DYNAMITERS' PLOT.

Evidence of the Conspiracy Hatched in America—Documents Found on the Prisoners.

[illegible] Norman, Gallagher, Dalton, Wilson, Curtin and Ambough, the alleged dynamite conspirators on trial at London, have been remanded for a week. The prisoners were arraigned before Judge Denman. Messrs. Smythe, Gould and [illegible] appeared for the defence. Mr. [illegible] for the prosecution, declared there was no doubt that a conspiracy had existed in America for the purpose of destroying public buildings in England. The latter invoked to that end was dynamite. Some of the men in trial had come from the United States [illegible] operations. They furthermore began to establish the dynamite manufactory at Birmingham, and Gallagher, Wilson and Norman visited the manufactory with the intention of [illegible] the explosives. Norman, on the 22nd March, went to Euston Square. [illegible] a room he stayed four days. On April 2nd went to Birmingham. His place was changed while he was there, and it was decided he should take a package of nitro-glycerine to Northampton Street. He and Gallagher hired a room from Norman. The latter telegraphed Gallagher 6th of April he would return to his room on Euston Square. There he met a man, who took the nitro-glycerine and left it in Northampton Street, where the police took the arrest. Wilson went to Birmingham with an empty portmanteau and returned with nitro-glycerine in it.

A TOUCH OF PARADOXOS.

It is alleged that Gallagher was really the inspiriter of the finds of the Secrets, [illegible] when arrested [illegible] English coins, stamped by a New York firm in the same way as the money taken from Norman was stamped. It is clear he was one of the conspirators. Gallagher brought the news of war from the United States, communicated to the subordinate conspirators, and sent a telegram to Whitehead on the 27th of March, promising to see him soon. Curtin on his arrival in London reported by letter to Gallagher. When the officers captured Curtin they found in him a diary in which were recorded the places he had visited since his arrival in England, Glasgow, Blackburn and Liverpool. Curtin also was one of the conspirators. Papers were found in Gallagher's baggage referring to Ansbergh, whom Gallagher was known to have visited. O'Connor went to the United States nine years ago, and the writers showed that he had established relations with

[illegible]

McClure and Dewey. He returned to England under the name of Dalton. His actions led to suspicion that he was not to be trusted at large and he was put under surveillance. On April 3rd he was observed taking observations of the House of Parliament.

Mr. Poland intimated that the charge against his men would be changed to that of conspiracy, as it was desired by the conspirators to effect their objects regardless of the loss of life, there was a question that only the Magistrate could decide, and that was whether they were not indictable for conspiracy to murder. It was possible at a future stage of proceedings a charge would be lodged against them under the Treason-Felony Act.

Mr. Gould said he watched the case for Gallagher. A list of papers were put in evidence, including a catalogue of a chemical firm at Birmingham, which was found at Norman's lodgings, and contained full directions for making dynamite. The proprietors of the hotel where Norman stopped having been confronted with Gallagher testified to the being one and the same person who, under the name of Fletcher, several times visited Norman. The daughter of the hotel keeper from whom Gallagher engaged rooms for Norman, positively identified him as Fletcher. The proprietor of the hotel at which Ansbergh stopped identified Gallagher as the man who visited Ansbergh.

Dr. Langley's Pills.—Nervous irritability—No part of the human machine requires more constant supervision than the nervous system—for upon it our health—and even life—depends. These Pills strengthen the nerves, and are the safest general purifiers of the blood. Nausea, headache, giddiness, wakefulness and mental apathy yield to them. They impart in a summary manner those distressing dyspeptic symptoms stomachic pains, fullness at the pit of the stomach, abdominal distension, and regulate alike impetuous appetites and confined bowels—the commonly accompanying signs of debilitated or diminished nerve tone. Holloway's Pills are particularly recommended to persons of sedentary and sedentary habits, who gradually fall into a nervous and irritable state, unless some such restorative be occasionally taken.

Chas. Shannon of Leadville, writes: For three years my wife was troubled with rheumatism, and could get no relief until about two years ago, she was then not able to walk, and the pain was then so excruciating that she could not sleep at night. Your agent was then on his regular trip and she asked him if could cure her. He told her Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil was sure cure. She tried it and judge of her astonishment when in a few days the pain was all allayed and the foot restored to its natural condition. It is also the best remedy for burns and bruises I ever used.

A TERRIBLE CRIME.

A Young Woman Dies after an Abortion had been Committed upon Her—Startling Details.

A young woman named John McIntyre died lying in Strathclyde, near, awaiting her trial for complicity in a fatal abortion said to have been committed upon Jessie Harver, whom he had married and married just before her death. Mr. Harver and Mrs. Harver were school teachers. On the morning of the 4th, the consent of the young woman's mother having been given, the couple left Strathclyde and the Grand Trunk for St. John's, where it was the intention of McIntyre to get married by the Rev. J. F. Bennett. On Thursday night they arrived at Bedford. Notwithstanding the secrecy of the young couple after the train, after midnight on Tuesday morning McIntyre went to Mr. H. S. Martin, of the Bedford House, and asked him to drive to St. Sebastian as quickly as possible and bring Mrs. Harver, as Jessie was dying. The then state of affairs indicating, where the unfortunate young woman was. Mr. Martin immediately drove off for Mrs. Harver, but it was morning before they arrived. They then began to look for the young woman, and one of the first places to which search was directed was Dr. Langley's office. Looking through the window the girl was seen lying on a sofa; the door was broken open. Langley revealed the fact out on the night previous Dr. Langley had called on Dr. Cassils, a highly respectable citizen, for his assistance in the case. On examining the poor creature he announced that nothing could possibly save her. On hearing this opinion Langley ran away, but McIntyre remained until after the woman's death. He was engineer hurrying along towards the States. The affair has caused great consternation, and as the bailiff took his prisoner to the district gaol several determined attempts were made to capture him with a view to lynching him. One man in the crowd actually carried a rope.

MAGISTRATE SUMMARY VERDICT.

The facts elicited at the inquest are slightly different from those published. It appears that at St. Sebastian the marriage was performed, and that the couple remained there until the next day. The operation or miscarriage for the determined upon themselves to decide definitely on this point, took place on Thursday night, the result being death. On Friday and Saturday the girl continued to improve, so much so that it is stated that in the evening she went out for a short walk. This was a fatal experiment, for she got her feet wet, and next day was seriously ill. Inflammation set in and the girl became so ill that on the evening of the 10th, Dr. Langley called in Dr. Cassils to see his patient. Dr. Cassils pronounced the patient to be dying and then left. Langley then gave the key of the office to McIntyre and left. At 4 a.m. the unfortunate woman died. Langley was driven over to St. Armand station, where he shaved off his heavy beard and took the train going north.

THE VERDICT.

The jury returned a verdict that the deceased, Jessie Harver, came to her death from inflammation caused by a miscarriage or abortion performed by Edmund Langley, jr., M.D., at his office, and that John McIntyre was an accessory to and before the death of the said Jessie Harver.

The remains of a child, found in a rock stove at Langley's office, were produced in Court. The reporter was told, however, that these remains were those of another child.

Dr. Langley is about 40 years of age, of fair complexion, and slightly lame. He was born at Waterloo, and his father was a prominent railroad man there. He has been a doctor for 13 years, and is a graduate of McGill University. He practised in different parts of Canada and in the States. Seven years ago he was in trouble on a similar account in Potsdam, but managed to extricate himself. His general reputation seems to have been that of an abortionist. He is a married man, but has been separated from his family for some years. He has two brothers, one a leading clergyman and the other engaged in Montreal.

John McIntyre is about 28 years of age, and at the death of his father came into some $8,000. He had been keeping company with Miss Harver for two years, and would have been married last year had it not been for his father's death.
