictly forbidden any hazing in future.

"I tried very hard to get Mr. Plummer to send his son back to finish the term, and am very sorry he did not do it, as I am sure the rest of his course would have been pleasant."

When the Kingston (Ont.) city council passed the by-law inaugurating the introduction of that relic of the middle ages, the curfew bell, church, bible class, concert and other engagements which would keep the children out after 8 o'clock were cancelled by the juveniles, and it has been found necessary to have the by-law printed and distributed in order to correct the popular misunderstanding that arrest would follow the presence of any child on the street after the bell had been rung. The law applies only to loiterers, it is said. The councilors who enact such laws are more in need of a guardian than the children of Ontario.

The Diamond Drill.

The Ontario government diamond drill, working on the Glendower iron property, Bedford township, is giving satisfaction. Joseph Bawden says that the drill is under such complete control, by means of the hydraulic feed, that the percussion is of the slightest, and the cutting action of the diamond is perfectly adjusted. One hole was bored to a depth of 182½ feet, when the old workings were struck, of which the records had been lost. The drill has been removed to another part of the property, and a hole will be sunk 600 feet.

Must Pay For His Promise

Miss Quinn was a Roman Catholic. Hardy belonged to no church. The suit was for $10,000.

MAGGIE MORRISON MISSING.

Mysterious Disappearance of a Sixteen-Year-Old Girl.

THAT is quite a mystery has occurred in Toronto. Miss Maggie May Morrison, aged sixteen, daughter of Frank Morrison, formerly living on Earl street, Kingston, but now of Toronto, disappeared on Friday, Nov. 16th. Mrs. Fowler, well-known in Salvation army circles here, was engaged with J. & J. Lugsdin, furriers, Toronto, and five weeks ago Maggie also secured employment and worked quietly and well. At noon on the 16th Mrs. Fowler went out shopping. Maggie declining to go as she was not feeling well. Shortly after Mrs. Fowler had left Maggie told one of her shopmates that she was too ill to work and would have to go home. On her sister's return she was told that Maggie had gone home sick. Mrs. Fowler thought no more of the affair till six o'clock, when her father called to take Maggie home, as was his custom. Then it was learned that she had not gone home. The father summoned his sons-in-law, Mr. Ives and Mr. Smallwood, and all proceeded to the police station, where they gave a description of the missing girl. She has not since been heard of.

Maggie had no admirers, corresponded with no one, and never went out alone. She never went to church save in company with some member of the family. When she left home on the 16th she was dressed in her "every day" clothes, a plain skirt of blue cashmere, a black, woolly coat, trimmed with imitation Persian lamb's wool, a white silk handkerchief about her neck, and wore for head covering a red Tam o'Shanter cap. Her hair, "fairly fair," hung braided down her back, her front hair being banged. She wore shoes and rubbers. She had a thin, fair face, features that most people would say were handsome, laughing blue eyes and a willowy figure. On the right side of her neck was a small excrescence that grew just above where the collar usually comes, and for that reason she often wore a handkerchief, as she did on the day of her disappearance. She had also a birth mark on one of her arms. On the last morning she was at home she left her watch in her room, also a brooch or pin made from a Mexican dollar, also her best clothing. This, her parents believe, shows that she did not run away. Friends in Kingston have been communicated with but have neither seen nor heard anything of her since she left here. She has a married sister in Auburn, N.Y., but, so far as her friends know, she is not there.

The Young Lady Found.

Maggie May Morrison was located on Sunday at "The Haven," 320 Seaton street, Toronto.

Miss Morrison was found wandering on the Kingston road the day after disappearance and was handed over to city relief officer Taylor. As she acted in rather a peculiar way she was at once transferred to the haven.

Mrs. Morrison says her daughter is suffering from a slight mental trouble, and that when she started out she must have conceived the idea of travelling on foot to Kingston, from which city the family recently moved.

Maggie was seen late, Friday afternoon, about three miles from the city on the Kingston road by a farmer. He tried to induce the girl to go to his house, which was near by, to get some refreshments, as she looked tired. She refused the invitation, saying that she wanted to go to Kingston.

During her stay in the haven she wrote to Capt. Augustus, Kingston, asking for enough money to take her home, and signed the letter Fanny Belsh. Miss Sanderson added a postscript stating the girl's position. In answer to this Capt. Augustus telegraphed that if the real name of the girl were given him he would forward the necessary cash. Miss Sanderson charged Maggie with deceiving her as to her name, but she maintained that Fanny Belsh was genuine.

THE PULPIT PARAGRAPHS.

The Sydenham Church Folks Have Given no Invitations yet.

great, many church-goers watch the clock and grow restless if the sermon goes beyond the half-hour. This is especially the case in the morning. This is due to various reasons, the housewife thinks of her dinner in the oven, and the maiden wonders how she can hurry through her duties so as to be on time at Sunday School. One clergyman apologized yesterday, saying, "I get so full of my subject that I forget time altogether. I wish some of you would put up your hand or indicate in some way that it is time for me to stop." Another minister preached for forty-five minutes, and then seemed to think the subject was not quite exhausted.
