CITY AND VICINITY.

Don't forget Bishop Cotman's address on Methodist Union to-night in the M.E. Church.

A meeting of the Kirk Session has been called to consider the resignation of Rev. T. Smith.

Prices.—Fresh to strong westerly to southerly winds, fair, milder weather, with light falls of snow in some localities.

New Trial.—McMichael vs. the K. & P. R.R. Company an order nisi absolute for a new trial has been made in the Queen's Bench Division, Toronto, costs to the defendant in any cause.

Seized Liquor.—Richard Varney was before the Police Magistrate this morning charged with selling liquor in less quantities than three half pints. He frankly acknowledged the offence, planked down $21.80 and retired. The sale occurred on February 10th.

The Prince's Wedding Day.—On the wedding day of the Prince of Wales, which occurred on March 10th, 1863, Kingston was in fine and there were great festivities. In the morning a military review was held on Murney Point, in which the volunteer companies of the city took part.

Breach of Promise.—The breach of promise case, in which a spinster and a married man, residents of Loughboro, are interested, which was to have been tried at the Assizes, was settled some days ago amicably. It was certainly the best thing to do, as publicity not at all desirable.

Book to Property.—F. X. Cousineau expects to make considerable money out of his property at St. Vincent. There is a boom at that place now owing to the removal there of the Customs Office from Pembina. Other improvements are expected that will make the property very valuable.

A Native Journalist.—C. D. Macdonald, of Pictou, N.S., who is at present in the city on a visit to his brother, a Cadet of the Royal Military College, is editor of the Pictou News (Liberal). Mr. Macdonald has made his first visit to Kingston. He goes in a few days to Ottawa, where he will remain for a short time.

Diseased Pork.—On Saturday a physician called our attention to a piece of bacon which he had placed under a powerful microscope. It was spotted and evidently diseased, but in what way experts differ. One butcher says he recently killed a young sow, found the flesh of it spotted in this way, and believing it to be unfit for food cast it to the dogs.

Funeral of Miss Wilkinson.—The funeral of the late Miss Wilkinson occurred to-day. The body was conveyed from Garden Island to the city. Service was held in St. George's Cathedral, after which the body was interred in Cataraqui Cemetery. The pall-bearers were Captain James Dix, J. F. Allen, Philip D. O'Brien, and Messrs. A. Malone and S. Fole. The cortege was a long one.

A Bright Fell.—Professors of the Medical College are relieved now that the lectures for the session are at an end. The happiest men are those who have been duplicating discourses in accordance with the agreement entered into at the Christmas holidays. Co-education is not now much discussed, but the subject is not more popular than it was and the proposal of a female medical college is favorably regarded.

Theatricals.—A number of ladies and gentlemen of Kingston intend giving a performance in the Opera House on Saturday, the 7th of April, for the benefit of the General Hospital and Shoal Dino. They are now busily rehearsing Howard Payne's dreary comedy in five acts, "Charles II" and William Brough's original farce "Aria Bella." The rehearsals so far have been very successful and we have no doubt a bumper house will greet our amateurs, in their laudable desire to assist the charitable institutions of the city.

An Unprecedented Adjournment.—The Assize Court opened this afternoon at three o'clock; Judge Armour presided. There was not a civil case to be tried. The case of P. Stearns v. Pullman Car Co. will be tried at Carleton. The action of B. Bird v. the G.T.R. has been settled by the plaintiff receiving $200 and costs. The other case has been held over. For the first time in Kingston and the second time in a Canada Court of Assize there is no civil business to adjudicate upon. The criminal calendar will not occupy the attention of the Court over a couple of days.

TOST'S ANTECEDENTS.

Mr. Tost, the minister, was a son of William Tost and brother of Hon. Geo. E. Tost, of Thorold. The Tost family are well known and are wealthy farmers. Both brothers dealt largely in dairy products, and in this way became acquainted with prominent dairymen throughout the state. The deceased married Miss Mitchell, a daughter of Supervisor Mitchell, of Orleans. She is a pleasant and cultured lady, and one son is the result of the union.

When on Saturday evening a new convert in Victoria Barracks wanted salvation to go through the land like a mighty wind, a good many thought of Wiggins and wondered what he was about.

On Friday evening a young woman was carried out of Victoria Hall in a faint. On Saturday night another girl was overcome, principally in consequence of the heat and bad ventilation of the barracks.

The alterations and improvements at St. James' Church have become more extensive than contemplated, in order to make thorough work. The intention of re-opening at Easter has been abandoned in consequence.

On Saturday evening a young man charged a companion with keeping the balance of $3 after purchasing a box of matches for him. Enquiry elicited the fact that the chap didn't know what he was about, this as the result of a protracted spree.

It was a cruel thing to keep Miss Burns in the 24hr police cells from Saturday night until this morning. The weak unfeeling girl should have been in the hospital rather than in such a pest-hole. Her condition in Court was certainly painful to witness.

A well-known restaurant keeper says that he does not wish to be considered a complainant against the movement, but that the Salvation Army now embraces some of his old patrons, and that his revenue has, therefore, been sensibly affected by the revival.

The manufacturers are giving the Salvation Army every encouragement. A room for noon prayer meetings has been fitted up in the Victoria Foundry, and we are informed that provision is to be made for religious exercises in the Locomotive Works and Cotton Mill.

Lillian Bell has secured a decree of absolute divorce from her husband, Digby V. Bell, the actor, who appeared here in the star "Pinafore" Company. Adultery was the charge. Mrs. Bell may marry again, and Digby has to pay her a yearly allowance of $600.

IRON ORE DUTY.

William Cox, of Madoc, a prominent iron exporter, says the new duty imposed on iron ore will have the effect of stopping the handling of the lower grade ores. Such mines cannot be operated to pecuniary advantage. The shipment of the higher grade ore will in no way be retarded. Mr. Cox concludes by saying "The tariff won't stand long anyway; per season as the Democrats get in power they will knock it into smithereens."

SUNDRIES ESTATE.

The Bangor estate was offered for sale to-day. The premises occupied by Mr. Robb, butcher, and Mrs. McLaughlin, confectioner, were purchased by Mrs. Stratford for $2,800. The shop and residence occupied by Mrs. Forgues was not disposed of. Only $4,200 were bid, while the upset price was $5,000. Rutchenon auctioneer.

OLD TIME WORSHIP.

The Salvation Army in the F.M. Church—Partaking of the Emblems—Grand Gathering.

Shortly before 10 o'clock yesterday, members of the Salvation Army were seen gathering in the vicinity of Victoria Barracks. Afterwards about two hundred of them, headed by the officers, marched up Princess street, singing as they walked. A goodly number of the converts, male and female, were dressed in the uniform of the Army. The objective point of the corps was the Primitive Methodist Church, Brock Street. There they were received and shown into the centre seats. The body of the edifice was completely filled. It was easily seen that to many the service was novel and odd. Dozens perhaps for years had not entered a sanctuary. The Army visited it in order to partake of the sacrament. Before the regular service Capt. Abbie led her band in song and the service was one of the most effective we have witnessed. It was a regular old timer. The singing was excellent and in prayer, when each soldier devoutly knelt, the scene was impressive. As Rev. Mr. Harris engaged in prayer hearty "Amens" were heard all over the church.

GIST OF THE SERMON

The words selected as the text by the pastor are found in Exodus xii. 12th verse. "When I see the blood I will pass over you." The speaker pointed first to the relations and faith that existed under the Jewish dispensation, and compared that day with this. Though the ordinances were different yet the same doctrine of salvation was expounded. He showed the relation of the Jewish Passover to the event they intended to commemorate, and commented upon the great truths illustrated by the Passover itself. In speaking of the Army Mr. Harris said that before him were many young men who a few months ago were away in spiritual Egypt but who were now emancipated from sin. These soldiers he urged to stand firm with God. They would have a hard battle to fight against scoffers, but they should fight valiantly and let people know that they belonged to the Army of the Lord. "Wear your uniform before all men," said he, "cling close to the Cross and God will lead you to greater victories in the future. The speaker referred to the pledges given in connection with the Passover—a deliverance from all bondages and protection from all dangers. "Keep the blood of Christ before your eyes and on your hearts," he went on. Mr. Harris spoke of the event they were about to commemorate, and enumerated the reasons which induced Christians to partake of the Lord's supper. They commemorated Christ's death because he loved them still, and as they knelt around the altar he asked them to let their minds revert only to God and Heaven.

THE AFTER PROCEEDINGS.

Then followed singing and prayer, and an opportunity was given those to retire who desired to do so. But few left. The eucharistic feast was then proceeded with and the entire company partook of the "broken emblems," many for the first time in their lives. After the dismissal from the altar each one made a short and silent prayer before resuming his seat. The service concluded about 12:00 o'clock.

The proceedings in the barracks in the afternoon and evening were of a highly interesting character and many are said to have been saved.

AN IMPORTANT ANNIVERSARY.

To-day a grand anniversary gathering is to be held in Brooklyn, N.Y. in commemoration of the appointment of Major Raylton as American Commissioner of the Army three years ago. The salvation work of the Army was commenced in the United States four years ago, but an active organized prosecution of the work dates from the appointment of Commissioner Raylton. The leaders of the local battalions from all over the continent will gather at the Brooklyn anniversary and a grand time is looked for. Major Moore is the present Commissioner for America. Capt. Wass and Private Brown, who represents Kingston, expect to be absent about a week.

POINTED SERMONS.

Last evening Rev. J. M. Hagar delivered an excellent sermon in the Queen Street C. M. Church. He clearly pointed out the difference between the Church-going classes and those who never entered any places of worship. His discourse had special reference to the the work of salvation now being accomplished in Kingston. He held that it was easier to reclaim "the publicans and harlots" than some of the superfluous individuals who outwardly confessed admiration and love for God and assisted in church schemes. The speaker declared that if he desired to establish a church and have it filled with energetic workers he would go amongst the swearers and blasphemers rather than risk the taking of many who regularly attended the Lord's house. The professional moralist had often become so callousd that God's pleadings had no effect upon him. Dr. Elliott in the morning in the same place, constrained his hearers not to be carried away by temporary excitement, but to be consistent in all things, especially in religion.

PORTSMOUTH AROUSED.

The Salvation Army had another grand rally last evening after the services in the different churches were over. The rally took place at the usual place, Short's driving shed, and on invitation adjourned to the Town Hall, which was soon filled to its utmost capacity. The meeting was led by Mr. B. Atkins, supported by a number of the recruits of the Salvation Army, wearing their badges as well as the leaders from the different churches. Songs, experiences, invitations, exhortations and prayers followed in rapid succession, keeping up the interest in the meeting to its close at 10 o'clock. It is said Capt. Abbie will visit them this week.

CHILD DESERTION.

Arrival of the Waif at the Police Station—Peacefully Reclining in a Clothes' Basket.

Looking Up the Mother—A Sickly Creature Incarcerated in the Cells—Scenes in Court—A Sad Case.

On Saturday evening a mechanic residing in the west end of the city, surprised the police at head quarters by presenting to them a babe, some two or three months old. About an hour previously a sleigh had driven up to the outside of his house, the front door was heard to open and shut, and the bell was pulled. One of the household stepped into the hall and found a square shaped basket containing what appeared to be a quantity of clothing. An examination led to a somewhat startling discovery. Nestling in the clothing, carefully wrapped and covered, was an infant, placid and peaceful because in a deep sleep. Who left it there? The question could not then be answered for the reason that the visitor went off as she came—in the sleigh. We say "she" because it subsequently transpired that a woman conveyed, unsuccessfully, to have the custody of the child transferred from her daughter to that of the family upon whom she unceremoniously foisted it.

The police, after some consultation, concluded that the mother of the babe was Catharine Ann Burns, and Officers J. Nesbitt and Small departed to work up the case. Meanwhile an amusing scene occurred at the station. Sergeant Carson, tender hearted man, lifted "the little dainty," as he called it, out of its wicker work crib and fondled it beside the fire. Presently it gave a squall that threw the bobbies into a commotion. A happy thought occurred to one of the group. He disappeared for a second then reappeared, with a spoonful of sugar which he placed in a cotton cloth and slipped into the little one's mouth. The effect was electrical; the crying ceased for a time. The sugar didn't last long, however, the child was restless and fretful and defied the whole force to please it.

ARRIVAL OF THE MOTHER.

Sergt. Carson was almost in despair when the door opened and in came the young woman, who acknowledged its maternity but denied that she had deserted or ill used it. She was glad enough to take it to her bosom and bestow upon it the love which soothed it to slumber within a few minutes. She said it had been taken from her by her mother and left with friends of the man who was alleged to be its father. He is not now in Kingston. She, therefore, did not personally offend, although kept in custody awaiting the action of the Police Magistrate. Her mother visited her on Sunday and to the police admitted that she had perpetrated the sensation.

The young woman is 19 years of age, but younger in appearance, and very delicate in health. When Nesbitt went for her, her father objected to her being arrested without the usual authority, and as a result of a difficulty the policeman was struck on the side of the head with a poker and cut, the blood running down his face and giving him a hard appearance on his return to the station. In consequence of this scene the young woman was taken off without time being given her to dress warmly for the walk that was before her.

PROCEEDINGS IN COURT.

There were some interesting proceedings at the Court this morning. The young woman was placed in the dock, weak and evidently suffering. She had to support herself as she walked along. Mr. McGuire protested against the officiousness of Police Officer James Nesbitt in taking Miss Burns from her home and dragging her to the police station without head covering, without boots and with only a thin wrapper about her form. It was the most inhuman thing he had ever heard of, to force a woman but risen from a sick bed to walk the streets and occupy the horrible cells below.

The Magistrate said the disgrace of having such cells was upon the City Council, of which Mr. McGuire was an influential member.

Mr. McGuire said it was not the fault of the city that a policeman should be so officious. He would look to the Police Commissioners for redress.

The mother and daughter, Elizabeth and Catharine Jane Burns, were both charged with abandoning a child whereby its life was endangered. Mr. McGuire appeared for the defence and entered a plea of "not guilty." He also said that as the Assizes were on he would ask the case to be sent there for trial. It would turn upon some nice points of law.

DISCOVERY OF THE BABY.

William Ross gave an account of the finding of the child in his house. Mrs. Burns last November had an interview with his son, whom she charged with being the father of an unborn child. Saturday night was not very cold and the child was not endangered by the exposure it had received.

During the examination the child was very noisy. It was petted by Mrs. Burns, who was very anxious to talk. She gave herself away several times, which so annoyed her counsel that he snapped out: "You old lunatic shut up." "Oh, hold your tongue," and "If you open your trap again I will abandon the case." The scene was amusing. Mrs. Burns could not keep quiet.

A POLICEMAN'S STATEMENT.

Police Officer James Nesbitt was the next witness. He was present on the arrival of the child at the station house on Saturday night. It was nearly frozen and the men on duty had to revive it by holding it near the stove.

The baby was still troublesome and Mrs. Burns wearily tramped around and failed to quiet it. She continued her interruptions, causing Mr. McGuire to frantically groan, "Shut up, O-h-e-t-e-p!"

The witness said there was only one shawl about the child.

Mrs. Burns (excitedly)—"There were two around it. Two brown ones. There's one," pointing to a shawl in a basket; "and here's the other," holding up the baby in a dramatic way over the railing, and around which was wrapped a mother. "I'm the mother of 14 children and I know how to handle them. I'm neither a maid nor a Miss in these matters." Every one looked and he kept silent.

The evidence of Police Officer Nesbitt was continued. He said that Miss Burns was willing to go to the station. She wanted to get more clothes, but witness thought she had enough.

Mrs. Burns jerked down a basket, flourished a calico dress and declared that that was the dress her daughter wore to the station house, that she was without boots and a hat. Later on Mrs. Burns remarked that the child was like herself, "a clear grit."

There was no evidence to show that the life of the child had been endangered and the case was dismissed.

ACTION UNDER LEGAL ADVICE.

Mrs. Burns wept frequently and declared that she had endeavored to bring up her children decently and well. Their father was a poor hard working man. The disgrace brought upon her was more than she could bear. In taking the baby to Mr. Ross she had acted under legal advice and the Magistrate said that certainly every possible precaution for its comfort had been taken.

OPINION OF THE MAGISTRATE.

The Magistrate offered to have the poor girl sent to the Hospital, where she could receive the medical treatment she required. The legal gentleman freely expressed the opinion that seduction should be made a crime, and one said that he was glad to observe that Mr. Charlton's Bill had, in an amended form, passed the Committee of the House of Commons and might shortly become law.

HAD NOT THE AUTHORITY

On Saturday night Police Officer Nesbitt went to the home of Robert Burns, by order of Chief Horsey, to ask his daughter to go to the station and take her infant. The policeman was somewhat over zealous in the discharge of his duty, and Mr. Burns asked for his authority. He had none to arrest, and was then ordered out. The policeman retired, but returned with Officer Small. A scene then occurred, and Nesbitt was struck with a poker or stove lifter on the side of the head. Mr. Burns said at the Court, when charged with assault, that Nesbitt had swung his baton around his head and threatened for his (Burns') interference to lay him out. Burns said he administered the blow in self-defence. The police officer made a statement similar to the above, but without citing the language alleged to have been used. He denied making the remarks attributed to him. Before Nesbitt was cross examined Mr. Agnew, who appeared for him, said that there was no necessity to proceed any further. The officer had been acting irregularly. He had had no authority to enter the house after being ordered out of it. The charge was, therefore, dismissed.

Mr. McGuire said if Nesbitt had done what he was told to do he would have been right, but he was over zealous. It was dangerous for Chief Horsey to allow the officer to do anything. All his orders should be put in writing so that they could not be overstepped.

RETIRED FROM SERVICE.

The War Office Gazette of the 6th January, 1883, notifies the retirement from the 2nd Battalion of the 16th or Bedfordshire Regiment of Quarter Master and Honory Captain D. McCartney to pension. The above officer was Quarter Master of the late Royal Canadian Rifles when it disbanded in Kingston in June, 1870, and was transferred to the 46th Regiment then in Poonah, Bombay. He returned to England with that regiment and shortly after exchanged to the 2nd Battalion, 16th, about to embark for Madras. He has now settled in Ayr, Scotland, after a service of nearly 16 years as Quarter Master and 19 in the ranks.
