Daily British Whig.

Two suicides have occurred in this city within a month, and the wounds in both these cases were inflicted by razors. Wingfield, who cut his throat this morning, was unfortunately insane, and so also was the woman who ended her life similarly some weeks ago. The worry was kept to themselves, they let the matter fret and preying on their minds, and at the moment the act was done they were not responsible for their actions. It is remarkable that in both occasions the act was repented of as soon as it was committed, that the feeling that suggested death was replaced by one that repelled the idea with great fear and trembling. Here is an evidence that the rash act is not longer if at all premeditated. No one but a lunatic would, under sudden impulse, hurriedly hasten himself and suffer the agony that must follow. The choice of death is very repulsive, and yet it is not so long ago that a chemist who ought to have known the properties of every drug in his store, secreted that which proved the greatest suffering. Think of it!

A Supreme Court of Canada will be in Kingston early in the Dominion Law will be tested. Referees, petitions and counsels of the law expect the decision to be in their favor, and the issue in an event will make an appeal to the Privy Council. The friends of the Premier have most confidence in the Privy Council, and if defeated at Ottawa the Dominion Government will be forced to a vigorous policy of Whig support to the difficulty. We may again the result of very deliberate action. The Supreme Court and Privy Council, who are the judges of Dominion Government to secure the business and another Government to lose the revenue and regulate the trade.

The following are the questions to be referred by the Government General in council to the Supreme Court in pursuance of the provisions of the 37th section of 47th Victoria, chapter 32, entitled "An Act to amend the Liquor License Act, 1883."

1. Are the following Acts in whole or in part, within the legislative authority of the parliament of Canada, namely, The Liquor License Act, 1883, and an Act to amend the Liquor License Act of 1883?

2. If the court is of the opinion that a part or parts only of the said Acts are within the legislative authority of the parliament of Canada, what part or parts of the said Acts are so within such legislative authority?

The Globe, Hon. G. suggests, as a cure for the present hard times, a readjustment of the tariff, an increase of taxation. It goes on to say: "A policy twenty, twenty-five or thirty per cent. is not enough. The Americans have a general tariff twice as high, and we can make ours retaliatory. It would hurt Canada less to pay more for what it buys than to have its manufacturers and its farmers ruined." Hon. Mr. Cartwright proved to a great many of the affected classes. They must submit to the good of the manufacturers and the country. Besides it will raise a surplus, and then the Government will be able to pay its debts. The American seller will be glad to pay in. Pile up the taxation on everything imported, and slowly people will find that hard times may be cured by a good policy, a great Government and a great country. Remarkable things happen before. The wise policy of raising the taxes to make everybody rich is a policy for Canada. It is the Grand Trunk policy. It saved the Grand Trunk. It will save Canada. Let the Globe, Mail, Leader, Telegram and Mail continue with every thing against the country. That act is needed. Let good fellows by the fact that the Globe, Mail, Leader, Telegram and Mail, which employed 200 hands, are now idle, and that the car works, which had a staff of 400 men, is now running only one-fifth of the time. The pauper cotton factories in Kingston used to be Mr. Cartwright's editorials, but it is quite evident that the man across the way no longer, if he sees the magical spell.

JAS. WINGFIELD'S SUICIDE.

He Cuts His Throat with a Razor—A Horrid Sight—Dying at the General Hospital.

Some time ago an ex-Royal artillerist named James Wingfield came to the city from Watertown. He acted as a hotel porter, and in other capacities then opened up a registry and general insurance agency office on Montreal Street. He was a quiet man and respected by many strangers. A couple of months ago he became despondent, evidently he was brooding over some grief. People remarked his dejection. He removed his office from Montreal Street to King Street, over the Express office, and took a room in Mississippi Row. He boarded in a house in Wellington Street and took his meals in the top flat in the rear portion of the building. Yesterday after breakfast the landlady asked him when he was going to pay his board bill, being in her debt to the amount of $40. He assured her that he was going to some an obstacle place to lay, and that he would pay her the money he owed her immediately afterwards.

HE CUT HIS THROAT.

He lay passive awhile and Wingfield seemed to be in no glowing than usual. The boarders noticed that he was not acting altogether right, and some of them remarked. That man may be something rash of to is that watched. Night came and the boarders went out and returned. Wingfield did not look any brighter. He may go to rest for the night. At 1 o'clock this morning a noise was heard in Wingfield's room, and suddenly to suspected at the first of about the house. Groans were heard. The people in the house hurried down, but going down stairs to awaken one of the girls and told her there was something the matter with Wingfield. Perhaps he wanted a doctor. By this time every person in the house was awakened. Wingfield's room was visited and oh! what a sight met the gaze of the servant. Wingfield lay on his back and from a gash in his throat issuing from near to rear.

HAD A SHOCKING WOUND

which saturated his own clothing and that upon the bed. By to-day lay a stream dripping with blood. A doctor was summoned and the police telephone office. Dr. Oliver arrived but could do nothing than bandage the wound up.

This morning a reporter visited the wounded man. He still lay on his back, a gurgling sound issuing from his throat. At his bedside was a basin almost full of blood. Here was a terrible sight. Wingfield is about 60 years of age. It is said that he has had considerable trouble and that his family have disowned him. They wished him to live apart from them as he had a sufficient pension ($8 weekly to keep him. His wife is at Watertown. She was telegraphed for this morning.

HOW AT THE HOSPITAL.

Wingfield between 9 and 10 o'clock was removed from his boarding house. He was sinking and death was evident not far off. It occurred sooner than expected, or just as the wounded man had reached the general hospital. The deceased was a quiet and inoffensive man and somewhat sensitive. When the Salvation Army attacked the city he was one of its first adherents and attended the meetings night after night. With Capt. Abbie's addresses he was particularly pleased, and often wrote notices of the meetings for papers at a distance. To his financial embarrassment may be attributed the death of the man under such peculiarly sad circumstances.

CANNOT SAVE MY LIFE.

Dr. Oliver, who was the first physician summoned, says that it was impossible to save the life of Wingfield as he cut his throat directly above the larynx. The doctor says that shortly after he arrived Wingfield remarked: "Doctor, can you save my life?" The doctor said he hoped so. "Do better than ask God." "Do you believe in God?" and he replied: "I don't know." This morning he was asked if he would like to see his wife, and he faintly murmured: "Yes."

THE DOCTORS AREAD.

Shortly after Dr. Oliver's arrival this morning, Drs. Phelan and Garrett entered the house and watched the case for a short time.

Wingfield is an old soldier, an ex-member of the 71st Fraser Highlanders, and at the expiration of his term was a sergeant.

CORONER IRWIN'S INQUIRY.

This afternoon Coroner Irwin said he had made an exhaustive enquiry into the circumstances attending the death of Wingfield, and he had decided that there was no reason to hold an inquest. One Moncrieff roomed with Wingfield, and knew him to be unwell and financially embarrassed for three months. He was hard up, but respectable, and very sensitive. Frequently Moncrieff lent him money. He says that when Wingfield asked for the match he got up, looked for it, but being unsuccessful in his search lay down again. In a moment he heard a choking noise, and suspecting that Wingfield had done himself violence ran out of the room and alarmed the other occupants of the house. Coroner Irwin, considering all the circumstances, declined to incur useless expense to the city and the government.

BRETHREN, FAREWELL!

Rev. J. P. Wilson's Closing Sermons Yesterday—Last Eloquent Words to His People.

Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., who has been pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church for the past two years, preached his farewell sermons yesterday to large audiences. Mr. Wilson is a man of marked modesty, as well as culture, and made a great many friends in the city, and his absence will be greatly missed, at least for some time.

In the morning his sermon was on the text:

"Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you."—2 Corinthians xiii. 11.

"The sermon was an interesting and entertaining one, and was very attentively listened to.

CLOSE OF THE PASTORATE.

The evening sermon was based upon these words:

"At evening time it shall be light."—Zechariah xiv. 7.

Having referred to the phenomena and to the circumstances under which the words of the text were used, the speaker observed that it is natural for men to expect night in all instances. It has been said, "When things are at the worst they mend." This is not the text in another form. The Christian believes that God will bring light out of darkness. He believes in the prophecies. How and when will they be fulfilled. When Pagdanism and Mahomedanism and other isms will be overturned, when error will be dethroned, when the pure faith will cover the world, and when Jesus will come and receive the kingdoms of it. The providences of God are sometimes dark, "they are neither day nor night." But the Christian believes that He will bring the light out of gloom. Terrible calamities come, the children suffer, good and useful people are taken, and the worthless are left. So many things in God's administration seem to be clouded, but the Christian remembers the words: "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." The cloudy day will cull. The preacher referred the fact that in the world's history this was such. It was a dark day when the northern tribes swept down on Roman civilization and threatened to swallow it up, but the danger was Europe's greatest blessing. The time of the reformation was dark, but the light from Luther's orb swept like a great wave over Europe. The cloud of intemperance is dark to-day, but the Young Men's Christian Associations, Kingston should have one, the Good Templars, Lodges, the Women's Societies, the church and the clergy, Protestant and Catholic, are helping along the great and the light will come. To-day there are sectarian differences, but the dark sky is being streaked with light. The evangelical churches are coming closer together. The union of the Presbyterian Churches, and the union of four Methodist Churches, indicates the tendency of the times. "There shall be but one fold and one shepherd." Again in the individual Christian experience it is as true as it is comforting that light follows the darkness. The sinner's darkest hour is when he cries in agony of soul "What must I do to be saved?" and "Save, Lord or I perish." And then this blessed Christ comes and sheds the glorious light in his soul. Again when the Christian is despondent, when the prayers for years have not been answered seemingly, when the promises apparently are of no avail, he hears the sweet refrain, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." Afflictions come and the Christian wonders why they are imposed. Light will come and he should try and see the purpose of it. Light will be seen in the dark day of sanctified afflictions. Jesus was made perfect through suffering. "You," said the preacher, "are walking the road your Master walked; you are thus partakers of His sufferings. Heaven is being prepared for you and you for heaven.

A FEW REMARKS MORE.

At the end of the sermon Rev. Mr. Wilson took his farewell in these words:

My last sermon being delivered our relationship as pastor and people just cease. We have spent two years together and they have been very happy and without trouble. There is, however, something painfully sad in the separation of a pastor from his flock, especially a separation from those who have been led to Christ during his ministry, and I fancy short pastorages are better than than the long ones. These two years have been quite successful. The divine blessing has rested upon our labours, and there have been numerous conversions in the ordinary means of grace. Some fifty souls have been added to our roll of membership. These I trust will be eternally saved. Many non-communicants have also joined our congregation. We have lost quite few by removals from the city, but death has made no removals among us. We are truly thankful to our Heavenly Father that our lives have been precious in His sight. In addition to my work as pastor I have collected and put out over $3,000 on church account. This has prevented me in some cases from performing my pastoral duties as fully as I might otherwise have done. I thank you to night for all your kindness to me during my sojourn among you. Your sympathies and love have been evinced in many ways. I have enjoyed my stay in Kingston. It is a beautiful city to live in. I have been charmed with the Christian kindly bearing of the members of the sister churches. The pastors have been very kind. A more genial, social, godly class of ministers I have never met. I came among them a stranger and found them as my predecessor, Mr. Young, told me I would find them, ready to help and encourage. The newspapers have been kind and courteous. Kingston has every reason to be proud of its press. In every instance they give prominence to whatever is for the good of the people religious and moral. And now to night I feel that in leaving Kingston I am leaving friends, and I can look back to the time of my sojourn here with pleasure and gratitude. Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of good mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you. Regarding my successor I need say little because you know him. You knew him before you were acquainted with myself. You have listened to his admirable sermons for two years as presiding elder. He has filled many important offices in the church, and has always been active and laborious in the service of his Master. May God bless him and you during the years to come.

MR. MAVETY'S NEXT SUNDAY.

Mr. Wilson attends church meetings in Napanee this week. On Sunday he preaches his first sermons there, and Rev. Mr. Mavety sits upon his pastorate here. Mr. Wilson's family will not remove to Napanee for a couple of weeks.

YESTERDAY'S FETE DIEU.

Its Celebration in St. Mary's Cathedral—Children's First Communion.

The Fete Dieu was celebrated in St. Mary's Cathedral yesterday with all its solemn and splendour laid down in the Roman Catholic ritual. The members of the congregation looked forward to the ceremonies with pleasure, as many of their children were on this fete day to partake of their first communion. At the solemn mass about 200 children, male and female, assembled. The boys were dressed in black with white badges pinned upon their breasts. The girls were attired in pure white and veiled. Solemn high mass was celebrated at 10 o'clock. The young people were again prompt and took a prominent part in the proceedings. Even was the usual procession of the Host through the sanctuary boys, priests, acolytes, thurifers and officiating priest, the latter bearing the Host under a canopy borne by six members of the congregation.

In the afternoon vespers were celebrated. At the close of the service the Rev. Father Twohey addressed the young people. He congratulated them on their good fortune in being able to receive their first communion, and exhorted them to keep God's law, live pure lives, and be worthy of their parents, and to be attentive to the Rosaries, Litanies, etc. He then spoke of the Holy Sacrament, was then imparted. One of the boys read an address on behalf of himself and his companions. The service was concluded by the young communicants enrolling themselves in the order of the Scapular. The young ladies, dressed in white, looked very beautiful in the extreme, and the young men looked very well. The children were accompanied to the cathedral by their parents, who, after the service, departed for their homes. The children departed the retreat and prepared the children for the event. After the service in the church in the afternoon the young people went to the Hotel Dieu, where refreshments were made and wine cake was presented with a silver plate, given to the sick persons.

The Hotel Dieu Makes Explanations.

Sir,—In your issue of the 13th inst. I noticed a communication under the signature "H. E. Blanf," in which the writer refers to the late Corporal Beseley having been buried according to the Catholic ritual. Your correspondent takes occasion from this fact to ask the question, "Does the Hotel Dieu, supported by public funds, use its influence to make Protestants into Roman Catholics?"

As chaplain of the Hotel Dieu I deem it my duty to inform Mr. Blanf that Corporal Beseley died happily in the communion of the Catholic Church, having renounced Protestantism and professed the Catholic faith on the 29th ult., thereby becoming entitled to receive Catholic burial. It is therefore quite possible that he declared himself a Protestant on the 27th as your correspondent states.

Mr. Blanf was wrong in suspecting that Corporal Beseley's religious belief was ever tampered with by any one in the Hotel Dieu. During the six months that I have been chaplain to the hospital, it has been my custom to speak a kind word almost daily to every patient in the institution without discrimination of creed. In my intercourse, however, with non-Catholic patients I have always carefully avoided any reference to religious topics, except when entreated expressly by the patients themselves to speak on such matters. It was only at Corporal Beseley's second or third request of his desire to become a Catholic that I consented to give him any religious instruction. This he received most cheerfully.

The Protestants now in the hospital, as well as those who have been cured during my chaplaincy, can surely say whether the Hotel Dieu uses its influence "to make Protestants into Roman Catholics." To them I refer your correspondent for an answer to his question.

Rev. Mr. Blanf's letter seems to convey the insinuation that a system of underhand proselytism is carried on in the Hotel Dieu. The public at large have had ample opportunities of knowing if this be the case. The Christian spirit of those in charge of the institution will, I unhesitatingly appeal to every one far removed from the narrow mindedness of which Mr. Blanf seems to accuse them. If I mistake not the principles upon which the hospital is conducted have up to the present met with the uniform approval of all classes of the community. The charge implied in Mr. Blanf's letter seems to me rather unjust. It is wrong to speak ill of a man behind his back, even by insinuation.—Yours truly,

J. FLEMING, Priest.

SPANISH SOCIALISTS

Hanging of Nihilists for Black Hand Outrages—Anticipating an Attack.

Madrid, June 14.—One of the most thrilling scenes that has occured in Spain for some time took place this morning at Xeres, where seven Socialists were to be executed for participation in the Black Hand outrages. All during last night small bands of Socialists and members of the Black Hand society kept arriving in the town, and at an early hour this morning when their numbers had increased to several hundreds they proceeded toward the prison, wherein were confined their brother Socialists, determined upon their rescue. The Government having learned that an attempt would be made to rescue the condemned men, had a large number of troops smuggled into the town and quartered in the prison buildings adjacent thereto. When the rescuers presented themselves in front of the prison they were confronted with such a large force of of troops with fixed bayonets that they became awed, and, after hooting the military allowed themselves to be driven back a safe distance from the prison without offering any resistance, although had they a bold leader, they might have effected the rescue. Meanwhile the preparations for the executions were rapidly pushed forward, and the seven Socialists were quickly strangled to death by means of the garrote, three executioners being employed to do the horrible work.
