CITY AND VICINITY.

THE WEEKLY WHIG, published to-day, contains a very full budget of news, and is a capital paper to send to friends.

PROBS. — Strong winds and moderate gales from the west and north, fair considerable colder weather, with snow flurries in some localities.

CHEAPER than ever as they intend to close business by the 1st of May. It is astonishing what low prices are asked for goods by S. Burgess & Son.

FIRE ALARM.—There was an alarm of fire at noon to-day, but only a chimney blazed in a house occupied by one Rushey in the upper part of the city.

NOT INJURED.—The fall wheat is reported to be in good condition. The ground is frozen but to a slight depth and so the wheat is green and fresh. The prospect for a good crop is very bright.

A DOUBLE house in Williamsville with four rooms and kitchen in each, well built, with stone foundations, and back, plastered, good sheds and well attached. The above will be sold by W. H. Rogers, Albert street, for $800.

YACHTS RUNNING.—The five ton yacht Wildwake, of Belleville, which was sold about three months since to Mr. Strange, of Kingston, was on Tuesday placed on a sleigh and brought to the Limestone City. The yacht is a smart one, and if well handled will be heard of to good account.

GONE WEST.—Report says that Miss Chaffey, the heroine of the Chaffey-Cantyre affair, has gone to Winnipeg in company with her guardian, A. E. Richards. Some days ago Miss Chaffey, B.E. Chaffey and Mr. Richards, arrived here and left on the west-bound train. They drove to Kingston from Newburg.

THE attention of our readers is called to the advertisement in to-day's issue of Mr. Henry Brown, undertaker, etc., who has for the past twenty-five years so successfully carried on the undertaking business in Kingston. None can be more courteous, more prompt, or more thorough in his engagements.

AN EXHIBITION.—Last evening an exhibition of a gymnastic character occurred in the gymnasium at the Royal Military College. It was attended by a goodly number to whom invitations had been sent. Sergt. Morgans' instruction is of a very high order. A large number of cadets participated in the evening's sport.

THE ICE.—A year ago to-day the ice all disappeared from the harbor. Yesterday the ice between here and the Island was remarkably firm. It is rotting quickly, however. A gentleman reports that as far as the eye can see ice exists on the lake. Several teams broke through it yesterday near Amherst Island. A few fine days and the ice must go.

A NEWSPAPER MAN.—People are not aware that Consul Twitchell of this city is an old newspaper proprietor. Years ago, while in Louisiana, he owned a Republican journal and conducted its political department. This accounts for the Consul's geniality to newspaper men. Whenever he has an item he always gives it to the boys.

THE TAY CANAL.—Fred A. Wise, Superintending Engineer, an approximately estimates the cost of the Tay Canal at $153,000. A reason given for its construction is that the town of Perth in the centre of a very large mineral country, which is just commencing to be developed, and the construction of this canal will be a great benefit to that industry, bringing back on return freight from Kingston, coal and other heavy freight, which can be brought cheaper by water than rail. A freight and passenger boat will also be put on the route when completed.

PRESBYTERY NOMINATIONS.

Rev. Kenneth McLennan, M.A., of Charlottetown, P. E. I., has been nominated by the Presbytery of Peterborough for Moderator in the next General Assembly.

Another Presbytery has nominated Rev. Principal McKnight, of Halifax, for the Moderatorship of the General Assembly.

THE WRONG INDIVIDUAL.

The gentleman arrested at the station yesterday, on a telegram giving description of a man who had stolen $800 in Toronto, was not the right one. As soon as the arrest was made telegrams were sent between Kingston and Toronto. The arrest was unfortunate, but the person in custody looked exactly like the man wanted. Finally, about nine o'clock, the detained gentleman was released, as it was satisfactorily shown that he was not the individual required. The gentleman detained was Mr. M. McHugh, a barrister of Windsor, who is on his way to Ottawa, commissioned to appear before the Supreme Court to argue the case in which the owners of the tug John Owen and the schooner Minnie Merton are interested. His detention is regretted, but as the officers duty was plain and McHugh answered the description so accurately the arrest was somewhat excusable. Mr. McHugh left this morning for Ottawa.

RETURNED FROM EUROPE.

To-day Mr. J. Greenfield, jolly and smiling, and crowned by a silk tile which caught everybody's attention and filled the hearts of the fox tos with envy, arrived home, after an absence in Europe of nearly two months. He went across the ocean to make the spring purchases for the wholesale hat and fur house of Gillespie, Mead & Co., Toronto, and procured, we presume, a stock of staple and fashionable goods. Mr. Greenfield was not idle during his absence. He could not have been so and travelled as much as he did, besides making a selection of stock for which he knew there would be a popular demand in Canada. He visited London, Manchester, Liverpool, Stockport, Paris, Cologne, Leipsic, Brussels, Antwerp and Dover, and left America and returned to it via New York. The trip toward, on the steamship Germanic, White Star Line, he very much enjoyed. The log of the vessel was in miles, 60, 294, 298, 337, 384, 384, 372, 355, 344, 328 and 83, a total of 2,803. He will remain here for a few days, then return to Toronto, and probably set out at once for a tour to the Maritime Provinces.

A SCHOOL TEST.

How Quickly a School Could be Cleared in the Event of Fire—A Simple Expeditious Method.

Since the terrible accident in Brooklyn, whereby sixteen children were killed while rushing out of a burning convent school, the school authorities have been enquiring into the means of egress from the schools. Yesterday Chairman Waldron, Mr Allen and a representative of the Barrow Wire staff repaired to the School, Wellington Street, to make a test in regard to the time required to clear the building. The teachers were not made aware of what was intended. The Model School was selected for the test, as it was believed it was the least adapted for a rapid exit. The hall is very narrow and the stairways not suited for a hasty flight of the children. The young are all in the upper rooms; the larger boys on the lower flat. Such an arrangement should be altered. The larger pupils should be above. It was five minutes to four o'clock when the visitors entered Principal Wood's room. The Chairman intimated his desire. Mr. Wood thought it would be necessary to notify the school as they were not very prompt in dismissing at 4 o'clock. The work in hand was usually finished before the pupils departed. The Chairman assented to the suggestion. The operation of dismissal is quite simple but expeditious. The school house accommodates over 300 pupils, of whom thirty are girls. The lads were quite spirited in their movements, and with the words, "Boys, stand up, out, forward!" they formed into two columns near the door. Bells connecting with upper rooms timed the scholars as they followed from each of the rooms. The long rows rapidly vanished through the school door and as the last passed out it was noticed that only three minutes had been consumed in the experiment. The school could have been cleared in two minutes had the children been hurried. However, it would be inadvisable, even in case of fire, to urge rapid action, as the narrow hall would then be jammed and probably accidents ensue. An easy movement would be more desirable. It would be well if, at frequent intervals, the schools were emptied as hurriedly as possible so that should a fire or other emergency occur the scholars would be trained for hasty action. Tests will be made in the other city schools.

POLICE COURT.

There were several drunks before the Magistrate this morning. Michael Burns committed his first light offence. He was allowed to depart. Hugh McGurk attempted to befriend John O'Donnell by taking him to the police station for shelter. Both were drunk. Hugh was run in but dismissed this morning. O'Donnell was assessed to the extent of $2 and costs. He was given time in which to pay. He left for the O & Q.RR. works.

William Whitehead, a carter, again made a visit to the dock. He was fined $2 and costs and told that should he appear again his license would be taken from him.

William Feney came to Kingston to purchase supplies. He did not do so. He got into a hotel and engaged a bed, but getting drunk was turned out. Allowed to go. Maurice Collins was a companion of Feeney's. He said that as soon as he was released he would purchase what he wanted. The fellow was credited with having no cash. The magistrate asked.

"Have you any money?"

Collins was silent for a moment, and then replied, "yes." This threw the Sergt.-Major and force into a panic. The man had been searched and nothing had been found on him.

"Where is it? said His Honour.

In my boot!" was the reply.

You can go. Any one who can beat the police deserves to be free."

RECOVERY OF STOLEN GOODS.

A warrant was issued Tuesday in Toronto for the search of Mrs. Fox's premises, and Detectives Burrows and Brown and Grand Trunk Detective Spence undertook to explore the place for stolen goods. "Lother Fox," as she is known to the police, complained in bitter terms of the intrusion and assured the officers that nothing "crooked" could be traced to her. In various out-of-the-way places they brought to light property of considerable value. So large, indeed, was the haul that an express waggon had to be procured to remove the articles to police headquarters. Among the things recovered were twenty-five nickel-plated water taps, valued at $2.25 each; 24 best finish brass taps, a full set of half-round carpenters' chisels, and five pairs of garden shears. "Mother Fox," as she witnessed the removal of the property by the detectives, wept loud and long. Her husband, who had been "doing time" in Kingston for shooting with intent to kill, died in that institution a few weeks ago, and his body was removed to Toronto for interment. Mrs. Fox remarked to one of the detectives, "I've never had a day's good luck since his (her husband's) dead carcass crossed the door."

LATE QUEEN SUSAN.

Mr. Henry Dumble gives us a flat lie on the life of the late Susan Donaldson, called the Queen, whose burial occurred yesterday. He says she was a soldier's wife and resided in an upper room of what was known as the barrack barracks on Montreal street. In 1851, when a lad, he was engaged in the distribution of tracts, and nearly every week he visited her quarters. She was then seventeen, liable to excitable actions, and so often found himself run out of the building when he encouraged her. Her husband was a quiet man and used to follow Dumble to the door and obtain the missive, the delivery of which his wife prevented. Some years ago Mr. Dumble says he accompanied some friends to the Asylum and met Queen Susan. She shook him by the hand and remarked, "Oh, you're the little tract boy." She was not known to have any children.

"STRICTLY BUSINESS."

A Melo-Dramatic Comedy of Merit—Fun for the Boys—Exploits of P. P. Philkins.

There was a large audience last evening when, in the Opera House, "Strictly Business" was performed by a Company than which few better have visited us in recent years, certainly not this season. The play is a curious one, but constituted of a number of humorous incidents, the rehearsal of which makes the audience laugh heartily, not once or half a dozen times, but constantly and throughout the evening.

The story of the play turns mainly on the machinations of Nihilistic conspirators to assassinate the Czar of Russia, in which an American named "Phineas Pomeroy Philkins" is strangely mixed up, but without intent on his part. The curtain rises on the boudoir of a Russian lady in Geneva, sent thither by the Russian Government to counteract the plots of the Nihilists in that centre of conspiracies. She is discovered, after successfully foiling several schemes, and to save her life is compelled to marry "Philkins," who has been passionately in love with her. From this starting point the action is worked out in England, on the steamer "Volta," off Portsmouth Harbor, in the bureau of the Russian Chief of Police, and at the haunt of the Nihilists on the Neva, during which it comes about that "Philkins" innocently falls a victim to an arrangement whereby he is made to be the chief instrument of a scheme to poison the Czar by introducing canned fruits, already prepared for their deadly purpose, to the Imperial table. He, however, discovers the plot in time to cause the destruction of the schemers. The dialogue is clever, bristling with fun, and calculated to provoke unending mirth.

Mr. C. B. Bishop, as "Philkins," was the living embodiment of that type of Americans who are ever ready to convert the most appalling incidents or the gravest situations into an advertising medium for the furtherance of their particular line of business. The drummer's characteristic energy in forcing sales was well portrayed, and his panegyric on the virtues of Ruggles' canned dulse in the third act was simply immense. He was the life and soul of the play, always on deck, always saying something to tickle the risibilities of the audience. His principal supporters were also players of a notable order. Miss Emma Prince, as "Poala Petrowitch" and "Countess Ora Oronoff," was very attractive in figure and dress and acting, her delivery and action betokening the skillful, graceful actress. Mrs. Magnus, as "Princess Vera," was also very good, but limited in her scope and service. Mr. Alfred H. Hastings, as "General Malakoff," head of the St. Petersburg Police, an old favorite, gave an acceptable rendition of his part, and the same may be said of "Ivan Isaakoff," the Nihilist. The performance on the whole seems to have given the highest satisfaction.

DO YOU SHAVE ?

A Visitor's Conduct in a Barber Shop—Putting his Hand on the Artist's Wife's Head.

There was an interesting case at the Police Court this morning. A. J. Lee, barber, Princess Street, laid an information against a Michael Doheny whom the police captured. He is a white haired man, full faced and possessed of considerable dignity. He hailed lately from Montreal. He became quite annoyed in the court room at the time consumed in getting the witnesses together in order that the case might proceed. The prisoner pleaded "not guilty" to the charge of assaulting Mrs. Lee. The following evidence was presented:

STATEMENT OF MRS. LEE.

Maria Lee, wife of Albert Lee, said she was in the shop this morning when Doheny walked in and asked "Do you shave?" She said, "No." Doheny put his arm on Mrs. Lee's shoulder and she moved towards the door way for the back shop, where her husband was. Doheny followed and coming up to her put his hand on her head. She told him not to touch her, to take his hand off. While he had his hand on her head he said "You are a pretty little girl," and asked "Are you married," her husband then came forward and the scene ended.

Mr. Lee made a similar statement. He said that when he learned what Doheny did he put him out saying, "I will not allow you to insult my wife." Doheny said he had not insulted her, that he had only put his hand on her head.

DOHENY MAKES AN EXPLANATION.

Doheny in self defence said that he had gone into a barber shop on Princess Street to get shaved and not seeing the barber asked if he was in as he wanted to get shaved. He put his hand on Mrs. Lee's shoulder and said, "Will he be in soon?" Afterwards witness went out and over to another barber shop and there got shaved. He had no intention of insulting the lady.

The Magistrate held that no assault had been committed, although Mr. Doheny had been very indiscreet. He should not touch any women. The case was dismissed without costs. Mr. Lee was not satisfied with the decision, spoke quite hotly on the question, and declared that the matter would not end there. He would have satisfaction for the insults offered to his wife. The court was cleared about 12 o'clock.

Thousands Say So.

CHATS ON CANADA.

Attention to Our Colleges—Noticed in American Paper—Glimpses of Kingston.

Mr. A. W. Moore, of Rochester, the associate editor of the Sunday Morning Herald, is writing a series of letters under the heading of "Chats About Canada." His tenth paper deals with the literary men and women of Kingston, with whom he was acquainted during his residence of several years in this city. He refers to Fidelis' writings, making special mention of her defence of Christianity against a well known Sceptic holding a position in one of the public departments at Ottawa. Queen's University has been the alma mater of a great many eminent and useful men in Canada, who, as graduates in arts, divinity or medicine have filled, and fill to-day, prominent positions in the different professions and mercantile pursuits. The faculty of the College has always been composed of men of undoubted ability. Among the learned men who have for many years filled chairs in the University is the venerable Dr. Williamson, a brother-in-law of the Premier of Canada. He has been identified with Queen's for half a century. Apart from his character as a man of profound erudition he is beloved for his many excellent qualities. He belongs to those old school savants who are fast becoming extinct, and of whom Dr. Arnold, the famous head master of Eaton College, England, was a notable representative. The institution, he says, sustained a great loss in the death of Prof. Mackerras, to whom many a young student was indebted for a happy issue out of his College trials.

He speaks of Prof. Watson as a distinguished member of the College Faculty, and the author of several important works. Prof. Nicholson he alludes to as a minister as well as a philosopher, and says he is one of the jolliest little men that ever graced a professor's chair or "shook his paw in the pulpit," while Prof. Dupuis is declared to be, besides an eminent analytical chemist remarkable for his genius in mechanics and mathematics. Dr. Grant and the new professor's are not mentioned simply because they were not in office at the time of Mr. Moore's residence here, and they were not known to him.

The faculty of the Royal College of Surgeons is composed of physicians practicing in Kingston. Dr. Fife Fowler, Dr. Sullivan, Dr. S. N. Fenwick, Dr. Dupuis, Dr. Laveli, Dr. Oliver, Dr. Irwin, and Dr. Saunders are among the number. This college has sent forth a large number of graduates in medicine since its foundation.

Students in arts and divinity at Queen's college wear the traditional mortar-board and gown during term. They are made of black lustre and trimmed with red. Seeing so many youths on the streets wearing these sombre garments reminds one of an English university town. Indeed, Kingston looks very old countryfied, with the scarlet-coated boys of the Royal Military College, the artillerymen of the garrison in their blue tunics and bearskin bushies, the uniformed staff and line officers, the begowned students, with their "mortar-boards," mingling constantly with the population on the streets. The newspapers are gratified at some lenght, and in a complimentary way.

SALVATION JUBILEE.

At the Salvation Jubilee in Brooklyn at which Private Brown attended as a representative of Kingston corps there was a great celebration. Twenty-five stations of the army paraded through several streets of that city headed by bands of music and carrying banners bearing Scriptural devices. They were under command of Capt. Jonas Inman. They partook of a banquet at the Lyceum in the evening. After that they marched to the rink on Clermont Avenue, where jubilee services were held. A stand of colours were presented to the Swedish expedition and recruits for San Francisco, Halifax and the South were dedicated to the service. At the City Hall a small boy dropped through the big drum, a fiddle was broken, and a female private rolled down the steps.

DEPRECIATE IN VALUE !

Not only as regards quality and style but in difference and finish from the New Goods, as well as in the matter of color, which on this Spring are with one or two exceptions ENTIRELY DIFFERENT FROM LAST YEAR'S GOODS. The advantage therefore in purchasing from us is that you can get New Goods, New Styles, New Colors, New Prices.

Which means in the latter case a saving of from 15 to 40 per cent. TRIMMINGS to match all our Dresses in the newest effects of Ottoman and Roman Silks and Satins.
