CHANGE OF TIME.

Mr. Sheppard, of Toronto, in his society paper, surprises the independent journalists by scolding them for their looseness of views on the tariff question. Having advised them "to tie up their reform dogs for a little while," pending Mr. Foster's enquiry into its madness, he remarks: "Though we may like to get bargains and appreciate the direct saving, yet Canadians are not foolish enough to permit their own manufacturers to be killed." Of course not. Mr. McCarthy has put the question as clearly as any man can when he has said that the industries that have been buttressed by tariff props for fifteen years should now be able to get along, if at all healthy and well-conducted, and those that are unhealthy had better die. And by the way it seems but a short time since Don Sheppard was expressing revolutionary ideas in regard to tariff reform. His paper was certainly credited with the desire for a complete revision of the tariff to the end that all its blemishes and defects would be removed. Has he undergone a change of heart? Or has he simply decided to tie up his tariff reform dog for a while?

LIBERAL PLATFORM.

The liberals of Canada, in convention, have agreed on the issues upon which to go to the people in the next election. The principle issue is that of tariff reform, to the end that trusts or combines cannot, as in recent years, fleece and rob the people at their will, that trade will not be interfered with, that more money will not be collected from the people than honest, economical and efficient government calls for, and that the duties that are collected shall bear as lightly as possible on the necessaries of life. Protection as a principle is a failure in its Canadian application and a fiscal policy, modelled as far as possible after that of the mother country is absolutely demanded. Mr. Laurier put the issue clearly when, in his great speech on the first evening of the convention, he said:

"I submit to you that the ideal fiscal system is the British system of free trade. (Cheers.) Sir, my loyalty, as I stated, does not ooze from the pores of my body, but I do want to go for an example to the mother country and not to the United States. Much as I respect the people on the other side of the line, I say the policy should be a policy of free trade, such as they have in England, but I am sorry to say that the circumstances of the country cannot admit at present of that policy in its entirety, but I propose to you that from this day henceforward it should be the goal to which we aspire. I propose to you from this day, although we cannot adopt the policy itself, to adopt the principle which regulates it, that is to say, that though it should be our misfortune for many years to come to have to raise a revenue by customs duties these duties should be levied only so far as is necessary to carry on the business of the government. I submit to you that not a cent should be extracted from the pockets of the people except every cent goes into the treasury of the people and not into the pockets of anybody else. (Cheers.) I submit to you that no duty should be levied for protection's sake but levied altogether and for the purpose of filling the treasury to the limits required. I submit to you that every cent that is levied should be levied, first and foremost, upon the luxuries of the people. I submit to you, therefore, that the system of protection which is to be maintained by the government, that is to say of levying tribute upon the people not for the legitimate expenses of the government, but for a private and privileged class, is to be condemned without any qualifications. (Cheers.) Let it be well understood then that from this moment we have a distinct issue with the party in power. Their ideal is protection; our ideal is free trade; their immediate object is protection; ours a tariff for revenue and for revenue only. Upon this issue we engage in battle. From this moment forward and I ask you once more never to desist until we have achieved victory, until we have freed this country from the incubus which has been weighing it down for fifteen long years."

The declaration of the convention on this subject was emphatic and unanimous. In it concurrence was expressed by all the provincial premiers present and all the leaders of liberal thought and it can, therefore, be accepted as a final deliberance. A conservative print has, at least, accepted it as such, and says that the line of battle between the parties is now the clearest defined since 1878.

The people certainly have had a fair experience with protection, and if they only vote as they think they will, in Canada, be as strongly condemnatory of it as the American farmers, wage-earners and even those manufacturers who can live and let live. The protective policy in Canada was, the conservatives alleged, forced upon them, by reason of its application in the United States, and the wonder is, that so many having repudiated it, it should be retained, should be regarded as a permanency, by the party in power. The only explanation of such perversity is that the government is not free to act, that behind it stand the few who have been enriched at the expense of the many, that these have helped, by their financial contributions, to keep the taxing party in power, and that they will not permit of any modification in the tariff which reduces the revenue they now enjoy.

And, mark it, that though the protective policy has been retained to the injury of the mechanic, the laborer, the farmer, and presumably in the interest of the industries, we have it from Mr. Foster that ninety per cent. of the manufacturers have failed. It's time for action, and the liberals are ready for the fight.

EDITORIAL POINTS.

The coroner's jury has returned a verdict holding three public officials responsible for the accident at Ford's theatre, Washington, by which several persons were killed and a number injured. Nothing but the severest punishment can make of them an example for the benefit of officialdom in general.

The ladies of Canada are said to be still in doubt as to the nature of the gift they should send to the Princess May. They must show more decision of character if they are to win favor in their demands for woman's rights. If they are ever to become conspicuous in leadership they will demonstrate that they have a mind to act, and a tongue to say just what they want.

BROADBRIM'S LETTER.

WHERE THE SPICY SENSATION CAN ALWAYS BE STRUCK.

The Gallant Colonel and the Demure Dressmaker—They Were Married and Then the Fun Began—More of Lloyd Aspinwall.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, June 23.—Whenever I want a genuine first-class sensation I journey over the big bridge to Brooklyn, and I generally find the article I require. There are some very aristocratic quarters in the City of Churches, but none more exclusive than that portion called the Hill, where Dives dwells arrayed in purple and fine linen and Croesus piles his bags of gold in princely mansions, furnished with every luxury that the imagination can devise.

Near by are immense greenhouses, where even in mid-winter the luscious fruits of the tropics bloom and ripen, and great bunches of grapes and golden oranges tempt the passing stranger as if they were flourishing under a southern sun. Lazarus hath no place there, not even on the steps of the great man's palace, and so he shrinks away from wealth and daylight to darkness, squalor, wretchedness and rags.

In the most select quarter of this rich man's paradise lives one Eliphalet Stratton, a gentlemen of high degree, whose bank account was ample and whose rent roll was satisfactory, and who carried his eighty-three years as lightly as an ordinary man of fifty. By some of his neighbors he was known as the colonel, from a certain military air that he affected, and a debonair style that he put on that was suggestive of the United States army, or at least, an imposing branch of the militia. Mr. Stratton was married for the first time over sixty years ago, and he has sons and daughters considerably over fifty. The first Mrs. Stratton died just after the celebration of her golden wedding, and the gay young colonel, who at this time was only eighty, liked matrimony so well that he thought he would try a second venture. A nice demure little dressmaker had been employed in the family, and on her the gallant colonel cast his eyes. She was good-looking and industrious, exceedingly well behaved, in fact very sweet and ladylike in her manners; so Colonel Stratton thought that she would just fill the bill. Besides she could make her own dresses; that would save expenses; and she could rub his back when he had the lumbago, so that from every standpoint—economy, love and business—a marriage with a dressmaker looked like a good investment. There was a slight disparity of nearly sixty years between them, but what of that? She could bring him her virgin affection and he could give her a fine house to live in, horses, carriages, servants and gold galore. He broached the matter to his fifty-five year old son and his half century daughter, and in less time than it takes to tell the story there was the d——l to pay; that did not make the slightest difference to Grandpa Stratton.

He was not in the habit of consulting anyone, and he was very much in the habit of having his own way; so one bright afternoon about three years ago he tucked the dressmaker under his arm; they took a little walk as far as the minister's, and when they got back she was Mrs. Stratton, No. 2. Both were suited to a dot, both had got what they wanted. He got youth and beauty, barring she was cross-eyed, and she got position and a pot full of money which did not materialize. The honeymoon was very brief, and it did not take Mr. Stratton and his bride very long to find out that each had made a huge mistake.

The stalwart six foot colonel, who turned the scale at 248, said his little ninety pound wife imperilled his life by kicking him on the shins; and she accuses her hubby of trying to starve her to death. It certainly looks rather bad for the colonel. Although he was rich, when his wife was taken sick she was left in the big house without any one to aid her, and nothing to eat day by day, week by week and month by month, she wasted away with disease and starvation till soul and body almost parted.

At last some of the neighbors discovered the miserable situation of the starving woman, and carried her in some food and supplied her from day to day. As soon as the husband discovered that the neighbors were feeding his wife he drove them out of the house and nailed up all the doors. Then the neighbors got long poles, and tying food up in napkins lifted them up to her chamber window, where she ate the food like a famished wolf.

In the meantime the husband had consulted a physician to see if there was not some convenient and easy method of putting her out of the way. The physician was shocked, and after a time the police were informed, when an investigation took place and the result was the arrest and incarceration of the murderous old brute. He will, no doubt, be indicted for an attempt to kill, and, if convicted, will end his miserable life in prison. When Mrs. Stratton was discovered by the police she was wasted away to a skeleton. She had had nothing to eat for several days and could not have survived much longer.

The convenient plea of insanity will probably be the defence, but the neighbors who know him best say that a plea of wilful cussedness would be nearer the mark. The citizens are thoroughly aroused; there is something inexpressibly shocking in the idea, that in a city like Brooklyn, and in its most fashionable quarter, within rifle shot of Dr. Talmage's $100,000 tabernacle, a christian woman can be deliberately starved to death by her husband. The ignorant brute who stamps his wife's brains out with his boot heel is an angel of mercy alongside such a fiend as that.

While such crimes remain possible, no need to send missionaries to the Zulus or the Congo. It is hardly worth our while to attempt the salvation of Catholics at Rome, Jews at Jerusalem, or the disciples of Confucius at Pekin and Foo Chow. We can afford for awhile to give the followers of Budda and Mahomet a rest, while we stir up our energetic evangelists to the necessity of home mission work.

Let us hope that Mr. Stratton may be judged insane, instead of being stamped as a brutal old savage, and that the third city of the union, filled with magnificent churches and charitable associations, may escape the burning disgrace of having within her borders an old brute who could calmly and in cold blood, starve his wife to death.

I spoke of the howling swell Lloyd Aspinwall last week, who, after spending a million of dollars, was examined in supplementary proceedings and swore he was not worth seventy-five cents. This week the bank of Metropolis brought suit on a note of his for twenty-five hundred dollars, which the bank had discounted, and which had the endorsement of his brother, William Aspinwall. William, who is worth three or four hundred thousand dollars, repudiated the note for three causes: first, he did not recollect endorsing the note at all; secondly, if he did endorse it, it was given in the way of business to assist the firm of Howland & Aspinwall; and thirdly, that it was diverted from its original purpose and was given for a gambling debt, and that the person who discounted the note demanded fifty dollars bonus for doing it; which was usury, either of which counts would invalidate its payment.

When Lloyd Aspinwall was consulted by the bank's lawyer about the circumstance, he is said to have replied to the bank's lawyer: "My brother William may plead usury and gambling if he desires to do so, and I will do all I can to aid him as far as relating the circumstances are concerned; but I am a man of honor, and I never will plead the baby act on a gambling debt." Talk of your comic opera; it is nothing to this. Here is a man, educated as a gentleman, calling himself a gentleman, who receives a bank check endorsed by his brother to help him in his business; he goes to a gambling house, loses two thousand five hundred dollars; he fills out the check for the amount and uses his brother's honorable name to pay his own dishonorable debt. This man of honor, so punctilious about his gambling debts that he squares them up on the spot, can't pay his butcher, nor his baker, nor his tailor. A man of honor! Ha, ha, ha! Very funny isn't it?

Amid the roar of cannon and the shriek of steam whistles and the ringing hurrahs of thousands of people the Viking of the Norwegian Sagas sailed proudly up the East river, and after her perilous voyage across the Atlantic dropped anchor in the Hudson. She was escorted by the great monitor Miantonomoh, which gave the bold Norsemen a roaring salute of twenty-one guns.

We have had some pretty lively times in New York harbor in the past few months, what with naval reviews and royal receptions, etc., but nothing that surpassed the reception of the Viking and her crew. Saturday was an ideal day—the weather was pleasantly cool. It was a half holiday, when the banks are closed and all business is suspended. It is the opening of the yachting season also, and the river was full of beautiful steam yachts and sailing yachts, steam launches and tugs, and it seemed as if all New York turned out to give the Norsemen welcome.

There was no red tape about it, everybody who desired to do so took a hand in; besides the Norwegian crew from skipper to cook were men like ourselves; they needed no sentinels or police to keep off the vulgar crowd, and the result was such a reception as no foreigner has received since Lafayette landed on the battery seventy years ago.

Before us was the counterpart of the adventurous craft in which Bold Eric the Red and his Norseland crew ventured over the unknown sea nine hundred years ago, and discovered the land which was afterwards credited to Columbus.

Splendid samples of healthy, hardy, handsome manhood were the Viking's crew, and it did not take them long to understand that they were among friends.

Just before coming up to the city Captain Andersen and his crew were invited on board the Miantonomoh and given a splendid lunch. There were toasts to everybody, to President Cleveland, Leif Ericson, the Sagas, Captain Anderson, the American eagle and Vikings generally.

I have no wish to undermine the character of our northern guests with the temperance element of the western hemisphere, but they are not only fine sturdy eaters, but they are good healthy drinkers, and they can walk off with skysails set and stunsails flying, with an amount of fluid under their Norwegian jackets that would land an ordinary finback among the breakers on a leeshore.

The Viking is a handsome craft, without a deck, having only one mast and a single square sail; she has sixteen banks of oars, and it is evident these ancient salts were not delayed by calms. We had a chance to see her sail, and also to see her propelled by oars, and she behaved admirably. After a brief visit she will proceed to Chicago, there to share the glory with the caravals of Columbus.

Princess Eulalie is with us again, not as a royal highness now, but merely as a private lady incog.; she can walk about the streets and look in the shop windows as if she were a free-born American, and she likes it. It is no fault of this winsome little lady if our people made fools of themselves, which many of them did. She is, no doubt, glad to be released from Commander Davis and the slavery of official etiquette, and we wish the royal lady bon voyage to Old Castile.—BROADBRIM.

KELSEY—Why would you believe a minister's word sooner than any other man's?

WILTSIE—Because he is supposed to preach the truth and tell the truth? But why do you ask the question? Well because the Rev. A. L. Snider, pastor of the Methodist church, Leamington, says: "I have been cured of a most painful and distressing case of piles of long standing by Magic Pile Lotion," and recommend it to all thus afflicted.

One of Hillier's favorite young ladies was married last week, in the person of Miss Libbie Foshay, only daughter of Charles Foshay, Niles' Corner, to John D. Christie, Hallowell. Miss Libbie Carter assisted the bride and Stephen Leavens acted the part of best man.

Rebecca Wilkinson, of Brownsville, Ind., says: "I had been in a distressed condition for three years from nervousness, weakness of the stomach, dyspepsia and indigestion until my health was gone. I bought one bottle of South American Nervine, which did me more good than any $50 worth of doctoring I ever had in my life. I would advise every weakly person to use this valuable and lovely remedy. I consider it the grandest medicine in the world." A trial bottle will convince. Warranted by Henry Wade.

At the ripe age of eighty-six years Mrs. Olive P. Dodge, Cape Vincent, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. I. T. Cross, Watertown. She leaves three daughters, Mrs. H. L. Fox, Cape Vincent; Mrs. I. T. Cross, Watertown, and Mrs. P. L. Millen, who resides in the west.

A Complicated Case.

DEAR SIRS,—I was troubled with biliousness, headache and loss of appetite. I could not rest at night, and was very weak, but after using three bottles of B.B.B., my appetite is good and I am better than for years past. I would not now be without B. B. B., and am also giving it to my children. MRS. WALTER DUNNS, Maitland, N.S.

Drowned In The River.

William Dwyer, son of Stephen Dwyer, South Algoma, was drowned at Bell's Rapids, on the Madawaska river, last Friday. He was working on Mr. Bronson's drive and with a companion named Edward Malone was running the rapids in a boat when it struck on a rock. The force with which the boat struck split it from bow to stern. Mr. Malone jumped on to a passing log and from that to the shore. Mr. Dwyer jumped on to the same log, but by this time it had drifted out from the shore and when he jumped towards land he fell into a deep hole and being unable to swim sank at once to the bottom. His body has not yet been recovered. He leaves a wife and one child.

Forewarned Is Forearmed.

Many of the worst attacks of cholera morbus, cramps, dysentery, colic, etc., come suddenly in the night and speedy and prompt means must be used against them. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the remedy. Keep it at hand for emergencies. It never fails to cure or relieve.

Wood Yard Removed.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured

"I want to write a few lines to be used as a testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla. In 1882 I was laid up with inflammatory rheumatism, and since that time I have not been able to do a full day's work. Part of the time I could not walk from my house to the town, which is about one half mile, more than once a day, and sometimes I was not able to go once in two or three days. I have been treated by physicians and have taken other medicines, but did not get any permanent help. I was with medicine of all kinds. At last I saw the testimonial of Mr. C. C. Aber, of this town, telling how wonderfully he had been helped by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Having known the condition he was in, I thought Hood's Sarsaparilla might help me, so I commenced taking it and I was benefited from

The First Few Doses.

I have continued until I have now taken 5 bottles and am able to do considerable work. I think I will soon be perfectly well. From my long illness I was very much run down in health, but Hood's Sarsaparilla is building me up again. I hope my statement will be the means of leading others to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and be cured, as Mr. Aber was the means of my taking it." WILSON ROBINSON, Canisteo, N. Y.

He's Beyond a Cut.

Exchange.

Toronto's Mayor Fleming is not so slow. When the executive committee talked of reducing the municipal expenses a proposal was made that the first cut should be on the mayor's salary. "All right, gentlemen," said his worship, cheerfully, "go ahead and cut it. I may explain to you, however, that I have already drawn it to the end of the year." It's a wise mayor that knows its own salary.

Down With High Prices For Electric Belts.

$1.55, $2.65, $3.70; former prices $5, $7, $10. Quality remains the same—sixteen different styles; dry battery and acid belts—mild or strong current. Drowned In The River.

William Dwyer, son of Stephen Dwyer, South Algoma, was drowned at Bell's Rapids, on the Madawaska river, last Friday. He was working on Mr. Bronson's drive and with a companion named Edward Malone was running the rapids in a boat when it struck on a rock. The force with which the boat struck split it from bow to stern. Mr. Malone jumped on to a passing log and from that to the shore. Mr. Dwyer jumped on to the same log, but by this time it had drifted out from the shore and when he jumped towards land he fell into a deep hole and being unable to swim sank at once to the bottom. His body has not yet been recovered. He leaves a wife and one child.

Forewarned Is Forearmed.

Many of the worst attacks of cholera morbus, cramps, dysentery, colic, etc., come suddenly in the night and speedy and prompt means must be used against them. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is the remedy. Keep it at hand for emergencies. It never fails to cure or relieve.

Wood Yard Removed.

James Campbell has removed to the corner of Wellington and Barrack streets. Always on hand a good stock of best maple, cut and uncut, dry slabs, pine and cedar blocks. All cheap for cash. Telephone No. 116.

WE HAVE CURED THOSE—WE CAN CURE YOU!

FROM CANADA.

CLARENCE, P. O., Ontario, October 7th, 1892.
DR. A. T. SANDEN, Dear Sir—Kindly accept my hearty thanks for a price to my young man belt. It gave me wonderful relief. I was suffering from kidney trouble, indigestion, nervousness, and insomnia or sleeplessness, and was much run down. Had started for one year to attend school, but had to leave during which time I had several doctors, but they did strong drugs and poisons, and I was worse when I received your Belt I was unable to go all day. But now I can do days when I began to improve and now I feel a different person. I feel as if I would not take $100 for your belt today if I could not procure another. There are several others in this province (Ontario, but I do not know of any who I will produce testimonial statements and approval. If I can do any thing for you in regard to recommending to any afflicted person in Canada I will gladly do it free of charge. As we Canadians consider a testimonial from a Canadian worth much more than an American testimonial it may be a help to you to have a better acquaintance affected Canadian. You can also put this on your list of testimonials if you feel disposed to do so. I remain very gratefully yours, R. KEITH. Clarence P. O., Hastings Co., Ontario, Canada.

RHEUMATISM—LOST VIGOR.

NEW YORK CITY, Oct. 25, 1892.
DR. A. T. SANDEN, Dear Sir and friend—Yours of the 20th to hand and I am very much pleased with the belt which I purchased from you some months ago. I was troubled with rheumatism and lost vigor. I was very much run down, and could not do my work. I was very nervous, and was completely broken down. I was completely worn out, and was thoroughly discouraged. Your belt has cured me, and I feel like a young man. I am very thankful to you for the good it has done me. Yours very truly, JAMES MEAD, 38 Perry St.

GENERAL DEBILITY, &c.

OFFICE OF ROBERT & SON,
Dry Goods, 320 Carlton, Hamilton, Feb. 27, 1892.
DR. A. T. SANDEN, Dear Sir—I am glad to add my testimony to the many you have of the great value of your belt. My health has improved wonderfully, and I have gained twenty pounds of flesh, and now weigh well and have an excellent appetite. Your second electric belt with your "rules of Health" has been a very valuable one to me. I shall be pleased to recommending your belt. Yours respectfully, WM. GEO. SARGENT.
