A Sailor Injured.

Malcolm Sealgrove, a sailor on the schr. Fleetwing, was accidentally struck on the head this morning by an axe in the hands of another sailor splitting wood on the deck. He was picked up almost senseless and with a severe wound on his skull, and taken to the cabin, where medical assistance was furnished him. He will be sent to his home in Brighton to-night.

Will Go on a Cruise.

Mr. Daniels intends to take an extended trip on the Titania soon, going from Ottawa to Kingston and from there through the Thousand Islands down to Montreal. The engine is under the charge of W. Armstrong. A very neat little brass cannon, a present from a New York friend, adorns the bow of the boat and will be used for salutes.

The Boys are Safe.

N. and G. Henderson and W. Bates, the three Kingston yachtsmen, enjoying a lake cruise in the Mary, turned up at Port Hope. Their whereabouts being unknown to their friends, during the heavy gale, much anxiety was caused. They left Port Hope for Kingston yesterday and will no doubt reach here safe and sound to-morrow.

SUBJECTS OF INTEREST.

A TRIP THROUGH AN INTERESTING SECTION OF COUNTRY.

How The States of New York, New Jersey, Delaware and Virginia Looked This Spring to an Ontario Farmer—His Ideas on the Probabilities for Reciprocity.

KINGSTON, July 8.—(To the Editor): American agriculture has over a wide area so much in common with that of Ontario, the weather and the woods are just the same, and the people have just such a way of looking on the world of matter, that it is difficult to find points of difference to note. The American farmer is said to show a greater love of neatness in his surroundings, but there are whole townships in Ontario, where you will see finer homesteads than you will be able to match in many a day's railway travel in the states. I found no difference in vegetation on the 28th May, between that around Kingston and the western part of New Jersey, except that in the latter country there were peach trees and chestnuts to be seen, and the apple blossoms appeared to have been set a few days earlier. Gardens were no farther advanced than here. When you leave the heavy soils of Jefferson and Oswego counties in New York state, the lighter soil of the Genesee river country did not show to much greater advantage. I heard in Rochester complaints of hard times among the farmers and general depreciation of the value of land. On too many farms and fences, on too many house walls, the farmer in New York and New Jersey has written: "This world is all a wilderness; this world is not my home." The farms are large, the working family small, hired labor too costly, and one pair of hands cannot keep everything tidy about the enclosures and the homestead, and at the same time drive the farm. Blessings on the man who will introduce in the east the sensible herd law of the prairies. It is a theme the church might take up. Have I not known a village inn-keeper keep a herd of measly cattle, which, as free commoners by township law, were the terror of every poor farmer in a backwoods settlement, and escaped impounding because these pioneers were unable to do more than erect barriers of brush fences against stock? Who can condemn the young man for going west when he knows that never in Dakota or Manitoba need he toil the whole winter through to erect a fence for protection of crop? The law protects it and compels every man to see to it that his cattle do not injure his neighbor's property, or take consequences. To induce the settlement of our free grant lands colonists are practically given two licenses, one to burn up the forest and the other to allow their cattle to roam over the property of every man who cannot put five feet of fence between his crop and its sure destruction. And behold how flourishing are our free grant settlements, how exempt from fires, how prosperous as feeding grounds for cattle! The New Jersey land owners whose wood lots have been cut over and are now showing a vigorous second growth of young timber will not suffer bush to be browsed by stock. On the other hand I have been told that in parts of the Blue Ridge in Virginia the hill squatters fire the young forests so as to make tender browsing for cattle in the following year. Vandalism in timber regions on this continent has never been properly taken hold of by the legislator. The time is fast coming when these New York farms I look at from the car windows must either go unfenced or the hedge must take the place of posts and boards. Along many an enclosure one sees here and there suggestion of the coming hedge. It is an orderly clump of willows, or a hazel copse, or a few evergreens that have conformed to the demand of the ploughman and have arrayed in line. Not much longer than two centuries have passed since hedges were first introduced in England. They are needed for shelter on the prairie and the man who will there first promote their cultivation will deserve a monument more enduring than brass. They are needed for shelter around orchards and homesteads in exposed situations, and after all are they not cheaper than any other kind of fence, always supposing that ere long we shall have cheaper labor for the farm?

The farmer on poor soils is often more progressive than his neighbor on strong land. The fertilizer trade has reached dimensions in the United States, of which the Canadian farmer knows nothing. The immense beds of phosphate boulders in S. Carolina, Georgia and Florida contribute their fertilizing property to the barren soils of Delaware and New Jersey, blended with ash, guano and poudrette manures, and the truckman, as they call the market gardener, is able to wholesale his cabbage for fifty cents a hundred. Other fifty cents go for the package, the railway and commission man. Around Norfolk and along the lowlying shores of North Carolina the Bermudan farmer has his competitor winning from a soil, until yesterday thought worthless, early vegetables for northern markets. He buys fertilizers at $30 to $40 a ton, and will put in with his corn $6 worth on an acre. There passed through Norfolk, Virginia, on one day of my visit 10,000 barrels of "Irish" potatoes, 5,000 barrels of beans and uncounted thousands of barrels of cabbage in transit for Philadelphia, New York and Boston. The oyster sloop which until this traffic sprang into life was idle from May until September is now a busy freighter pushing into every cove. In a growing town like Norfolk the home market is all that the seller could desire. Notwithstanding the abundance of vegetables prices were per bunch the same as in Kingston, and potatoes were selling at sixteen cents a quart; sweet potatoes at six cents a quart.

Nor is it on garden land only that fertilizers are used. I chatted with a New Jersey farmer whose tidy fifty acre farm, using buildings and fine team were all goodly to look to, and not less so himself, for as he stood and gossiped he was the finest picture of content and self-satisfaction I have seen in many a long day. There was a field of six acres planted to corn dotted all over in perfect geometry with white spots of "fertilizer" the size of a Canuck penny, above the spot where the corn kernels were working out their resurrection. "Last year I had a poor crop," he said, "but may get ninety bushels of ears on that field if I have good luck. I have put on 1,800 weight of fertilizer on the six acres, cost me $36." "How much rye do you think you will have on yonder field?" "About eighteen bushels to the acre." "Is not that a poor crop?" "Not in these parts." "I suppose the straw counts for a good deal, you are so near New York. I see straight rye straw unbroken by the thresher, sells for $14 a ton, if broken at $11, and they tell me it will turn over four times in the livery stables, and is the cheapest bedding they can use." "No I never sell rye straw. I feed it." "Feed it! Will cattle eat it in this country?" "My horses will when it is cut and sprinkled with meal. It is better for them than hay, gives them a slick coat and keeps them in order. I reason about it in this way: You can't get a load of rye straw to stick together like any other straw. It is so oily that it won't pack, and I think that's why it keeps a horse's skin shining." "How do you dispose of your rye?" "Grind it and mix with corn ground up with the cob. When I have no rye I have no feed. It is worth more than any other grain to enrich meal." Now here is a problem for the O. A. C. given by a practical man: What is the feeding value of ground rye and corn and cob meal for horses, cows, hogs and sheep?

Did the farmers I talked with advocate free trade with Canada? Not one. They all spoke to me friendly and liked evidently to hear me talk over the advantages of reciprocity to Canada, but when it came to eggs I could see that the memory of last year's prices and the satisfaction with what McKinley has wrought in the prices this year, counterbalance any notion of the value of Canada as a field for American enterprise. Am I a free trader? This is my creed: That while believing to err is human, and that I should look with charity on all human opinion, I question in the innermost depths of my soul if a man who believes in protection truly believes in the bible. I look upon a tariff for protection as a trick, and that indirect taxation is a device of the devil. I am ready with all charity to say: "If no angel from heaven preach any other gospel at him be accursed." Governments by the people will never be governments for the people until we have the single tax, and the Messiah will never come to his kingdom until honesty, common honesty, sits on the throne of empire. But consider what is "in man." From the hireling who trims his utterance for a subscription, to the farmer whose vote goes one way or the other as eggs may be 10c or 16c the dozen, men are alike the world over. The housewife who gets twenty pounds of granulated sugar for a dollar thinks sweetly of Mr. Blaine and reciprocity, but she looks up her geography and finds that the breeze which blows down the price of eggs does not come from the quarter which sends down the price of sugar, and she gives her opinion accordingly. "You raise a mighty sight of horses in Canada," said a Vermonter to me. "We can sell horses down our way this year. Last year we couldn't sell at any price."

What moral flows from these remarks. First, farmers who have not a grip on their surroundings have their houses built on sand and will assuredly go under the waves of ever advancing competition in production. Toil will alone settle the question of trade relations with other countries. Green vegetables have been brought from Europe to the United States and a considerable trade has been done in early produce from the Bermudas. But the gardener along the hot coast sands of Virginia and North Carolina will soon cut off a large part of that trade and at the same time invade the trade of northern growers. Virginia comes to the front with iron and coal and good harbors, and with Tennessee and Kentucky at her back can make new combinations for American enterprise. The idea that American capital with tenfold the opportunity to make profits at home that it can find abroad will ever seek this country is a delusion. It may have done so in the past, but it was generally to its disadvantage and therefore did not stay. The Canadian farmer must hoe his own row with a sharper blade and greater skill than ever before. I have seen a great deal of the United States, and nowhere better soil than in Frontenac. There are thousands of miles of stone wall in the United States built of boulders, and the stone crop on the surface is heavy as if not a stone had ever been removed. Nature intended this land for forest, and all the tariffs and railways and labor that men can put into it will never earn from it anything but the fool's dividend of sorrow and vexation of spirit. Let us return all such land to the forest. There are sources of wealth to be found in our arable soils that have never been developed and never will be until united enterprise awakes to irresistible successful endeavor. Of this I would speak later.—TRAVELLER.

CITY AND VICINITY.

Business Running Smoothly.

The employees in Chown & Cunningham's stove works are now employed full time and the business is working smoothly under the new manager.

Off On A Cruise.

On Friday Mr. Campbell will leave the city in the sailing yacht Gracie, on a cruise on the upper lakes. The first port he will call at will be Hamilton.

Read Saturday's "Whig."

We publish the large WHIG every Saturday to give our readers plenty of reading matter. Broadbrim's lively New York letter will appear next Saturday, as well as an illustrated article of the Thousand Islands. Be sure and buy the WHIG.

Rest From the Sun's Rays.

A tramp, named John Moore, asked for a rest at the police station yesterday afternoon, and after an hour's sleep in the cells, was let out of town. It is not often that the police are troubled with tramps seeking protection during the heat of summer.

The Tenders Awarded.

A meeting of the school property committee was held on Tuesday evening and tenders were awarded for the repairs to be done during the holidays. The names of the contractors will not be published until after the meeting of the school board this evening.

He Surprised Them.

J. Green, butcher, the successful tenderer for the supply of meat to the penitentiary, surprised the other dealers by the prices he quoted. They did not expect opposition from him. Mr. Mitchell will supply the drugs, and Breck & Booth will provide wood and coal.

Preparing the Programme.

The band of the 14th batt. are practising an excellent programme for Tuesday evening, when they will appear in the city park. A solo for euphonium, entitled "The Death of Nelson," will be played by J. Foden. A. Abernethy has been elected financial manager of the band.

Fixing Up the Grounds.

A large amount of money is being expended in improving the grounds about the Williamsville Methodist church. A new fence has been built and an old one at the rear has been repaired. The practice of some people in using the grounds as a short cut to Princess street will be prohibited in future.

The Winners of Prizes.

Miss Jessie Hates, of this city, has won the Witness prize for an essay, and school prizes were secured by C. V. Lindsay, Fred Coggan and Richard McClymont. For Frontenac Georgina Watts is winner; school prizes go to Maud Cordukes, Jackson's Mills; Annie Shepherd, Glenburnie; Ada Dawson,Ompah.

They Don't Want James to Get It.

Some of the conservatives, seeing that a proposed saw off in the elections meant the selection of J. H. Metcalfe, M.P.P., for the dominion house to create a vacancy in the Ontario legislature, are opposed to any such a proposition. For that matter, also, the grits are inclined to fight the matter to a finish, no matter who takes the field.

On a Hunting Expedition.

When the steamer Maud arrived from Cape Vincent last evening the following passengers walked off on to the wharf: Messrs. F. Ulrich, W. B. Sperling, J. H. Fisher, A. L. Munday and V. S. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, N.J. They brought with them much baggage and plenty of fishing tackles to use for several weeks while camping near one of the lakes in the rear of the county of Frontenac. They left to-day on a K. & P. railway train for their hunting ground.

Police Court—Thursday.

Elisabeth Parker was brought into court this morning after postponements and given three months in jail on a former charge of larceny which had been reserved against her. Thomas Wiltse brought a charge of stealing a quantity of stone against Wm. Weaver his next door neighbor. The stone valued at $3 to $5 was alleged to have been taken while Wiltse was absent in Syracuse. The value being so slight the colonel advised a settlement and adjourned the case till Monday to allow Weaver to pay for the stone.

A Moss-Covered Edifice.

A group of American excursionists in the city, yesterday, laughingly commented on the verdant oriental appearance of the roof of a storehouse adjoining a shop on the business portion of Brock street. Along the eave trough grass grows in wild profusion with plenty of moss on the shingles, and at the peak of the building a vigorous young apple tree shoots up in all its native beauty. The Yankees took in the display, noted the fact that the building was in the business portion of the city and walked away, no doubt with a very poor opinion of Kingston and its business houses.

The Hotel Arrivals.

Arrivals at the British American Hotel—Dr. Butler, Montreal; A. McDonald, Howe Island, F. S. Harrison, Oneida Co., N. Y.; G. M. Flower, Westmoreland, N. Y.; W. C. Bell, Toronto; G. N. Mills, Buffalo, N. Y.; J. L. Henry, Montreal; M. Davis, J. W. Way, W. W. Cole, Toronto; A. V. F. Ubert, Montreal; J. R. Wright, Montreal; F. S. Ward, Halifax; H. L. Hurlburt, Mitchell; R. T. Connell, Cape Vincent; P. Bierhmer, Berlin; A. D. Kitchener, Toronto; A. W. Bingham and wife, Bowmanville; J. S. Franklin, New York; Wm. Greer, wife and child, Barrie.

THE CANTONS TURNOUT.

THE KINGSTONIANS DELIGHTED WITH SYRACUSE TREATMENT.

A Jewel For a Fine Fellow—The Parade Was Very Fine And Kingston Had a Good Place In It—The Events of To-day.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., July 9.—"We own the town," said a jolly faced Kingstonian to me this morning as he recalled the events of the past night, "and I am satisfied quite a number of the boys have a first mortgage on some of the pretty girls. What would we do if they foreclosed? What would our wives say?" The fact is the Canadians are being used white. They are accorded all the honors and yesterday was a fine festival for them. The Kingston Canton reached here early in the afternoon and were heartily welcomed. They were marched out to their quarters and at once settled down for a good time. A very pleasant event occurred, the presentation of a jewel to Col. Chapman, P.G.M., of New York state. Col. Chapman was one of the jolly boys in Kingston last August. The jewel presented was an elaborate piece of chased gold work, set with diamonds and rubies. Its value is $450. Pendant under the cross bar, upon which are the words "Grand Master," is the monogram "O. W. C." set with diamonds. The lower pendant bears the heart and hand, the heart being a ruby.

The parade yesterday was a great affair. As the men tramped through the busy thoroughfares, lined with thousands of people, the scene was very grand. The Kingston canton was in the second division, under command of Col. G. H. Lander, of Belleville. There were about five thousand in it. The fine cantons from all parts of New York state and Eastern Ontario, were in the procession. I noticed the following Canadian officers: Major W. M. Drennan, A. D. C. attached to the staff; Major Butterworth, Ottawa; Brig.-Gen. Slatter, Col. Unitt, Lieut.-Col. McCabe, Toronto; Major Stenberg, Ottawa; Major L. Atkinson, Newmarket; Major Fred Daggett, St. Thomas; Lieut.-Col. Young, Belleville; Major James Grant, Ottawa; Major D. H. Moore, Peterboro. The Kingston contingent marched well under Capt. Bullis, and was loudly applauded.

Yesterday at eleven o'clock a convocation of officers was held at headquarters tent, Kirkwood park, Gen. P. J. Slatter, Toronto, presiding. An address of welcome was made by Mayor Cowie and a response was made by the divisional commander. At three o'clock there was a dress parade and review at Kirkwood park. A reception was given the grand officers at seven o'clock, and at nine o'clock in the evening a grand display of fireworks, under the direction of Prof. Paine, occurred.

To-day the prize drill occurred, in which many cantons competed. The firemen have a time this afternoon, and to-night a swell ball occurs. Mayor Drennan is in the swim and has a great following, who are delighted with his manner. The boys are proud because he holds up the name of Kingston so well. There will be a large deputation to Kingston on Saturday, and some of the finest corps in New York state will parade through the streets. Give them a good reception.

Is There to Stay.

Syracuse Herald.

William M. Drennan, Mayor of Kingston, Capt. C. W. Fraser, of Ogdensburg, and Gen. Freeman I. Daniels, of Ottawa arrived last evening and are quartered at the Globe Hotel. Mayor Drennan is very popular among the patriarchs, and his general popularity in his own city is attested by the fact that he is now serving his second term as Mayor. In the militant he holds the rank of adjutant of the dominion of Canada on General Woodward's staff, and he is one of the most enthusiastic members of the order. Speaking of the order, Colonel Drennan said: "The growth of the subordinate lodge in Canada has been marvellous, and the militant is increasing its strength greatly. There are fifteen cantons in the dominion, but it will be impossible for all of them to attend the grand cantonment. When I heard that the encampment was going to be held in Syracuse I said that I would be there. I am here now and I am going to stay until the last."

THE WOMEN NOT PLEASED.

They Did Not Like Space in the Shambles Curtailed.

The market to-day was not a large one but business was brisk, raspberries, blueberries, new potatoes and other delicacies commanding good prices. The good ladies of Wolfe Island do not take kindly to the change in the island market, and it was with some difficulty that market clerk McCammon kept them from taking the forbidden space by storm. "That's the last straw," remarked a citizen standing by, "now we'll have an uptown market and outside the city limits."

Look Out for Squalls.

KINGSTON, July 8.—(To the Editor): You need not be surprised if, on Saturday morning, you hear the citizens express their indignation at the committee of city property in turning the Wolfe Islanders out of the shambles to make room for the housing tramps and drunkards.—TAX PAYER.

Water Works Meeting.

A meeting of the water works committee was called last evening but only Alds. Polson and Muckleston were present. A letter has been received from the secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association stating that it is the intention of the directors to put swimming baths in the new Y.M.C.A. building on the corner of Barrie and Princess streets if reasonable terms can be made with the department. The communication will be considered at a full meeting of the committee. Arrangements for the supply of hard and soft coal for the department have been made with dealers in Oswego and Charlotte. The pay list for two weeks ending July 8th, amounted to $303.12. The application of John Whitebread, asking for the extension of a water pipe on Bagot street, will be granted if favorable arrangements can be made with residents on the street.

No Decision Reached.

The Brockville council is in receipt of a communication from H. Moores & Co., of this city, asking what inducements could be offered in the way of exemption or bonus for a large mill which the firm contemplates erecting. The industry will be the manufacture of rolled oats, wheat and barley, split peas and corn meal, the mill to have a capacity of one hundred barrels per day. Mr. Moores says that he would rather establish the mill in this city, but after interviewing several aldermen and finding them all opposed to exemption, thought it useless to ask it formally from the council. Other places were willing to give both exemption and bonus, and, of course, in such case only one course of action was open to him, to go where the best offer was made.

A Friend in Minneapolis.

W. R. Taylor, a late employee of Muckleston & Co., is now manager of the frame and mirror department of Firman, Ford & Co., Minneapolis. In writing to a friend he speaks of a fight he saw in Minneapolis between a policeman and two Swedes. After a desperate struggle the officer arrested the men. Patrol waggons are used in connection with the police department. When men or women are arrested they are put into the van and driven to the station house. The weather has been very warm, the thermometer registering generally 96° in the shade. The nights are always cool and business is booming in the city.

A Joyous Evening.

Yesterday, the children of Mary and several hundred friends spent a pleasant afternoon and evening at Long Island Park, (Knapp's Point), a beautiful and enticing place indeed. A permanent platform has been erected, about fifty yards from the landing, and was constantly taxed after the arrival of the evening boat. Candy and refreshment booths, in charge of the ladies, were well patronized. The scenery from all quarters of the point is magnificent.

Off on the Trip.

The lighthouse supply steamer Canada, with Inspector Pat Harty on board, arrived this morning. The genial inspector states that the trip so far has been a very pleasant one, "barring rain," as the thirty five passengers on board know how to amuse themselves and are quite capable of furnishing plenty of jollity for the long trip yet before them, which will not conclude until about September 1st. All lighthouses between Montreal and Pigeon Island have already been supplied. The trip is necessarily longer now as new regulations require the inspector to examine each lighthouse in daylight. Mr. Harty calculates that it will take about two months to call at all the 200 lighthouses along the route. The Canada will then return by Chicago, or anywhere that a cargo can be secured, to Montreal.

Light Summer Coats and Vests.

Prevost is selling a nice summer coat for 75c, and a splendid coat and vest for $2 50. Those in need of them during the warm weather will do well to call on him.
