A NICE SCANDAL.

The election of Mr. Lowell, of Welland, has been protested, the usual charges of impurity, bribery and corruption being preferred. One charge, out of the ordinary, ought, in the interest of government and for its credit, to have been omitted, namely, that "the voters' list used in the election was not the finally revised list of electors, as forwarded to Ottawa by the revising officer of the county, and that consequently the election should be voided." What a reflection it is that the franchise act should permit of such a scandal? The revising of the lists and the ordering of the bye-elections are in the hands of the government, and if its officials have not performed their work satisfactorily, or if the writ for an election be issued before it has been ascertained that the machinery has been provided for the same, the electors should not suffer. Practically, as the Ottawa Free Press puts it, "the tories of Welland propose to plead their own rascality as a reason for setting aside the election of a reformer who polled a large majority of votes." And it's a credit to them.

THE ULSTER BREAK.

St. Loe Strachey writes a comprehensive article in the Nineteenth Century on Ulster and home rule, arguing the question and holding out for a continuance of the present union and government of Ireland by an imperial parliament. The condition of public sentiment he essays to reflect, and the probable result of home rule he portrays at length, declaring that Ulster will ignore a Dublin parliament, and will at the outset offer only a passive resistance. What does this term mean? That in the event of an election being ordered the writs will be cast aside and no election take place; that when taxes are levied they will not be paid; that when seizures are made and goods put up for sale there will be no one to buy them; that meanwhile Belfast and the north will devise a system of government; that the imperial parliament will be with difficulty persuaded to use its soldiers to collect Irish local taxes, and so long as an open riot is avoided there will be no other excuse for dragooning Ulster; that an appeal may be finally made to the imperial parliament to break down the passive resistance of the Ulster people by coercion, and it must be done or home rule abandoned. "If," says Mr. Strachey, "they adopt coercion England will certainly be confronted with civil war in its most dangerous and hideous form. The moment the imperial government attempts coercion in earnest Great Britain will begin the manufacture of the bitterest enemies she has ever had." Again: "Granted that home rule had pacified the south, and had made the Celtic blood loyal, it would have made the north bitterly hostile and disloyal and, not to be restrained by military force. We should have shifted the area of rebellion, that is all, and have made the strongest, richest and most vigorous portion of the Irish people our enemies instead of our friends." Once more, "Home rule is intended to pacify Ireland, but it cannot pacify Ireland because of Ulster. If any proof of that is needed look at the fact that the most religious, the most serious-minded, the most correct, and the least political people in the north are quietly deciding that they will take the awful responsibility which may cost them their lives and their worldly goods, and may give over their homes to anarchy and destruction." The picture seems to be overdrawn. We cannot imagine a sensible people going into rebellion and fighting like fiends against something they do not understand and do not wait to study. The popularity and possibility of home rule depends very largely upon the nature of the parliament to be set up at Dublin, and the limit of its jurisdiction. A local parliament, such as we have in Ontario, would very much reduce the labor in the imperial house, and give to local government an attention that ought to make for the public good. In any case there should not be a rebellion over a sentiment or a prejudice. Rebellion is the last resort of a people against an intolerable wrong, and the establishment of a local parliament cannot be in itself a wrong. Its legislation will be typical of its morality, and the good or evil of it will very soon be manifested.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Five conservatives voted with the liberals on the Davies' amendment to the redistribution act, so far as it affected Prince Edward. Sir John Thompson had better be careful. He is losing his grip.

By the act passed at the last session of the legislature the personal earnings of the individual are exempted to the amount of $700, notwithstanding that they run over $1,000. This will make quite a difference in the year's tax receipts.

The McKinley bill was alleged to be in the interest of the workingmen, but statistics show that it has caused a reduction in wages from 5 to 30 per cent. and affected thousands of men and their families. It is the bath of conflict in the present campaign.

Detroit rejoices in the banishment to state prison of Prince Michael, one of the most degraded mortals that ever made a mockery of religion. A greater wretch there is not in America, and a candidate for a still lower circle in Dante's Inferno than that assigned by those guilty of carnal and sinful love.

The Toronto Sir John Macdonald memorial fund now amounts to about $8,000 it is said. To make up the required sum of $16,000 or $18,000 it is understood that twenty prominent conservatives have each agreed to contribute $500 apiece. That is the way to close up the deal. The Kingston movement is dragging in a most unaccountable way. Someone has to assume a great responsibility in regard to it, and the sooner the better.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Canada as She Is.

KINGSTON, June 24.—(To the Editor): I once heard of an old farmer who said he had two of the smartest boys on earth; he could put them into the barn any morning before breakfast and they would make half a dollar apiece trading waistcoats. They were smart boys, indeed, but no smarter than our "protectionists" expect our Canadian boys to be, judging them by their doctrines. A protective policy was to promote our mining, farming, manufacturing and other industries, and we were all to grow rich trading with one another! How the anticipated results of this policy have never come requires no comment, for every Canadian knows this. But where the great fallacy lies does not seem to be so plain and may well form a theme for consideration. In a young, growing, and chiefly agricultural country, as Canada has so far been, the greatest boon is to get all kinds of manufactured articles at the very cheapest rate possible. If we are pursuing agriculture or lumbering or mining or constructing railways, let us pursue these branches of industry with a zeal worthy of the pioneers who opened up the unbroken forest and founded homes for their posterity of to-day. Throw nothing in the way of manufacturers, let them labor as all other workingmen have to do and buy and sell to the best advantage without government interference. If we can get knives and forks and spoons, cutlery of all kinds, and the productions of looms and furnaces cheaper from England than we can from our own manufacturers, by all means let us Canadians have them, and still more, if we can get many things which are not only very useful but necessary from the land where the "old flag" flies, which cannot be produced here at all, is it not a glaring injustice that Canada cannot have the advantage of England's superiority and cheapness in such matters. Scientific and surgical instruments and books and things innumerable must be brought from England or the United States to keep our people fairly abreast of the times, and yet we are deprived of these unless we are willing to pay 30 per cent. more, besides the price of carriage, for these articles than the English people or the people of the United States have to pay. I include the United States because in them nearly everything that can be furnished by England is furnished by themselves and nearly as cheap. Protectionists hug the delusion that a prohibitory tariff would make Canada a manufacturing country. It might, indeed, compel her people to manufacture enough for their own wants, but at a much dearer rate for an inferior article than what it could be got from other countries for. Canada is not adapted for a general manufacturing country; her iron and coal are too far apart, her wood has been nearly all destroyed by the fires of the settlers and potash makers and used for purposes of making lumber; her precious metals are not very abundant. She cannot raise cotton or sugar cane, so that with all these disabilities, but most of all the scarcity of fuel, Canada can never compete with England as a manufacturing centre, nor with the United States as an "all around" country; for the United States is a world in itself, possessing and producing everything within its own bounds, having abundance of the products of earth and sea, of vale and mountain, of forest and mine. There is no other country in the world that can live so independently within it's own borders as the United States of America. Canada cannot raise peanuts; our people seem to like peanuts, but why should they pay an increased price for them when they cannot raise them at home? They like early strawberries; is it a wise policy to keep them out by tariff with the hope of forcing them to grow in hot houses here at four times the cost? No, let them come because the Delaware and Maryland strawberries will have run their course by the time our home products are in the market, and so, instead of any competition in the matter of strawberries we would enjoy them a much longer time and at reasonable rates, and it would be the same way with grapes. In the matter of fruits such as oranges, lemons, figs, prunes, apricots and other fruits which we cannot produce here, let Canadians enjoy all such things as freely and as cheaply as possible. Keep out grain and live stock from Ontario, coal from Nova Scotia, and fish from Newfoundland, if it be feared that other countries can raise, carry from there here, and sell these things in the dominion more cheaply than they can be produced and sold at home; but if they cannot do these things there is no fear of competition and a prohibitory tariff would be superfluous.

The true doctrine is this: Whatever England can sell us more cheaply than it can be sold for if made here, let us get that freely from England, and in the same way let us deal with the United States and with every other country under the sun. To buy in the cheapest markets is the way to grow rich; and the cheapest market is always that where the greatest facilities for producing the articles bought are found existing in juxtaposition.

"But you would thus make a 'slaughter market' of Canada," cry our protectionist friend. A year ago last winter I filled my barn with hay so that I have plenty yet, at $4 per ton. In this transaction, who was "slaughtered," I or the farmer? If one can buy at some bankrupt sale a lot of dry goods for fifty cents on the dollar, who is "slaughtered," the one that buys or the one whom hard times has forced to sell? If American manufacturers have a large quantity on hand, of goods that Canada needs, and sell them to us for seventy-five cents on the dollar, who is the sufferer—who is "slaughtered," the party that sells or the party that buys?

The admission of goods free of duty into our country means ease, and peace and plenty and no slaughter to us.

Another objector to free trade says, "Oh, you would soon drive out all our manufacturers and leave us entirely dependent on foreign countries for our made articles." The experience of England disproves this. English political economists assure us that the manufactories and productions of England have increased immensely since the free trade principle was adopted. Why do not the eastern states of America drive all the manufactories from the other states? They do not do so, but they convince all the others that it is best for each to produce those things for which it has the best facilities and can do to the best advantage.

As Canada is not "a world" in itself it would be its wisdom and wealth to do those things which it can do the best and get those things which it cannot produce to advantage, or cannot produce at all, from countries where they are produced much cheaper and better than we could possibly produce them.—Yours, T. R. DUPUIS.

WORKERS AT RIVERSIDE.

A FINE LETTER OF LIFE IN A HIVE OF INDUSTRY.

Dwelling on the Way Workers are Grouped in a Great Block—An Ottawa Lady Controls a Flat—Flat—The Chinese are the Emperors of the Country.

RIVERSIDE, Cal., June 14.—(To the Editor): In my former letters, I have dwelt upon the scenery of this lovely land and my Canadian friends who call it home. I now feel constrained to change my theme lest I too earn the title which I so frequently hear applied to Canadians, exclusive and clannish, and I will now ask you to take a peep at my new life among the Americans. As I write, there peals up from the lower flat, for I am one of the inhabitants of "a flat," the sweet strains of "Home, Sweet Home" sung by a number of fine manly voices, and I feel a twinge of home-sickness steal over me and, to banish it I will "write you a letter (act from)—but to home," to that dear old city which I ever call home.

Nearly three weeks ago I left the ranch which has been my secluded abode, during my novitiate in this country and now, refusing to take the veil and remain a nun, I have plunged into business and stirring life in the very heart of the town. Since I came to Riverside, a stately pile has arisen on Main street called the Rubidoux, after one of our prominent mountains. The musical name of Rubidoux is very appropriate for we have in this building, as I have already said, the conservatory of music, whence sweet sounds are discoursed from morn 'till long past dewy eve. As Riverside is an intensely musical town and a sort of Boston, in California, where if an artist can pass muster he or she may be sure of success elsewhere, so I feel highly favored, therefore, by being in close proximity to all these lovely sounds for like one of old I have learned to say:

"O solitude! where are the charms
That sages have seen in thy face?"

And in this new abode no one can be solitary. Besides the conservatory of music we have an art studio, presided over by a St. Louis lady with the stately name of Maude. Mrs. Maude is a widow, but is consoled in her widowhood by a partner in the studio, another widow bearing the name of Mann. Rather an old coincidence that the widow should yet have a very dear Mann to cheer her lonely hours. These very lovely and artistic ladies showed their artistic taste by choosing Riverside as their future home, and we are very proud of them as ornaments to the Rubidoux.

We have the best photograph gallery of Riverside located in our midst where very fine pictures equal to those of the best artists of St. Louis are sent abroad among admiring friends and patrons. We have a printer's office—an editor's den—from which the talented presiding genius hurls his thunderbolts against all things evil, and issues them under the appropriate name of The Reflex, and the reflex influence of the man on the paper and from that on its patrons must be great and good, for he is all the courtesy he inoculates in the organ through which he speaks to the refined taste of Riverside. Veterinary surgeons, architects, lawyers, doctors, dressmakers, milliners and real estate agents are all planted in this hive of industry. We have a bakery, a cafe, where cheap and excellent catering is done, and I got as good a dinner in it as I would in St. Louis for 50c or 75c, and in Rubidoux cafe we only pay 25c. Last and not least, one of our leading undertakers has his establishment in our midst, so we can be cared for living or dead.

Those enumerated occupy the lower flats, but on the third flat are the living rooms, thirty-five in number. The whole suite was leased by an enterprising Canadian lady from Ottawa and in about eight weeks after her venture she had all with the exception of one occupied or bespoken. That was wonderful for Riverside's flat season before the tourists come and shows both the excellence of the accommodation and the need of just such places in a land of migratory population such as we have here. She has families large and small and individuals of the Bohemian cast, like myself, safely housed in her comfortably furnished rooms and as I am the only stenographer and typewritist in the establishment, and the only teacher of the art in Riverside, I hope to make a success of my work here. I desire to secure a class in shorthand and typewriting and perhaps found "a school" of this art here. Of course all who introduce anything new must expect up-hill work and patient waiting at first, and a struggle before a victory, and I am willing to fight if I see any prospect of victory in the future. Like Bruce and the spider I will defy despair. He conquered and why should not I?

I have spent my three happiest weeks in the Rubidoux of all the period since coming to California. It is such a hive of industry and I hope soon to be one of the busiest of the bees. Every one in this building is busy and consequently happy and we are like a huge family. I have seen life in varied forms since I first left my quiet home in 1889, but, I am at present seeing and participating in an entirely new phase of it.

Help here, except Chinese, is almost unknown, so we will help ourselves, and in this building every one house keeps on a small scale. The long corridors are a sight at night and morning with the bottles of delicious milk varying from quarts to pints standing outside of the doors waiting for consumption. Gas and coal oil stoves in every stage from the tiny to the moderate are found in the rooms, while some only indulge in a spirit lamp and it is wonderful what a meal (and I speak from experience) can be gotten up by its aid. While speaking of help let me at this stage correct a very erroneous opinion of the east in which I shared until I came to this country. We in the east, suppose, that the Chinese monopolize servants' positions, because they work for nothing, or next to nothing. Well, this is a delusion. A Chinese servant receives from $25 to $35 per month and then will do nothing out of his strictly defined province even for this large wage. Many a time since coming here, I have thought, why do not eastern girls who want to enter remunerative service come out to this land? Why to them it would be an Eldorado. I wish sincerely my talents and education had been in this line for then one would be always sure and certain of remunerative employment and appropriated services. Why the masters and mistresses stand in awe and yield the point to the heathen Chinee and if ever strong, healthy bright girls and women come out here they would in a couple of months recoup themselves for their passage money and the mistress would humbly take the back door, if so dictated by our buxom, clever, eastern lassies.

Come then girls, and women, if you want remunerative work in this line; I can promise it in no other, and then to those, who covet them, there are husbands galore whenever you feel disposed to dismiss the mistress.

Some of these Chinese are, I confess, admirable servants. One American lady of my acquaintance can, with her family, leave in early summer, for an indefinite visit to the east leaving her "Joe," a high caste Chinaman of the Manda-lin order, they say, a man as handsome as a picture, (showing that in China blue blood tells in a manner it certainly seldom does in our own land) as a sort of steward of her home, and she returns late in the fall to find her house in apple pie order, and all her shelves filled with the trophies of his culinary skill in the shape of delicious canned and preserved fruits, savory catsups and pickles, with just the right degree of pungency, and all this the work of this wonderful man, who has executive ability worthy I was about to say, of a better name. But what could be better than administering to the wants of the inner man? Certainly I have heard, if I recollect aright, from some authoritative quarter, "that the way to reach a man's heart was through his stomach," and we all want to win hearts.

But we have run away from the Rubidoux, let us be back there to close our letter. A Chinese green grocer comes to our door, and from him we can purchase fruit and vegetables, and a Chinese laundryman calls at regular periods to "make clothes cleaner." So, you see, we have all the modern conveniences. Rents vary in price from $6 to $12 per month, payable strictly in advance, so there is not much danger of moonlight flittings leaving the landlady forlorn.

No matter how it strikes it is a happy life. We are all workers. We have not as yet divided into classes. Of course in the "scrub by-and-by" I anticipate distinctions, as to the merits of certain kinds of work as compared to others may arise, and Mrs. A——— may proudly draw aside her skirts from contact with Mrs. B———, whose service is of a more plebian nature than can be tolerated by Mrs. A———, but, I fervently hope, I may be far away when that epoch sets in. We are all servants in this world, or if not we ought to be, and all honest work is honorable and the hardest worker is the one who has the highest stamp of nature's nobility.

Among our workers here I must mention Dr. David Rutherford, formerly house surgeon in Kingston. He with his wife and son and heir, Thomas Maxwell, are also the inhabitants of a part of a flat. The doctor has done good service during the late epidemic of diphtheria, which has ravaged so many homes. I like the Americans because they have shot far ahead of the majority of Canadians in their honor of all honest work. They are less clannish and less clannish than Canadians. In fact the latter trait, in most Canadians, without the states catch them young, dies hard or dies never.—ELIZABETH GORDON ROSE.

JUNE WEATHER WEAKENING!

No Wonder That Mothers Dread the Hot Weather!

Thousands of loving mothers fear and tremble when June weather is experienced. The oppressive hot term usually begins at this time; and with it comes disease, suffering and death to the innocent bodys. At this particular season the poorly fed infant is the first to be attacked by cholera infantum, dysentery and diarrhœa.

The infant who is nourished from day to day on pure and life-giving Lactated Food, passes safely through all these summer troubles that assail and cut down the poorly nourished babe. Mothers who use the healthy Lactated Food for their infants, are not disturbed by dread and fear. They see baby progressing in health and strength; they look, from day to day, on the lovely form of the child expanding in beauty and loveliness. Mothers should understand that these desired conditions are only seen when Lactated Food is used daily.

The testimony of the best physicians, and of hundreds of happy and grateful mothers who have had their babies saved by Lactated Food, are sufficient proof that, at this critical season, every languishing and weak babe may be saved if fed on the best of all foods.

The Last Week.

The staff of eminent physicians and surgeons now permanently located at No. 92 Queen St. will give their services free, for three months, to all invalids who call upon them before July 1st. The doctors treat every kind of disease and deformity and will perform all surgical operations free from this month, viz: The removal of cancers, tumors, cataract, polypi, etc. All diseases of the eye, ear, throat, lungs, heart, stomach, liver, kidneys, bladder and all female difficulties arising from whatever cause, nervous prostration, failing vitality, and all diseases originating from impure blood are treated with the greatest success.

Catarrh, in all its various forms, cured by their new method, which consists in breaking up the cold-catching tendency to which every person suffering from catarrh is susceptible.

Invalids will please not take offence if they are rejected as incurable. The physicians will examine you thoroughly free of charge and, if incurable, they will positively tell you so. Also caution you against spending more money for useless medicine.

Suffering Children

Our girl was a beautiful baby, fair and plump and healthy. But when she was two years old, sores broke out behind her ears and spread rapidly over her head and forehead down to her eyes, and into her neck. We consulted one of the best physicians in Brooklyn, but nothing did her any good. The doctors said it was caused by a scrofula humor in the blood. Her head became offensive to the smell and dreadful to look at. Her general health waned and she would lay in a large chair all day without any life or energy. The sores caused great itching and burning, so that at times we had to restrain her hands to prevent scratching. For 3 years with this terrible humor. Being urged to try Hood's Sarsaparilla we did so. We soon noticed that she had more life and appetite. The medicine seemed to drive out more of the humor for a short time, but it soon began to subside, the itching and burning ceased, and in a few months her head became entirely clear of the sore. She is now perfectly well, has no evidence of the humor, and her skin is clear and healthy. She seems like an entirely different child, in health and general appearance, from what she was before taking
