

Region warns of unmandated door-to-door sales

Halton is alerting the public to be aware that door-to-door sales of residential water filters are not mandated by the Region.

“Halton Region has been made aware that residents are being approached by sales people who claim that the Government of Ontario has mandated that all residents are required to have a specific filtration device installed on their water supply,” stated a press release. “It has been reported that sales people are also requesting access into residents’ homes to view their water systems.”

There is currently no mandate from the provincial government or Region requiring residents to install additional filtration equipment on their water systems, stated the release.

“Our highly qualified and licensed staff perform regular testing to make sure we consistently meet or exceed provincial water quality standards,” Jim Harnum, Halton Region’s Public Works commissioner, said in the release.

Residents should be aware that any Regional employee required to visit a residence always carries Regional photo identification — staff do not visit homes for the purpose of promoting or selling any water-related products.

Oakville Mayor Rob Burton dropped by the Queen Elizabeth Park Community and Cultural Centre (QEPCCC) Tuesday to visit Oakville Literacy Council volunteers as they made their final preparations for the council's annual used book sale, which opens today (Thursday, June 5) and runs until Sunday (June 8). From left to right, volunteers Marion Wu, Joanne MacNair, Jocelyne Kerby, Burton, Janet Birnie and Ken Auden show some of the stacks of books already collected from the community. The book sale will be held at the 2302 Bridge Rd. centre's Rehearsal Hall and open on the following dates and times: today, 6-10 p.m.; tomorrow (Friday, June 6), 9 a.m.-8:30 p.m.; Saturday (June 7), 9 a.m.-6:30 p.m.; and Sunday (June 8), bargain day, 9 a.m.-1 p.m.

End of an Era
Today, at a press conference in Ottawa, a spokesman for Canada Post announced the plan for budget cuts which includes “phasing out all remaining door to door deliveries.” This marks the end of an era by the nations mail service. For more than 100 years Canada Post has been relied upon to ensure not only for mail deliveries but business

“We’ve always been the best choice for door to door delivery!”
