Sale of Valuable City Property

PURSUANT TO A JUDGMENT of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, made in the action of Cheverys v. Jeffry, bearing date the 24th day of July, 1891, there will be sold by Public Auction, with the approbation of J. M. Machar Esquire, Q.C., Master of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario, at Kingston, by William Murray, Auctioneer, at his Auction Rooms, Market Square, Kingston, at two o'clock in the afternoon, on Wednesday, the 23rd Day of September 1891, the commodious DWELLING HOUSE AND PREMISES, with the appurtenances, situated on the south side of Queen street, in the City of Kingston, and lying immediately West of the gateway entering the City Hotel yard from Queen street, and being composed of part of town lot number 254 in the original survey of the Town of Kingston, fronting on Queen street about 37 feet and having a depth to the rear of about 97 feet, and according to the plan and description of the same by T. W. Nash P. L. S., which will be produced at the time of sale. The dwelling house is a substantial stone building of two stories, including a convenient cellar kitchen, and with suitable outhouses. The property may be viewed by intending purchasers. The property will be offered for sale subject to a reserved bid fixed by the master. The purchaser shall pay ten per cent of the purchase money at the time of sale to the plaintiff's solicitor and the balance shall be paid into Court in 30 days thereafter. In all other respects the terms and conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the said court.
For further particulars apply to James Agnew, Plaintiff's Solicitor, or to Messrs. Walkem & Walkem, McIntyre & McIntyre, or T. L. Snoos, Solicitors, Kingston.
Dated at the Master's Office, Kingston, the 1st day of September, 1891.

INCIDENTS OF THE DAY.

Newsy Paragraphs Picked Up by Our Reporters in Their Rambles.

Attend B. Silver's clearing sale.

On Tuesday the Kingston field battery will depart for Belleville.

The yacht Ariadne arrived home from Gananoque during the night.

There was a great rush for books at the public school library last evening.

We always do show the finest lot of wool mats in the city. Another new consignment just received at R. McFaul's.

The Josie Mills company will open a week's engagement in Gananoque on Monday.

B. Silver's entire stock must be sold out within fifteen days at any price.

The work of improving the eastern end of the city buildings will be commenced on Monday.

Gravel is now being placed where necessary on the market square. This has long been needed.

K. D.C. a positive cure for dyspepsia. Sold by E. C. Mitchell, late Chown & Mitchell.

An informal test of one section of the suction pipe was made this morning by Mr. Hewitt.

New fall goods arriving daily at Walsh & Steacy's. Look out for bargains next week.

Sixty pieces of new floor oil cloth, elegant patterns and low in prices, at R. McFaul's.

Five families, camping at Rock Point, Pittsburg, for several months, will return to the city on Monday.

Rev. Dr. Grant will deliver an address in Hamilton this winter under the auspices of the public library board.

A meeting of the Ontario rugby union will be held in Toronto to-night to arrange for the ties for the coming season.

Hamilton is trying to wipe out the forest of poles that line its streets. Kingston will have to do the same some day soon.

Str. Swan for hire by the day or week. Fishing and hunting parties a specialty. Apply to Captain T. J. Craig or J. Swift & Co.

See the handsome new jacket and ulster cloths that Bowes & Bisonette are exhibiting, and prices very low.

Kingston having made a "howling success" of its dog show the people of Belleville hope to make a "blooming success" of a flower show.

Telephone No. 10, hacks hitched day or night; drivers in livery dress; moderate prices; J. A. Clapp & Son.

The field division of "A" battery left last night on the str. Pierrepont for Belleville. The band played several lively selections as the boat left the dock.

Kid gloves made as good as new by using Mathers' glove cleaner. To be had only at Walsh & Steacy's.

"A" battery band rendered a good programme in the park last night. The "Passing Regiment" and the clarionet Fantasia, by Bandsman Blinkhorn, were splendid.

Do you need any new towels? You can secure great bargains at R. McFaul's. 200 dozen just received.

Early in the spring it was announced that a crossing was to be built across Brock street on Gordon, but it has not materialized and residents have to wade through mud to get over.

Photographs of residences, camps, yachts, open air groups, views of Kingston, etc. H. Henderson, 90 Princess St.

Once more at nearly the end of the season we say, we have soda water and we expect to keep on saying so year after year at Wilson's pharmacy.

Who can beat it? A.O.U.W. have no assessment for September. They have had nine assessments in nine months of $1 each for $2,000 insurance. No wonder the old liners kick.

If you need blankets this coming winter we will sell you them now at manufacturers prices. It will pay you to buy at R. McFaul's

On Tuesday Dr. Chamberlain visited the House of Providence and found the institution satisfactory. It is one of the best conducted in this district.

During the past few weeks Mr. McKay of the business college has received applications from other schools and colleges for teachers of bookkeeping and penmanship.

Commissioner W. S. Gordon and city solicitor Agnew have had offices arranged for them in the city hall which they will occupy while the improvements are going on.

Our grape julip is a decided success. It is something so decidedly new and catchy the people like it. We think you will not regret trying it at Wilson's pharmacy.

The East Northumberland tariff is $200 for a lighthouse job and $150 for the position of bridge tender. Wonder what the rate is for a Kingston post office job?

Mr. R. Gardiner has returned from Seattle to remain in the city for a few days. He will be pleased to meet, at the office of Mr. Joseph Swift, any one desirous of renting or purchasing his two elegant houses on Earl street.

At a meeting of both Asylum and Princess street baseball clubs at the Windsor hotel last night, Mr. R. J. Elliock was chosen to umpire the game at Channel Grove on Monday.

BROADBRIM'S LETTER.

DRINKING SALOONS THE MOST ATTRACTIVE ON HIS ROUTE.

Cold Water Fountains Are Greatly Needed—To Go to the Courts—He Secured a Wife But Won't Pay Over the Money—Wall Street Stirred Up.

(Special Correspondence.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—When the dog star rages there is no allurement that so meshes the wayward feet of the average sinner as the desire to get a drink. We may be christians de facto and prohibitionists per se, but of a hot day the devil and gin-fizz are not far from our elbow, ready to lay us by the heels. I go along the streets and I find the drinking saloons the most attractive looking places on my route. The windows are polished bright, the handsome chandeliers are covered with fleecy gauze to protect them from the flies, there is no tawdy display in the windows of the cooling treasures within, but a handsome panel of beautiful design leaves all that to the vivid imagination. I step inside the lattice half-doors and electric fans make the atmosphere delightfully cool; before me is a magnificent bar, glistening in the resplendent glory of fine cut-glass and silver. The deity who presides here, arrayed in spotless white cravat, faultless necktie and immaculate shirt, is suave as Chesterfield or Beau Nash. It needs no words from him to assure me of my welcome—his shining face tells all. Here I am, according to all prohibition theories, on the very verge of ruin, and yet no hand has been stretched forth to save me. You give me theories, but the thermometer is almost 100 degrees, and I feel like another sinner, of whom I once read; he got a very hot place and he wanted a drop of cold water. Saloons don't sell cold water; they are not put up that way, so I pay my ten cents and take ——no matter what—but it is not all water. Thousands and thousands of men stray into the saloon every day because they are dying of thirst and want a cool drink.

This week, in Tompkins' square, a society which has been formed here for the purpose erected a drinking fountain which is furnished with an ice tank, where the wayfarer may get a cool drink of pure water at all hours of the day. The neighborhood where this fountain is erected swarms with saloons of every class, and the men and women who have contributed to this noble charity have done a greater work than if they had founded a hospital or a church. Let temperance people everywhere erect these cold water fountains, remove the desperate temptation of burning thirst, and look for their reward in the blessing promised to those who shall give a cup of cold water even to the humblest of His children. The opening of the new fountain was made a marked feature of last week, but I regret to add that the mayor and aldermen were not at the inauguration. The aldermen ought probably to be excused, for there was a meeting of the liquor dealers' association called for that afternoon, and most of them were unable to attend the christening of the cold water fountain, having important business elsewhere.

Quite a flutter took place last week among our yachtsmen, when Fred Vanderbilt's English-built yacht, the Conqueror, was seized by the government in default of the payment of duties to the amount of $35,000. Now that the affair has got tangled up, it is not quite certain that he will be let off as easily as that; they may insist on payment ad valorem, and if so, it will teach our fine American gentlemen, if they want yachts, either to be prepared to pay the duties, or have them built at home. We won't let a man bring in clothes or jewelry or machinery except such as he has in daily use, then why exempt a millionaire's yacht? It is understood that after the government officers seized her, Mr. Vanderbilt deposited his check for $37,000 under protest, and the whole matter will now go to the courts.

Among our Jewish friends there are few more important persons than the Schatzen; he is the person who is supposed to provide the sons and daughters of Israel and Judah with good husbands and wives. Among the Polish Russians and Hungarian Jews the business of the Schatzen is regarded quite as legitimate as selling clothes or lending money at the sign of the three balls. Max Cornfelt was a successful business man; he came here poor as a church mouse, but that was no fault of his, he was born so; but all he wanted was a chance, and he got it in free America. He was thrifty and industrious, and it was not very long till he had a nice little bank account and a cap store, and like the dutiful son that he was, he sent for his father and mother from Hungary. But with all of his virtues Max had one great fault. He could not draw close a bargain as any one; was not afraid to face an ordinary man even with two ounce gloves, but when it came to a woman, Max was nowhere; in fact, in our latest vernacular, Max was "not in it." Max, being a good orthodox Jew, shut up his shop on Saturday, some months ago, and went over to Rabbi Friedlander's synagogue in Brooklyn. The sermon was inspiring, the music was fine, but it was all thrown away on Max for in the gallery overhead he discovered a vision of beauty from Dallicia that shivered his heart all to smithereens. The sermon had been pronounced and the congregation had gone home before Max awoke from his trance, and then he realized that the lovely vision of his brief dream of joy had vanished, perhaps forever. When Max got home his mother noticed his condition, and being a woman of large and varied experience, she divined the cause and advised him to take a wife. Max was a dutiful son, but how to get a wife, that was the rub. So he went down to a Schatzen named Friedman, who was especially skilful in bringing loving souls together, for which his usual fee was fifty dollars—reasonable enough for making a man and woman happy for life. Max demurred at the charge and said he didn't want a wife very bad, but he guessed he could stand about thirty-five dollars, and he would pay fifteen on the instruction and the rest when the engagement was completed. The requirements were that she must be good-tempered, medium height, dark complexioned, black hair, pouting lips, black eyes, and at least thirty-four inches in the waistbels, and he gave Schatzen Friedman a hint that such a paragon might possibly be found at Rabbi Friedlander's synagogue in Brooklyn.

Ten days after the bargain was completed the Schatzen called on Max and informed him that he had secured an angel with all the requisite qualifications and a bag of two thousand guilders besides. No time was lost. Max encased himself in a new $7.50 suit, with a blue necktie, and yellow kids and black patent leathers with toothpick tops and crowned with a nobby brown Derby he locked just long enough for anything. Schatzen Friedman led the way to the charmer's house, who turned out to be Miss Sadie Cohen, the same lovely vision who had won his heart at Rabbi Friedlander's synagogue. Here let me draw the veil on what passed between the lovers. I've been there, and I know how it is myself. But just here je where the Schatzen comes in, or rather where he did not come in; for when Max had secured his prize he told the Shatzen to go whistle for his twenty dollars. Schatzen Friedman went to Max's house after the ceremony was over and tried to get his money, when Max, with his brothers Julius and Isaac, doubled the old man up and pitched him out into the street. Now the Schatzen sues Max in the police court for $20, and in the circuit court for $2,000, damages for his pummeling. I hope he will get it. A bargain is a bargain, and the man who would not pay $35 for such a wife as Max got is no man at all. I hope the Schatzen may win.

A prominent city paper announces the close of the outing season as "the return of the window smashers." For the average small boy, in the possession of a brick or a cobblestone, I can conceive nothing more delightfully tempting than the windows of an unprotected house. As the paper remarks, he may be a very good little boy, with marked resemblance to the illustrious father of his country, who never played hookey and was regular in his attendance at Sunday school; but a nice bit of brick and a shy at a window, who could resist it? But the return of the small boy, who may be looked on as the outlying picket of our advance guard, has a great and important significance; his shrill voice is a bugle-blast of preparation. The schools are open, slates being hunted up, dog's-eared grammars, ragged geographies and torn arithmetics are slipped in the school-bag, ready for action. The teachers are coming home from abroad, rosy with health and chuck full of knowledge. Our minister, bless him, will not be with us till Oct. 17th; he is detained at Damascus endeavoring to decipher an early Chaldean manuscript. The cobwebs are being brushed from the church doors, for which heaven be thanked. The only thought that disturbs me is that they should have ever been allowed to gather there. Remember the parable of the wise and foolish virgins.

Once more Wall street is astir, and at the gilded temple of Midas, on Broad street, the fierce low of the bulls and the thundering growl of the bears announce the opening of as terrific a battle as Wall street has known for years. As I announced in these letters weeks ago, the bears hunted their holes when the bulls got back to town. This week there has been a substantial advance all along the line; exchange is easy, money plentiful, and ere the soft September moon hath doubled its first quarter, I look for music in the air. The short crop of cereals in Europe tells of suffering to come. This portent of disaster to Europe's famished millions is a beacon of golden hope to the American farmer. We can feed our own family and spare Europe two hundred millions of breadstuffs; and, if that will not suffice, we can spare them five hundred millions of corn, or enough to tide them over the evil times. No wonder the American farmer rejoices. The hundred and ten millions of gold we send away early in the year begins to roll back to us, and before the frost has dyed the maples with crimson and gold, the bullion will be on the right side of the ledger.

Meanwhile the under-current of politics keeps us in an uncomfortable state of mind; for no man seems to know what a day may bring forth. Even prophets are scarce and entirely unreliable. Nobody seems to know anything. David B. Hill's mouth is closed as tight as that of the Sphinx, and Thomas C. Platt might as well be a mummy of the 19th dynasty for all you can get out of him. Collector Fassett is busy weeding out the wicked democrats, who gobbled all the good, fat places in the custom house under the Cleveland administration, and who have enjoyed the savor of its fleshpots down to the present hour; but the hand of Fate is on the dial of Time, and swift execution will overtake these democratic sinners, whose cozy berths will, no doubt, be supplied by good, honest republicans, who will thus illustrate the excellent working of that admirable institution, civil service reform.

The great Futurity race, on Saturday the 29th, sent 40,000 people over to Brooklyn to see twenty kings and queens of the turf do battle for the magnificent stake of $70,000. It was won by "His Highness," ridden by America's favorite jockey, Jimmy McLaughlin. It is only a year since his present owner bought him for $3,600, and his winnings this season will be over $100,000.—BROADBRIM.

A CANADIAN MURDERED.

He Was Well Known in the Vicinity of Gananoque.

William C. Macdonald, working in a camp near Jonestown, Miss., went on Aug. 12th to Lula, Ark., to draw pay, intending to start home the next day. The money was not secured at that time. A negro, it seems, knew of Macdonald's intentions, and stealing a Winchester rifle he laid in ambush and shot Macdonald, the ball entering the left breast and passing almost through him. The murderer then placed the body on the railroad track and the engine and tender passed over it, mangling it terribly; but an examination showed the bullet hole and led to the discovery of the rifle and a search for the murderer, but the villain had not been captured the second day after the murder. The searchers were in humor to string the assassin up to the nearest tree if caught. The murdered man was about fifty-two years of age.

The deceased was the eldest son of James Y. Macdonald, and was born near Mc Crones' Corners, Lansdowne. When he grew up he married Catharine Stratton, sister to Abram and Harvey Stratton, Halstead's Bay. He moved west shortly afterwards and lived in several states, finally settling in Arkansas, where his wife died last fall.

BELLEVILLE PAYS THE MONEY.

Kingston Gets the Patronage of the Camp—All Smile.

Belleville Ontario.

When a member of the Ontario staff was in Kingston, on Wednesday, he heard it rumored that the contract for supplying meat and bread for the camp at Belleville has gone to Kingston. The rumor seemed to be well authenticated yet we can hardly believe it possible that it is correct. The government induced Belleville city council to grant $400 to the camp, the defence offered being that the patronage of the camp would well compensate the city. If, however, the bill of this patronage goes to Kingston then our city has been induced to give the money on false pretenses and the people of Belleville have been robbed to that extent. Surely Mr. Corby would not allow such a trick as that to be played on the city. The government had no business asking for tenders for supplies from any other place than Belleville, in view of the fact that the city had made this grant for the sake of the patronage. The public will await with interest the confirmation or denial of this rumor.

DEATH OF A NUN.

Sister Mary Alphonsus Died at the House of Providence.

At 3:30 o'clock this morning Sister Mary Alphonsus died at the House of Providence from consumption. She had been a sister of charity for nine years and had been a faithful christian worker during that time. Two years ago she was attacked by grippe, and never fully recovered. Although gradually wasting away she was able to walk about until three days ago. Her name in the world was Miss Ryan, a daughter of highly respectable people living at Cotean St. Louis, about three miles from Montreal. On Monday a special funeral service will be held, and afterwards the body will be interred in a plot reserved for the sisters in St. Mary's cemetery.

St. John's Church Picnic.

Gananoque Journal.

The picnic in connection with St. John's church, held on the fair grounds on Wednesday, was a success, but perhaps not so great as that of last year. The day was all that could be desired and the amusements were spirited.

In the race between the trotting dog Jack and Jamieson's mare the former was an easy winner.

In the four-year-old horse race there were only two entries, A. N. Parke and Dr. Dumble, the former winning in three straight heats.

In the three-minute race there were three entries, Wm. Reid's "Tom Reid," J. McCann's "Fred," and D. J. Lloyd's "Dandy." The former took three straight firsts, the second three straight seconds, and "Dandy" was distanced.

The Jersey calf, bred by Mayor Byers, was won by Mrs. Fred Goulette.

The receipts from the Jersey calf were $296; gate money, $300, and the total receipts from all sources about $750.

In Sympathy With It.

To-day the secretary of the Macdonald national monument committee received this letter from Clanderboyne, Ireland:

Sir,—I hasten to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 10th of Aug., with reference to the proposed Canadian national monument to the late Sir John Macdonald and to say that I have great pleasure in complying with the request of the committee and allowing my name to be added to the list of those in sympathy with the movement, to which I need scarcely add, I wish every success. I have the honor to be, sir, your obedient servant, DUFFERIN and AVA.

Similar letters were also received from the Marquis of Lorne and Lord Monck.

The G.T.R. and C.P.R. freight cars arrive daily with new fall dry goods for Bowes & Bisonette.

WILL ENTER A PROTEST.

MR. ROUSSEAU NOT SATISFIED WITH THE PROGRAMME.

He Says the Suction Pipes Were Built According to the Requirement to the City's Inspector—The Final Test is the Only One That He Will Submit to.

Mr. Rousseau says the members of the water works department are making a mistake in delaying the laying of the suction pipe. He is at great expense here, and he is bound he will not be the loser. If the pipe is not satisfactory he is not to blame. He would have been responsible if a man had not been appointed by the department to superintend the construction of the pipe. In reference to the specification he had been allowed to vary, because if he had followed them closely the pipe would not have been made efficient. It is not necessary to test the pipe to a pressure of 75 lbs. to the square inch. When the pipe is laid there will not be a pressure upon it of one pound to the square inch. If there are defects in the pipe Mr. Rousseau is not responsible. He built it according to the instructions of Mr. McIntyre, acting as inspector on behalf of the city. He ordered that a certain system of riveting be carried out.

The foreman of Mr. Rousseau's works said to him: "This system of riveting recommended by Mr. McIntyre will not be good."

Mr. Rousseau replied: "It does not matter; follow the instructions of Mr. McIntyre."

Mr. Rousseau says that if Mr. McIntyre had demanded a test in his work of 75 lbs. pressure on the pipe he would have gladly acceded to his request. The expense of this would not have been great. Work in connection with the pipe that cost him $10 in Kingston would only have cost him $1 at his works. Mr. Rousseau concluded: "I am not getting justice here. The pipe was passed by an inspector representing the city. He initialed the sections and gave his certificate that they were properly made. Where my liability in the matter comes in I am at a loss to know. I will enter a protest against the demand for a test of 75 lbs. pressure. The final test according to specification is 25 lbs. to the square inch after the pipe is laid. This I will submit to."

One of the tenderers for the new suction pipe thinks that the water works department should not be as severe as they are in their dealings with Mr. Rousseau. He, undoubtedly, made a mistake of four or five thousand dollars in tendering, and the city is the gainer to that extent. He should be treated as fairly as possible under the circumstances.

MARINE INTELLIGENCE.

Paragraphs From Along the City Wharves and Elsewhere.

The str. Eliza Hall, from Toledo with rye, is expected to-day.

The str. Rideau Belle was delayed four hours yesterday on the trip by rain and fog.

The prop. Cuba lightened 8,000 bushels of corn from Chicago this morning and proceeded to Montreal. She had many passengers.

The lake is now eight inches lower than a month ago. This is the lowest point, and from the middle of September it gradually rises.

The prop. Clinton and her consorts, the barges Edgar and Grimsby, will load deals for Detroit. The wood comes from Ottawa via Rideau canal and is transhipped.

Arrivals—Prop. Cuba, Oswego, corn; tug Active and five barges, Montreal, light; prop. Rhoda Emily, Chicago, 37,000 bushels rye; prop. Hecla, Chicago, 51,000 bushels rye.

Clearances—Prop. Hecla, Charlotte, light; tug Active and six barges, Montreal, grain; str. Rosedale, Duluth, light; sloop Laura D., Cape Vincent, lumber; str. Orion, Ontonogan, N.Y., light; str. Algonquin, Chicago, light.

Several river scows are running at night without lights on side-screens, trusting to luck to make their journeys safely. The letter of the law in this connection should be enforced to prevent a repetition of the Cora Post accident with perhaps more serious consequences.

The big prop. Hecla, from Chicago with a cargo of corn, grounded on the Point Frederick shoal last night while heading for the M. T. Co's. dock. She was lightened and released after a waste of much valuable time and trouble. The frequency of this occurrence seems to call for a buoy on this shoal as a guide for steamers entering the lower end of the harbor.

A lady of St. Catharines, whose relatives reside in England, near those of Birchall, who was executed in Woodstock last fall, has received a letter stating that Mrs. Birchall, the wife of that felon, was quietly married there within six weeks after her arrival home from Canada.

Results Satisfactory.

The grand finale by the canine orchestra at the skating rink, last evening, announced the closing of the dog show for the year. The results have been most satisfactory to everyone, and exhibitors, especially, were delighted with the management, which handled the innumerable details of the exhibition with surprising smoothness.

Struck by a Train.

On Thursday R. P. Colton, of Gananoque, was struck by an engine on the Thousand Island line. By good luck the engine was stopped in time to prevent his being run over. His right foot was crushed and he was cut on the head where he had been struck by the pilot when he fell. Mr Colton, aged eighty-three years, showed wonderful nerve, and will rally from the injuries without trouble.
