The announcement is made officially in another column of the declaration of a dividend for the half year ending June 30th, at the rate of six per cent per annum. Sir John Takes His Departure.

His intention was to have left on Sunday afternoon for Ottawa, but he found no train leaving Kingston for Ottawa on Sunday, and consequently had to remain over. He left on the afternoon train.

Lacrosse at Gananoque.

On Saturday a lacrosse match took place at Gananoque between the clubs of that place and Kingston, the game being played on the Gananoque side of the St. Lawrence. The game took place in three games, the first and third games being won by the second. The fourth game was called on account of an accident when the Gananoque managed to shoot the ball through the Kingstons' goal before play was called by the referee. The referee decided that the game was a draw. The clubs will play again.

Not in the Betting Line.

On behalf of the Kingston and Maple Leaf Lacrosse Clubs it seems necessary to state that they will not match themselves for money upon Dominion Day or any other occasion. The Kingston club is not a month old, as far as practice is concerned, is of light material, and is quite willing to admit at all times that it is not a rival to the strong and well practiced Maple Leafs. The clubs are pulling together amicably for the best interests of lacrosse in Kingston, and are not likely to destroy the harmony by angry matches or uncalled for bluffing. Above all, they do not desire the attention of indiscreet friends.

Dr. Maclean Honored.

The annual meeting of the Michigan State Medical Society has been held at Grand Rapids, followed by an excursion to Traverse City. The contest over the presidency was spirited. Graduates from the State University and many of the eminent physicians in the state rallied for Dr. Donald Maclean, and the first ballot gave him 100 votes, and French, of Battle Creek, received 63. The Detroit Free Press remarks that this was a gratifying triumph. It meant much more than the confidence and esteem of his fellows in the medical profession, inasmuch as it is a second vindication against an attack upon his personal and professional honor. The charge has been reiterated that the sentiment of the state was with his assailant. Every effort has been made to turn the sentiment in that direction. The result has silenced forever the persistent pretense. The election is a vindication also of the jury. The Medical Association did not intend the vote as such a vindication, but appealed to by the News to condemn the jury and declining to do so their decision became a vindication.

LOYALISTS' CENTENNIAL.

A Memorable Event—Festivities of the Week Begun—A "Whig" Reporter Early on Hand.

To-day our feet trod on historic ground. Where just one hundred years ago was a wilderness, dark and dreary, now is to be found rolling meadows, beautiful in verdure and lands rich in soil. Adolphustown, laid out as it has been by hardy tribes, now yields its fruit for hundreds of our fellow men. Just one hundred years ago to day Capt. Vanalstine, with a large number of refugees from the United States, landed within sight of where the writer of this now sits. Descendants of these families now crowd the township, not large in size but possessed of much wealth. On June 17th, Capt. Vanalstine began the work of clearing a spot and building a house. His associates did the same, and soon around the projections of land stretching out into the Bay of Quinte the log cabins began to multiply and the curling smoke told a silent but most cheerful tale. Soon the wilderness disappeared and Adolphustown, named after Adolphus, Duke of Cambridge, tenth son of George III., became the centre of Canada in so far as the then settlements were concerned. Of course Kingston was the naval headquarters and was greater in importance, but Adolphustown ranked next, and here alternate with Kingston court was held. For the sake of comparison and to show the advance made in the country, we called on Mr. F. Meudres, township clerk, and secured the following statement from the assessment rolls of 1884. There are now 1,61 ratepayers and a population of 644 souls; 11,647 acres are occupied, and 6,124 of these are under cultivation. The value of the estates is $418,316 and this, with personal and taxable income, increases the assessment to $443,800.

Better land and a more intelligent class of people cannot be found. Many of the farmers possess portemonnaies. Last night at we sat in the cosy and beautiful home of T. J. Watson, we could not but contrast the advantages we now possess and those of our ancestors. The advance has been marvellous. Log cabins have been transformed into brick and stone mansions, and instead of a simple chest that served as bed by night and a set of drawers by day there are luxuries galore.

TALK ABOUT THE VILLAGE.

Adolphustown village is a small place, situated on a bluff overlooking the harbor. There are several stores, a hotel, town hall, English church and parsonage and several residences. Here O. W. Allison, M.P., has a palatial residence with fountains driven by windmill power playing prettily on the lawn. The village was alive on Saturday night and all the inhabitants were anxiously awaiting "the centennial." The hotel was jammed full—three in a bed and dozens in the bar room. The Whig reporter had fears of having to crowd himself into a barrel in the village store, but J. J. Watson, a kind hearted Loyalist, threw open his doors and made the scribe quite happy. Expectations are high for a great time. The ground where the sports will occur is on a plateau above the bay, owned by D. W. Allison, M.P. Great preparation has been made for the demonstration. Some 10 acres have been fenced off and rods upon rods of sheds erected where all manner of refreshments will be served. Booths line the grounds in all directions and on the western side of the campers the white tents of the militia are seen. A grand stand beautifully decorated, is located in the centre of the plot, which is dotted with flagstaffs that long ago told to the world that there the pioneers of this province landed and made their homes. Men with whirligigs and cheap jacks are preparing for the demonstration and hope to reap much benefit. As late as Sunday afternoon the rap of the hammer was heard above the deep bass voices of the bull frogs in the cave.

ARRIVAL OF THE VISITORS.

On Sunday morning early the steamer Hero arrived with the 15th Battalion from Belleville, and as dawn flecked the eastern sky the companies marched to their tents—a very tired looking lot of men. The battalion was commanded by Lieut. Col. Lazier, with Majors Henderson and Dunnett, Paymaster Bigger, Quartermaster Campon, Adjutant Lazier and Surgeon Burdette as staff officers. At three o'clock the battalion was marched beneath two wide spreading oak and maples and a military service held. Many of the company stood over the ashes of pioneers, while from a sloping mound Rev. Mr. Forneri, B.D., gave an excellent sermon on the characteristics of the loyalists. The hymns were sung by the citizen soldiers, led by the band, which played admirably. In the old Episcopalian church in the village quite an audience assembled at 11 o'clock. The sermon was delivered by Rev. C. L. Thomson, of Weston, an old Kingstonian, surviving son of the late Hugh C. Thomson, M.P., editor and proprietor of the Upper Canada Herald, which flourished in Kingston over 50 years ago. Mr. Thomson's mother is still living, the wife of Rev. Dr. Townley, of Paris. He discoursed on

THE GOOD OF INDEPENDENCE, SAYING:

"A last word in a matter which sometimes comes up in the political horizon, and has now and then appeared like a dark cloud, threatening storm, confusion and disaster. I refer to the idea some people have that this Dominion of Canada would be better off if it were independent of the British Crown. If our noble ancestors could speak to us from where, perhaps, their spirits serenely contemplate our political strife, they would say with bitterness, 'Try it if you like, foolish children; you cannot maintain your national independence for six months. And then you will see as we found, that the tender mercies of the wicked are cruel, and that the little finger of republicanism is thicker than the loins of the Imperial masters.'

LAYING A CORNER STONE.

On Saturday afternoon another epoch in the history of Methodism occurred—the laying of the stone of a memorial Methodist church, to be dedicated to those who brought to Canada the principles and doctrines they learned before their exile. In 1788 one Lyon, a class leader, began speaking and exhorting. In 1789 Rev. Mr. McCarthy followed, and on enunciating Methodist doctrines without governmental authority he was banished and on one of the islands near Kingston perished, or at least never was heard of again. In 1792 the first Methodist church in Canada was erected, the spontaneous gifts of the settlers being remarkable. The subscriptions ranged from £1 to £12, large sums for the poor but devoted people. It is upon the site of this first church that the memorial building is to be reared at a cost of $5,000. It will be brick with stone foundation. The church stands on the farm of J. P. Dorland, 2nd concession Adolphustown, about two miles from the village.

The ceremonies on Saturday were witnessed by a very large company. After a short introduction the corner stone was placed in position, and Mrs. J. B. Allison, widow aged 85 years, stepped forward, and as the tears of joy coursed her cheeks, laid the same in the name of the Holy Trinity. Next November the dedicatory

SERVICES WILL BE HELD.

Addresses were afterwards made by Revs. D. V. Lucas, Montreal; M. L. Pearson, Napanee; W. Briden, Newburgh; J. J. Leach, Odessa, and R. N. Adams, the pastor. On Sunday services were held in a great tent. The sermons were by Rev. D. V. Lucas. At the services on Saturday a document was read and placed beneath the foundation stone with some of the names of the original Methodists. The names were numerous and though the Loyalists have passed away, dozens of their descendants remain.

SOME TO THE WAY.

John McIntyre, Q.C., Kingston; D. Cannifff, Toronto, and his brother, F. J. Cannifff, Superintendent of the Asylum farm, London; Messrs. Conger of Picton and other strangers, were present at the church service yesterday morning.

The Whig, as usual, was the [illegible] in the newspaper line.

INTERESTING YACHT RACE.

The Wide-awake Takes the First of Five Races for the Clubs Silver Cup.

On Saturday afternoon the third class yachts opened sail on the silver cup. The following yachts were entered: Mr. Strangers' Wide-awake, Mr. Hamilton's Mackinaw, and Mr. Cartwright's Merlin.

The little fleet stood at anchor until the cannon on the Garfield gave them the send off. Immediately they glided away. The course was from a buoy at Swift's wharf to one off Garden Island, back to the city, from thence to four mile point and return.

The Merlin took the lead, and notwithstanding that she is better in a heavy gale than in a light one, and the wind on Saturday being very light she led Wide-awake to the Island buoy, The Mackinaw being third. The time was as follows:

	h.	min.	sec.
Merlin	8	17	30
Wide-awake	8	18	15
Mackinaw	8	18	30

After rounding the island buoy there was just enough wind to move the yachts. The Wide-awake cleared the breach between her and Merlin a trifle, and the Mackinaw seemed to be losing ground. Before the city buoy was rounded she was a long way behind the competitors. This was owing to the wind not being fresh enough for her, and her crew, no doubt, realized the fact. That the breath of heaven must fill their sails or all their toil is lost. They rounded the city buoy in the following order:

	h.	min.	sec.
Merlin	8	56	15
Wide-awake	8	57	20
Mackinaw	8	57	50

Then they started for Four Mile Point, the Wide-awake gradually gaining on her competitor, and caught the Merlin on the return home, when about half way between the city and the Point. She passed her and led for home. The city buoy was rounded thus:

	h.	min.	sec.
Wide-awake	9	25
Merlin	9	34	[illegible]
Mackinaw	9	5	10

The Wide-awake has thereby won one out of the five races which are to take place this season before the owner ship of the cup is decided.

The Missionary to Mhow.

On Saturday Rev. Frazer Campbell and his wife arrived in the city. Mr. Campbell preached two able sermons yesterday. In the morning he addressed the congregation of St. Andrew's Church, and in the evening preached in Chalmers' Church. His sermons on both occasions were very interesting. He has been attending the meeting of the General Assembly in Toronto, and is on his way to his home in Nova Scotia. The rev. gentleman was sent as missionary to Mhow, Central India, eight years ago where he and his wife have resided ever since. This afternoon his wife addressed the Ladies' Foreign Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Church in their hall.

Rev. Mr. Campbell is expected to visit Kingston again in the fall.

House of Providence Picnic.

The committee, appointed at a meeting held on last Friday evening, visited the grove of Mr. Staley, of Wolfe Island, to make arrangements for a picnic to be held about the 11th of July. The grounds are situated directly opposite Channel Grove, and a more fitting spot could not be selected for picnic purposes, never having been open to the public before. When the grounds are once open they will become a favorite resort. The committee intend having a dancing platform erected on the grounds, also, [illegible] rangements are completed this will be a delightful spot at which to spend a holiday. In case of rain or disagreeable weather Mr. Staley will offer ample shelter for over 2,000 people. The gentlemen of the committee return their thanks to Mr. Geo. Power for placing his yacht at their disposal.

DEDICATORY SERVICES.

Events of Yesterday in the Congregational Church and Hall—Very Eloquent Sermons.

The services in connection with the opening of the new Congregational Hall of the First Congregational Church were continued yesterday. In the morning Rev. Dr. Stevenson, of Montreal, delivered a discourse on "Congregationalism," founded on the first verse of the first chapter of Philippians, from which the rev. gentleman argued that the primitive Christian church consisted of three classes, viz., bishops or overseers, deacons or servants, and saints or church members, which was at the present day the constitution of all Congregational churches, each church managing its own affairs, electing its own officers, pastors, deacons and members. This form of organization had the merit of great simplicity and yet comprehensiveness, being capable of adapting itself to all the requirements of church work. Another feature was the absence of all creeds, it being considered the duty of each one to study "the will of God direct from the Bible itself." He believed that this system of church government was destined to be the church polity of the future, as it afforded freedom to advance with the progressive thought of the age and was the most effective means of carrying on the work of elevating humanity and spreading the gospel of Christ. In matters of doctrine they held the fundamental truths of Christianity, in common with all orthodox churches, and as a whole worked harmoniously together. They had an honest record of which they had reason to be proud; their forefathers had gained for them and all mankind the blessings of civil and religious liberty and freedom of conscience, and it was their privilege to seek to maintain and advance these principles, whereby the spirit of charity might be more diffused and practiced upon in these days of hard times and keen competition in commercial affairs. He congratulated the church in this city on the advance that had been made in enlarging their building, and he hoped they would be further stimulated to work for the Master. In conclusion he wished them every prosperity and advancement in such a work.

In the afternoon the Sabbath School children held their dedication service in the town hall, which was filled, many of the parents and friends being present. Dr. Jackson occupied the chair and called upon Mr. Tyner, the superintendent, to offer the dedicatory prayer, after which interesting addresses were delivered by the chairman, Rev. A. L. McLaughlin, Rev. F. McQuaig, Rev. S. Hooper and Rev. Dr. Stevenson, on the duties of teachers and scholars.

In the evening the Rev. Dr. Stevenson occupied the pulpit and preached an eloquent sermon on the words, "Never man spake like this man." There was a large audience and the singing of the choir, under the director, Mr. E. C. Heath, was greatly admired, especially the solo, "Come unto me and I will give you rest," by Miss Frederick and Miss Bamford.
