NEW MUSIC!

"HOMEWARD." Song for Baritone or Contralto. Music by Oscar F. Telgmann. 50 cents. This Song has been favorably spoken of by Local Critics. We append the words:

FIRST VERSE.

The long, fierce storm has ended,
The weary day has passed,
And now beneath the fading light
We are homeward bound at last.
See, where the last glow lit west,
Off there neath the western skies,
Is home, and rest, and loved ones,
For there the harbor lies.
Oh, list to the music stealing
The darkling waters o'er,
'Tis the welcome home they're singing
As they wait upon the shore.
Come home come home, beside the sea,
We wait, we wait to welcome thee
To home and rest beside the sea,
We wait to welcome thee.
Yo-ho, yo-ho, then row boys, row,
See how we skim the waters free;
We soon shall cross the harbor bar
And rest beside the sea.

SECOND VERSE.

To many a home-bound mariner,
Life's weary storm is o'er.
He hears the water breaking
Upon the heavenly shore.
He sees the radiant harbor
Beneath the setting sun
Where he shall drop the anchor,
All the weary voyage done.
There' friends, and rest and loved ones,
Who've only gone before,
And a welcome home they're singing
As they wait upon the shore.
Come home, come home, beside the sea,
We wait, we wait to welcome thee
To home and rest beside the sea
We wait to welcome thee.
We come, we come to "home, sweet home,"
We stretch our eager hands before,
No more to fear the billows roll
But rest upon the shore.

The programme of the tea-meeting and concert, to be held in the City Hall on Feb. 26th, will be found in another column. Every one interested in young men should try and make this the event of the season. Cake, etc., may be sent to the City Hall any time on Thursday next.

Police News—Monday.

Many Frazer, charged with larceny, was remanded until to-morrow; and Cavan O'Toole, who was supposed to be a pal of Frazer's, was also arraigned on a similar charge. In consequence of insufficient evidence he was dismissed. The charges in three snow cases were withdrawn, the parties interested having complied with the snow by-law.

Debating College Students.

The students of the Dominion Business College on Saturday evening discussed the question, "Would it be advisable to send a Canadian contingent to the Soudan?" It was decided in the affirmative. The speakers were: For the affirmative—Messrs. Wilmot, Conley, Watts, and S. Chown; for the negative—Messrs. Macdonnell, Duff, Ovens, Lyons and McMillan.

An Election of Officers.

At the annual meeting of the Baptist Church recently, Messrs. W. Strange and G. H. Meadows were elected deacons. One replaced the late Mr. D. D. Calvin; for the second there was no special object. "But," the pastor says, "under the providence of God, and in view of Mr. White's death, the arrangement was a wise and suitable one." Financially and spiritually the church is progressing.

A Line of Boats Suggested.

There is much rivalry between the two great steamboat companies which navigate the St. Lawrence for the supremacy and monopoly of the traffic during the coming season. Senecal says the Thousand Island line is a thing of the past. F. E. Gilman denies the statement and has left for New York to complete arrangements for the season. A line from Kingston to Montreal is proposed, in connection with the Canadian Pacific, Michigan Central, Utica & Black River and New York Central railways.

Wounded Honour Satisfied.

"Wounded honour" is satisfied. The Fort Hill having carried Britain's flag and frowning fortress for forty years with pride, witnessed last week, with no ordinary feeling, the ignominious burying of a detachment of Her Majesty's forces in the snow by an independent filibustering party of but half the number. And the noble old hill waited calmly for revenge, and—got it. On Saturday it placed the assailant of traditional British valour and pluck hors du combat, and the army is once more amply revenged and may emerge from hospital with safety.

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

SERMONS REFERRING TO THE LATE MESSRS. CARNOVSKY AND WHITE.

Two Very Useful Citizens Remembered, and Touching Allusions Made to their Virtues and Their Worth—The Good They Did Worthy of Imitation—Burdens Left Upon Others.

Yesterday morning the service memorial of the late S. P. White occurred in the Baptist Church, and it was largely attended by the friends of the deceased and by members of the congregation. Preceding the sermon Rev. Mr. Hooper read a short sketch of Mr. White's career. He said that at the prayer meeting on the 24th July, 1850, Mr. White was received by letter from the Quebec church, and ever after he was an active and leading member of the church. His home was ever at the disposal of those brethren who, in denominational work, were in the city. In filling the offices of deacon, treasurer and church clerk a great deal of the work of the church fell on him, and these offices he willingly supplied. He found his greatest pleasure in trying to further the cause of Christ. His was another example of the influence of a godly mother. Though bereft of her loving sympathy at the early age of 12 he seems to have had a strong yearning for those blessings he knew were hers. "Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God," was the feeling expressed concerning her. After speaking of the religious experiences of Mr. White when a young man in the army, of his experiences in England and Canada, the speaker continued: "We are not here to sound his praises. A sinner saved by grace would dislike that such should be done. To tell of what God had done for him, and through him for others, is the object he would have us keep in view. A kind and prayerful father will be missed. Those for whom he prayed, and for whose salvation he longed, will have no surprise in hearing that his salvation was his greatest wish and most coveted desire. If I could see this brought about, he said, I would care for little besides. Knowing well that the years of his pilgrimage were fast passing away he would frequently speak of the stone of help that he would erect again and again to the praise of God. The end was not unexpected by him. A verse given in a recent sermon he often repeated during the last four weeks. "Like crowded forest trees we stand, etc." The woodman did not tarry long and now we mourn our loss and rejoice in the assurance of his being at home with the Lord, which is better. It is hard to realize that he who was a worshipper here at both services two weeks ago is now no more. Let us thank God for the service he rendered during his course here for so many years. Let us, remembering the loss of our near and dear, thank God that the life of that father spared so long. Let us remember, that now a workman and burden-bearer is gone, there is the more for us to do and the heavier the burden for us to assume. And thus the wise shall not suffer. The religion of Jesus Christ is not a hard thing to live with but a hard thing to get when refused so often. Few indeed become Christians in their last moments, and God's word tells us that there is no gospel for those who die without Christ."

GIST OF THE SERMON.

The sermon which followed was of a purely gospel character, and was founded upon Psalm xxxviii.-11.: "Shall thy loving kindness be declared in the grave?" He urged the people to have the loving kindness of God declared during life, because there was very little hope of being able to get it in dying and certainly none in the grave. The hymns and musical service generally were of an appropriate character.

Carnovsky Memorial Service.

In the Fourth Methodist Church, to the memory of the late Robert Carnovsky, a service occurred last evening. The church was suitably draped by affectionate friends and the seating capacity of the building was overflowed by those who came to pay respect to the departed and sympathy to the bereaved family. It was believed that many of the congregation came for the express purpose of receiving spiritual profit while the word of God was being delivered and while an affectionate reference was made to their departed friend and brother. Rev. R. Stillwell, the pastor, discoursed on the words, "It doth not yet appear what we shall be," making special reference to the inexpressible delight which glorified saints will realize when they receive what we may call their new, heavenly, refined, intensified, sight, hearing, speech, feelings, &c. He spoke of the unbounded pleasure which the acoustic wonders of heaven may produce. A sincere and respectful reference was made to our departed friend and brother, who was not only a member but a most attentive official of the church. His experience of divine love and mercy and saving power became much clearer and deeper during the months of his prolonged illness. The preacher said, 'We have, no doubt, but that at last he was more than conqueror.'"

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Opposed to Sensationalism and Superficial Conversions—Untutored Teachers.

Anniversary sermons were preached in the Third Methodist Church, corner Montreal and Brock streets, yesterday. The audiences were large. The church is very comfortable. It was built six years ago and now possesses a considerable membership. The congregation, however, and conference are embarrassed by a considerable debt. Within a month revivalistic services have been held in the church and great religious fervor awakened. The sermons yesterday were, in view of the fact, particularly appropriate. Principal Grant occupied the pulpit in the morning. He spoke from Hebrews xi, 39. The audience greatly appreciated the effort. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock Rev. LeRoy Hooker very effectively spoke from the words "Ye shall receive the Holy Ghost not many days hence."

SERMON BY THE PRESIDENT.

In the evening Rev. W. Galbraith, LL.B., Montreal, president of the Conference, spoke from Colossians i, 28. He had selected a more fitting sermon for an anniversary occasion, but finding the circumstances favorable to a purely evangelistic topic had chosen the text. He spoke of the saving of souls as the greatest work given to men to do. God had employed man as his agent to carry forward the glorious enterprize. No honor was greater than that of being a co-worker with Him in saving men from sin and vice. It was a higher commission than that given to the angels. The reverend gentleman discussed the truly gospel subject under three heads. He pointed out (1) the sum and substance of apostolic preaching "Whom we preach"; (2) the manner of the preaching "Warning every man, and teaching every man in all wisdom"; and (3) the grand and ultimate design of their ministrations "That we may present every man perfect in Christ Jesus. The discourse of an hour's duration was eloquent and logical.

TRUE OBJECT OF PREACHING.

The speaker protested against philosophical sermons, sermonettes or essays on popular subjects and sermons calculated to gain popularity. In these days there was a strong temptation to be sensational, to win people's plaudits. To do such was a sin against God and against the immortal souls around. The great aim of all preaching should be to lead souls to Christ. He did not object to making other things subservient to such an end, but preachers should not preach to be approved of by man but to be approved of by God. The man who got through his sermon without once using Christ's name was not doing right. George III properly said that "No sermon is good without Christ's name in it." A Christless sermon was like a building built upon a sand foundation or a man without life. The true apostolic way of preaching was fitly described. The speaker afterwards remarked that he had much apprehension regarding the religious methods of the present day. Conversions were largely due to excitement and emotion, and the rippling feeling on the surface was taken for the converting power of the Holy Ghost. He was not in sympathy either with the unprepared way in which teachers went out to preach religion. Many were like the man with a patent remedy who prescribed it for every conceivable complaint. "Come! come!" was the advice to sinners, without pointing out the cause requiring a change or the mode of securing it. Before there was true conversion there was necessity for deep penitence, for conviction and apprehension of sin, and finding no other way of escape they looked to Christ for salvation and peace. It was an awful thing to be self-deceived.

AN EFFECTIVE MUSICAL SERVICE.

The choir sang effectively at all the services. Miss Caldwell sang a solo in the evening, "Nearer my God to Thee." This was accepted in lieu of a hymn and the service concluded with the benediction.

A STUDENTS' SERVICE.

The Medicos in the Baptist Church—Some Very Fine Singing.

Last week the Rev. Mr. Hooper, a final year student in medicine himself, invited the medicos to attend service in his church, the Baptist, on Sunday evening. About one hundred of them accepted the invitation, and they filled a good many seats in the handsome little edifice. Mr. Hooper gave an appropriate discourse, founded upon Philippians iii. 8: "I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus by Lord." He pointed out that although a great many might become disgusted with religion, with true christianity they could never become dissatisfied, because it contained that which was essential to their well-being. He pointed out, too, that true happiness here and hereafter depended on acquaintance and oneness with Christ. In conclusion he referred to the rapidity with which one's course on earth was run, and said that the greatest satire on life was life itself without hope of the future. "If," said he, "it should not be ours to keep communication when we separate here, I hope that when absent from the body we shall meet together forever at home with the Lord." The singing was especially hearty, the students joining in it and filling the church with their melody. The service altogether was unique, and such as must be long and pleasingly remembered.

A TOBOGGAN ACCIDENT.

A Young Lady and Gentlemen Hurt Signally is Necessary.

Saturday was a gala day upon the fort hill. The slope was in the afternoon black with tobogganers. The slide is narrow this year, and being crowded the danger of accident was increased. The fun was very much enjoyed until about 5 o'clock when an accident happened. Cadet Cayley it seems essayed to steer a toboggan on the bow of which sat Miss Helen Yates. Half way down the slide Cayley lost his seat, and the toboggan shot ahead at a terrific rate. Without guidance it swung from side to side, then whirled around and around until at the bottom it capsized. Mr. Henry Gildersleeve apprehended her danger and rushed to her assistance. He had assisted her to her feet, but the pair had not time to clear the way of another toboggan under the management of Capt. Skinner. The young officer says his toboggan had attained a velocity of sixty miles an hour. When he caught a glimpse of Miss Yates' blue dress he was but a few feet away, and having a lady in charge could not risk a jump over the side of the slide. He had to go ahead, and struck both Mr. Gildersleeve and Miss Yates. Harry was caught in the legs and tossed up several feet in the air. In the descent he was severely cut in the head, was stunned for a few minutes and bled profusely. Miss Yates escaped with a sprained wrist. The force of the collision must have been great when three planks of the toboggan were broken. The accident points to the necessity of a signalling system by the use of which collisions and mishaps like that of Saturday might be avoided.

MEETING OF THE POLLYWOGS.

They Talk of Taking Part in the Merchants' Drive—An Adjournment.

A special meeting of the Pollywog Club, called by order of the President, was held to-day. The President said the club had received a special invitation (scented paper) to take part in the merchants' drive. It was agreed that the programme being satisfactory, the club should turn out 100 strong. They will have a special van, drawn by two teams of mules. The uniform will be very elaborate—Cocked hats with white plumes, cut-away velvet coats, knee breecher of diagonal cloth with a gold stripe, scarlet stockings and patent leather pumps.

Walk-around Gilmore was nominated to handle the ribbons. The club then adjourned until Thursday, when final action will be taken.

THROUGH THE VALLEY.

THE TRIP MADE BY KINGSTONIANS WITH THE REV. MR. WELLS.

Through the Yellowstone—The Spot Where Freshmen Were Murdered Every Morning—The Curiosities of the Place—A Lake with a Cool Margin, but a Boiling Centre—A Lake of Great Beauty.

A large audience greeted the appearance of the Rev. Mr. Wells in Convocation Hall last Saturday evening when he delivered his well known lecture on the Yellowstone. Principal Grant, in introducing the lecturer, referred to those who had aided in the improvement of the College Campus, amongst whom Mr. Wells was not the least. The lecturer congratulated the footballers upon the trophy he saw before him, (the championship cup was standing on the table) and hoped that they would win many others to encircle it. He then took his audience with him to the National Park, the Yellowstone.

"This park, which is nature's museum," Mr. Wells began, "is 1,100 miles west of St. Paul and Minneapolis, and is reached by the Northern Pacific RR. When the road was being built I reached the supply station Forsyth, where, it was said, a fresh man was murdered every morning for breakfast." There the lecturer was informed that he would require to take precautions against being 'rolled.' 'Rolling' was practiced on the 'tender-feet,' as the new-comers were called. The new-comers were drugged, stripped, robbed and then either rolled out of the front door of the hotel into the street or out of the back door into the Yellowstone. Few were ever taken from the river alive, and, when the body was found, an intelligent jury would

ALWAYS RETURN THE VERDICT

"Death by mysterious providence and visitation of God." On the morning after reaching Forsyth a friend of Mr. Wells' who had intended to visit the Yellowstone resolved to return. The lecturer pushed on. He travelled some distance by stage, then, buying an Indian pony, spurs, saddle, blanket, rope and sombrero, and dropping his little ministerial dignity, he rode away alone. The path often crossed the river. At every crossing there was a ranch. The ranchmen, like the Patriarchs of old, counted their wealth by the number of cattle and horses they owned. Unlike the days of the Patriarchs there were but few Sarahs to stand at the door and listen to the conversation. He had been warned that horses in that region sometimes 'bucked,' that a man had his leg broken because his horse 'bucked,' and that if his pony was of that character he was told not to stick to it, but to look for a soft spot and drop on to it as quickly as he could. The lecturer was glad to say his horse did not 'buck.' After travelling 500 miles in this way he reached the park. The lecturer here described various objects of curiosity. He pictured the Mammoth Hot Springs, which had made deposits sometimes 200 feet in thickness. The springs flowed into the Gardiner river, in which latter were numerous trout. You could catch a fish in the Gardiner, drop it in the hot water from the springs and cook it without moving from the spot. The springs broke out in different places and so formed terraces. The deposits were all the colors of the rainbow. The waters were green and blue, and baths could be had of every temperature. After mentioning that he had seen the lecturer described the geysers, of which there were three basins, the Norris geyser, the Lower geyser basin and the Upper geyser basin. The basin had been originally a lake. Mineral deposits had formed upon its surface and had become hard. Through cracks in this crust burst steam and geysers that made the spot seem alive. In the Lower geyser basin there was a mass of seething waters called Hell's Half-Acre, and a lake whose waters were cool at the margin and boiling in the centre. In the Upper geyser basin were to be found Old Faithful, the Beehive, the Grand and many others. Old Faithful went up in great spurts, rising and falling, and was so called because it played exactly every sixty-three minutes. The Beehive played in one steady column. The Grand went up in a mighty spurt, then down like a stone, then up again, and afterwards sucked up the water with noise like a whirlpool. Clothes might be washed in the geysers; but the lecturer had been unfortunate, for on one occasion, owing to the nature of the mineral of the geyser, his clothes were not washed but starched.

A VERITABLE HILL OF GLASS

The lecturer travelled next to Yellowstone Lake. On his way thither he was struck with the variety of insect life. There was the jovial insect the mosquito, and gnats would gather upon the horses in bunches. When the Yellowstone Lake burst upon his gaze, he was reminded of Scott's description of Loch Katrine:

"One burnish'd sheet of living gold,
Loch Katrine lay beneath him roll'd."

Swans, pellicans, herons and gulls floated upon its surface, and its waters abounded in magnificent trout. The

NEXT SPOT OF INTEREST

was the grand canon (canyon) of the Yellowstone River. It was, from the top of the bank to the water's edge, an almost perpendicular descent of 1,500 feet. No single man had ever attempted to reach the river. The lecturer determined to try, so one morning, after bidding his companion an affectionate farewell, he set out. At one time he was baffled by a precipice; at another he was stepping on a swiftly moving river of rock and sand. After tremendous exertion he reached the bottom. From the skeleton of an elk he took a rib (he had been told by his friends that he needed a rib, for the lecturer is a bachelor) as a memento of his descent. He started to reach the summit once more and got up at last perfectly exhausted. He showed a friend the trophy he had secured. This friend informed him that it was not a rib, but a jaw. He still thought it was a rib, but consoled himself with the reflection that if it were a jaw there were others who had made a similar mistake. The lecturer concluded by stating that the country east of the Yellowstone was still to be explored.

INCIDENTS OF THE DAY.

Little Things that Engage the People's Attention—Notes by Our Local Corps.

The main line of the R. W. & O. RR. is now clear of snow.

R. J. Eilbeck shipped over the K. & P. RR. to Folger station to-day 2,000 bushels of oats.

Joseph Murphy is the only comedian who has made money this year. He has banked $17,000.

The preparation of the track on the ice will be begun to-morrow. The track will be in front of the City Hall.

The opposition in the Mock Parliament are requested to meet at Polson's drug store at 7:30 o'clock this evening.

John Quelch and Mr. Scott, of Odessa, were cutting wood last week. Scott's axe caught Mr. Quelch on the arm and broke it.

Next Sunday being the first Sunday of the month, the men's branch of the Confraternity of the Holy Family will meet.

Remember the meeting of merchants, tradesmen and citizens to-morrow evening at the City Hotel, at 8 o'clock. See notice in another column.

In St. Mary's Cathedral yesterday the Rev. Father Twomey preached at high mass on the tempting of our Lord in the wilderness.

The quarry at the penitentiary has given out, and some time will be required before another quarry on the farm can be opened.

The students' meeting last evening was well attended. The speakers were Messrs. Gandier and Smith, and they dealt with prohibition.

This evening the members of L.O.L. No. 291, are to have a sort of jubilee over the prompt restoration to membership of one of its brethren.

The fashionable waltzes now taught are "The Boston Slouch," "The New York Pump-handle," "The Kensington Crawl," and "The English Straight."

The choir of St. Mary's Cathedral will entertain the inmates of the asylum this evening. A good programme has been prepared and a good time may be expected.

Amos S. Chamberlin, of New York, one of the most prominent horsemen of that city, died on Thursday of heart disease. Mr. Chamberlin was well known in Kingston.

Mrs. H. Cooper, of the Allen settlement, rear of Belleville, suffering from a cancer in the breast, came to Kingston. An operation was performed, but the patient was too weak to survive it. She died on Saturday.

See Prof. Hotchkin's springless truss and supporter, advertised in another column. Go and see him at the Royal Hotel, Feb. 27th, 28th, and March 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th.

A broken switch derailed a train on the Bay of Quinte RR. on Saturday morning. No one hurt. The tender was damaged, and the driving bar of the locomotive broken.

The Grand Orange Lodge of Eastern Ontario meets here tomorrow. The officers and delegates will arrive to-night. The meeting will be held in the lecture room of Cooke's Church.

S. J. Kilpatrick has sufficient stone in the quarries in and about Kingston to supply the wants of the country for many years. He owns four acres of fine stone on Wolfe Island.

Some weeks ago a lad named Robert Bulloch, Gananoque, mysteriously disappeared. No trace has been secured of him. His father offers a reward of $200 for the recovery of the boy, living or dead.

The meetings of the Saved Army yesterday were very successful. Happy Charlie, of Cobourg, was present in the evening and played four solos on the concertina. He also sang several hymns.

A small supply of Ross' Depilatory for removing superfluous hairs from the face, neck or arms, just received at Wilson's Pharmacy. As this article is often required the attention of those needing it is directed to this new Toilet Requisite.

Messrs. M. J. Joyce and J. Murphy have jointly offered a free site and $150 bonus towards the erection of a town hall, if built in Joyceville during 1885. This offer is a very generous one for two young men to make, and the Pittsburg Council will, we are sure, so consider it.

Revival services will be held in Sydenham street church this week. Last night a union prayer and fellowship service was held in the church, and the congregations of the Third and Fourth Methodist churches were represented at it. A highly interesting service was held.

An injustice was done a citizen by publishing that he gave a boy 15c. for finding $30. The citizen was not the owner of the money, but gave all the change he had in his pocket to the lad, because it belonged to a friend, who augmented the amount by a liberal donation.

DR. DAKIN, of Pugwash, N.S., says:

Puttner Emulsion Co., Halifax,

GENTLEMEN,—I have used PUTTNER'S EMULSION OF COD-LIVER OIL, &c., for a number of years, and have found it a remedy of great use in many forms of disease, especially in Pulmonary Complaints, Scrofula, Anæmia, and in fact in any state of the system showing a DEPRAVED CONDITION OF THE BLOOD, with LACK OF TONE and deterioration of vital forces. I have also used it, with very much satisfaction, in Wasting Diseases of Children, and some other complaints incidental to childhood. R. A. DAKIN.
