Parking relief plan expected at Council on Monday

by Julia Le

Discussion about possible parking relief coming to downtown Oakville and Kerr Village — a bid to revive businesses after a difficult winter and offset upcoming construction — surfaced briefly at Oakville's Administration Services Committee meeting Tuesday.

Last week, Mayor Rob Burton revealed his intention to help revive businesses in the town's three BIA areas, including paid parking relief, which is expected to go before Town council Monday.

He told the Oakville Beaver yesterday he'll put forward a motion then.

In an earlier interview with the Beaver, the mayor said the proposal will ask staff to create a free parking policy in the downtown Business Improvement Area (BIA) that could be ready for implementation by June.

Oakville teams up for Terry

by Julia Le

To many, Terry Fox is a symbol of courage, hope and inspiration.

As Chair of this year's Oakville Terry Fox Run, Ward 2 Town Councillor Pam Damoff shared with residents, local politicians and business officials who gathered at Town Hall Wednesday how, 34 years ago, on April 12, 1980, the Canadian hero dipped his artificial leg in the Atlantic Ocean to mark the beginning of his cross-Canada Marathon of Hope.

That journey and Fox's story and battle with bone cancer continues to be remembered and honoured through the annual Terry Fox Run.

Its kick-off event is also a tradition, one that aims to encourage the Oakville community to begin its own journey in raising funds for the upcoming Terry Fox Run, set for Sept. 14 in Coronation Park.

With no entry fee or minimal required donation, Team Up For Terry invites the community to gather colleagues, associates, friends, families
