GERMAN INVIGORATOR.

Which positively and permanently cures those diseases caused by abuse of the Generative Organs, and will Restore the Vigor of youth to any person in any position in which they may be placed. Her skin was of the coarsest temperament, but dry as parchment and without feeling. Her teeth very decayed and could not be pressed upon. Every endeavour was used to rouse her but all proved fruitless. Her pulse was beating feebly and her breath

ROSE AND FELL IN SOFT RESPIRATION.

She lay in the same position and in the same condition for several weeks. Her mother kept a close watch over her, living of her only support, for the [illegible] prior to her sickness, been working at a woollen mill, and noticed one day to day the gradual wasting away of her body till it became, in the course of her long starvation, deprived of all but the muscles—a mere skeleton. The poor woman, together with her [illegible], nursed the girl as best they could, hoping and hoping every day to see her treasure her last. They have been kept in long suspense, for the girl still drags out her miserable existence and there is no telling how long she may live. Yesterday the mother of the girl called one of the medical colleges and asked the students to do something for her. Last night a number of them visited the house and

APPLIED AN ELECTRIC BATTERY.

Every cell was put on before the sufferer and twitching was noticed in the muscles that have become like marble. After the full power of the electric current was brought to bear upon her, her eyelids raised about in that state of absolute astonishment one would imagine to possess a person just raised from the grave. Her mouth was opened and some extracts were placed beside her but only to be dashed into the face of the nearest student. A Chronicle reporter called to see her last night, not by expecting to find the true case [illegible] the report that reached his ear. In almost every particular she resembles an Egyptian mummy, except that she breathes. She has neither the pallid hue of a dead person nor that peculiar color of one in healthy life, but is of a deep saffron, like one in the yellow jaundice. A great many curious persons visited her yesterday, and there is no means of judging how long she may live in her trance like state.

IN A TRANCE.

The Curious Case of Mary Arla, Who has Eaten Nothing and Has not Moved Since Christmas.

(Louisville Commercial.)

A very interesting case to the medical world is reported at 632 East Walnut Street, near Clay. In a little back room on the second story of an old frame [illegible] lies stretched on this site where [illegible] a young girl that can scarcely, on general principles, be called living. Her name is Mary Arla, and since Christmas day she has neither eaten, drunk nor performed any of the [illegible] of nature. Both her mother and sister, who has been a constant attendant on her, and the other inmate of the house attest the truth of the statement.

ALL THE ORGANS OF NATURE

Christmas Day, her mother states, she ate a slice toast and disposed all in [illegible] appetite. Since her infancy she has been subject to cataleptic [illegible] of a peculiar character on during sleep, for she was born in a condition for a [illegible]
