CITY AND VICINITY.

Prospects.—Winds shifting to north east and east, fair to cloudy, slightly cooler weather.

OUT A FEW DAYS.—Black straw hats 10 cents each, sell trifling 10 cents per dozen, and all other goods equally as cheap at S. Burgess & Son.

Go to Gall, Fleischman & Co's free baking school and see the beautiful bread, biscuits and rolls made from the Golden Crown Flour. James Crawford, Agent, Kingston.

The ladies of St. Paul's Church are arranging to have a sale of useful and fancy work in connection with their annual strawberry festival about the latter part of June.

THIEVES IN LONDON.—Sheriff's officer, Benjamin Young and Detective Fair, of London, came down last night, and will return this afternoon with convicts Howard and White, who will testify against Montgomery in the Clarke burglary case.

ATHLETIC EXHIBITION.—On Friday evening the concert and athletic exhibition given by Sergt Major Morgans, the members of B. Battery and City Gymnastic Club will be repeated, by request, in the Opera House. The attendance promises to be larger than it was last week.

PECULIAR ENTERTAINMENT.—To-night the "peculiar entertainment" will occur in the City Hall, and we shall be much mistaken in our calculations if it is not largely attended by our citizens. Many will want to see the child with the transparent head, the wonder of the medical profession as well as the general public.

RAILWAY ROUND HOUSE.—The K. & P. RR. round house will soon be ready for occupation. Ferguson Bros., of Napanee, are now fitting the roof. The building is 88 feet front, 135 feet the half circle. It is 62 feet deep and contains six stalls. It is frame and was built by R. S. Mowat, one of Kingston's contractors. A turntable is now being placed in front of the round house.

WILL NOT OPPOSE REMOVAL.—The congregation of the Brock Street Presbyterian Church had a session last evening, and Messrs. John Robertson and W. Coverdale will look after their interests at the Presbytery. No obstacle will be placed in the way of Rev. Mr. Wilson's removal. New blood, infused into the Church here, may make an improvement and get it out of the old ruts.

LOOKING FOR HIS SISTER.—Peter Power, of the Glorieta House, Glorieta, New Mexico, writes to Mayor Livingston asking if anything is known of the whereabouts of his sister from whom he was separated in this city. He says that both of them were placed some twenty years ago with the Sisters of Charity. He wandered off to Mexico and has since known nothing regarding his sister. Her name is Maggie Power.

MILITARY REVIEW.

The statement having gone abroad that Kingston was to have the military review on the 24th of May, we telegraphed as follows to Hon. G. A. Kirkpatrick, M.P.:

"Is there any truth in the statement that Kingston may get the military review?"

The answer came:

"The only answer I can get from the department is 'Nothing known yet.'"

DOING A GOOD WORK.

Defective Fair, of London, stated to the police authorities to-day that the Salvation Army have done a good work in London. This the police records can show. There is far less drunkenness and fewer quarrels now than formerly. Husbands have reformed and are living truly Christian lives. The police of London give the army all possible protection and encouragement in their good work. The Chief of Police here speaks highly of what Captain Abbie's corps has accomplished. Men who have been regular frequenters at the court do not now darken its door, and some of the worst characters the city has had lead prayer services in the foundries. The Army can count upon all the police protection it requires.

INSPECTION OF BOATS.

Capt. McIlhenny, of the Marine Department, Ottawa, reports that he has inspected the steamers "Maud" "Pierrepont" and "Hero," and steamhulge "Reliance," and finds them all in good condition. He confined his attention to the hulls and the life saving equipments in which respect the Government will insist upon the requirements of the Act passed by the Commons in March last and out in force in September, being fully met. The "Maud" will carry, in addition to her present stock, 100 circular life preservers and 250 floats; the "Pierrepont," 100 circulars and 250 floats. The "Hero's" equipment has not yet been decided upon, but it will be made satisfactory to the Inspector. McIlhenny is an old salt, who got his first commission in 1861, and after long service, and while yet in the prime of life, was appointed officer of the Marine Department. This was two years ago. He and Inspector Harty are unequaled in many respects, and the genial Irishman and he agree well.

There is a Highland regiment in Halifax County. Sutherland tartan will be used for trousers, red tunics and a Glengarry bonnet, which will be a very attractive uniform. Pipers have also been engaged.

The Salvationists wanted to buy the Opera House but the owner would not sell as the "Mighty Dollar" Company appear here next Tuesday. The Salvationists have not enough money to buy that property but they may have by and bye.

ODESSA GLEANINGS.

Reliable reports state the principal roads in first class condition.

The freshet of water is steadily abating. No very serious damage, so as yet reported.

There are some 30,000 pieces of logs lying in the mill yard of Messrs. Mabee & Derbyshire.

Mr. Spooner has been engaged as cheese maker, for the Odessa Factory for the ensuing season.

Under the auspices of the Y. P. L. Society, a sugar social will be held in Town Hall, on Friday evening next.

A little child belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bennett, while playing on Main Street, was seriously hurt, by a passing buggy, the hub striking her on the forehead.

The M. E. Conference of the Niagara District will be held in Brantford this week. Rev Mr. Hudgins, a member of the "Alma College" board, leaves to-morrow to attend the meeting. Rev. J. J. Leach, C. M., takes charge of Mr. Hudgins' special services in his absence.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Major Moore, having recovered his health, was to leave for his home in Brooklyn to-day.

Mr. Atkins will study in a Brooklyn seminary, and then, if the Portsmouth corps want him he will return to them.

Lt. Ryerson, the new officer of the Salvation Army, did not arrive yesterday as announced. She will be along to-day or to-morrow.

F. W. Power, late book keeper for D. McEwen & Son, left yesterday for Detroit where he has secured a lucrative position with a big firm.

Michael Doran and William Muckher, after an enjoyable tour through Europe, have returned to the city. They look as though their trip had agreed with them.

Besides Sir Charles Tupper, it is expected that Mr. Costigan will retire from the Cabinet at the end of the present session, to be succeeded by Mr. Daily, of Nova Scotia.

VERONA NOTES.

Navigation has opened here.

The water in this vicinity is very high.

Our villagers are going into building operations on a large scale.

The bridges south and west have been swept away making the roads impassable.

The steam yacht Don Juan made her first trip to Napanee lake on Friday last. The captain reports the river free of ice but the lakes frozen tight.

S. Bradshaw, merchant, is enlarging his store while several other parties purpose making extensive alterations. We would remind them that a free use of paint improves the appearance of a building very much.

BROCKVILLE'S OPINION.

The rumor is afloat, says the Times, that the Kingston and Pembroke Railway will run an independent line from Renfrew to Pembroke and then secure a connection with the vast lumber and timber trade which centres at the latter place. Kingston was long regarded as a sleepy hollow, but it is evident that her citizens have displayed push and enterprise which have secured a very extensive and lucrative trade with the north in timber and iron. Brockville can well afford to take a leaf from the Kingston book and carefully study the result which follow the building of a railway to the mining section of the Laurentian shield.

THE KINGSTON PAPERS.

ARE THEY IMMORAL?—BISHOP CLEARY SAYS THEY ARE; THE PROTESTANT CLERGY SAY THEY ARE NOT.

Opinions that are Interesting—Doing Justice to the Journalists—Papers that are Newsy and yet not Offensive—One Course Unfettered.

On Monday evening, and again last evening, in addressing those interested in the formation of religious societies in connection with St. Mary's Cathedral, Bishop Cleary reflected severely upon the Kingston papers. Because they gave the news of the day, unless varying to properly fill their mission, he stated freely what those, making special reference to the publication of criminal events. He spoke as the spiritual guardian of the people, of the young in particular, whose minds he sought to keep as pure as possible. He hoped for some improvement to the moral tone of the papers, otherwise it would be necessary for him to counsel his people to withdraw their subscriptions and support. Our course under the circumstances was quite plain. We unhesitatingly decided to feel the public pulse and ascertain by candid enquiry what the people thought of our service. To the propagators of religion, the professors of morality, we propounded the following questions:

"Have the papers, as a rule rather than an exception, contained immoral reports?"

"How do they compare with other secular papers?"

"What has been their service to a religious sense?"

"What comparison do they bear to the English papers on this point?"

With one exception the endorsements of the local press have been stronger than we expected. They do justice to those who, after severe training and long experience, desire to give the people a good paper as free as possible from objectionable features. An unworthy thought now and then will creep into the columns of the best regulated public journal, but the wonder is that in the multiplicity of duties which devolve upon the later day editor his defects are not more glaring. One week in the journalistic chair will cure any one of the idea that the management of a paper is an easy thing, and that there is no difficulty in catering to the tastes of all classes in the community.

ON THE SIDE OF MORALITY.

Rev. A. Spencer said often details of crime were published that might better be suppressed. This had reference to all papers. He saw little difference between the Kingston papers and those of other places in this respect. I can bear testimony to the fact, said he, that the Kingston papers have always given great prominence to religious events. The papers take great pains in their production of reports of religious meetings. This might be called a peculiar feature of them. I must say they seem always to be on the side of religion and morality.

ABOVE THE AVERAGE.

Rev. J. M. Hagar says more prominence has been given in the papers to Roman Catholic matters than to those of any other denomination in the city. This prominence has been given to an almost offensive degree. Compared with the Toronto and Montreal papers I consider the Wats above the average in moral tone. In a religious sense I have found your paper disposed to give prominence to any thing that has been for the well being of the churches. So far as the disgusting details of crimes are concerned the Wats has given less publicity to them than the Canadian press generally.

CAPT. ABBIE COMPLIMENTS A DIVINE.

I feel the greatest pleasure in saying to you that in all my experience in our Christian work no section of the secular press has been more helpful in the spread of morality than your paper. I trust, as I believe, the good citizens of Kingston will appreciate your religious endeavours to keep your paper down to wholesome and truth by giving a large circulation.

FROM OF THE PAPERS.

Rev. Mr Harris—I have been a constant reader of the British Wats since I came to Kingston, and I beg to say that a better conducted paper I have not met with, and I receive a great many papers both from the United States and England. How the Wats can be charged with publishing immoral literature I fail to understand. I know of no paper more ready to give prominence to religious literature which I am sure many papers would refuse. I have never heard the Wats or the News called "immoral sheets," but have heard them highly praised for their moral tone. I am proud of the Kingston papers and with pleasure give my testimony in their favour.

[In conversation with Rev. Mr. Harris he said that in England the space given to reports of divorce and seduction cases is much greater, in proportion to reading room, than in Canada.]

NO PANDERING TO IMMORALITY.

Rev. F. W. Kirkpatrick—I feel in the Kingston journals none of the pandering to immoral tastes peculiar to the New York and other American papers. Accounts in telegrams are somewhat plainer than they should be, but there is nothing in the editorial and local utterances of the Kingston papers, showing a desire to encourage immorality, but, on the contrary, a desire to suppress it. The universal feeling has been that the Kingston papers are too friendly to the Roman Catholic Church, as exhibited in the fulness with which they chronicle its ceremonies. The local papers compare very favorably with any in Canada. Religious news is found in larger proportion in them than in those of other cities. I have never been refused the publication of religious news by the proprietors.

[We do not write the telegrams, and cannot in many cases tell by whom they are prepared, but we often revise and correct them and destroy in the course of the year hundreds of despatches to which other papers give prominence. Nearly every telegraphic report of crime recently published by us has undergone this process of cooling.]

A STRONG ENDORSEMENT.

Rev. Mr. McKay—I do not think the papers encourage immorality. Of course some things appear in them which the editor himself may not like, but they cannot be well excluded. Reasonable care is exercised, in my opinion, in the publication of news. As to the service the press of Kingston has rendered the cause of Christ I can speak with special emphasis. But a few weeks ago I had occasion to thank both papers, publicly, for the help they gave me and others interested in evangelistic work. And quite recently I expressed gratification for what they did in connection with the Salvation Army movement. How do the Kingston papers compare with those of the old country? Most favorably, in my opinion. More prominence is given in them to news pertaining to religious, benevolent and philanthropic events than in the journals of England and Scotland. In Kingston notice is taken of what in the cities of the old world would be entirely ignored.

ANOTHER KIND WORD.

The Rev. Mr. McCaig said—I have ceased to look for perfection in press or pulpit, but I believe that in point of morality the press of this city compares favorably with that of most other cities in the land. Its avowed mission is to reflect public opinion, and in so doing it can hardly be expected to reflect at all times the purest morality. It certainly cannot fairly be charged with not giving sufficient prominence to church movements, and especially to religious seasons. But to charge our local newspapers with immoralities that unfit them to be read in Christian families sounds to me very much like a railing accusation.

LEAST SAID THE BETTER.

Rev. Dr. Jackson thought the Kingston papers, with regard to morality, compared favorably with those of other places. Anything they might have contained that would declare them immoral had escaped his notice. However he thought the least said about the matter the better.

BISHOP CLEARY'S POSITION EXPOUNDED.

The Rev. A. Wilson thought that His Lordship Bishop Cleary deserved credit for the manner in which he had spoken. He was in sympathy with His Lordship in many of his statements, and objected to the gathering together from all quarters of the globe of cases of crime that did not in the least concern the people here, and publishing them in detail. There are certain cases of crime that occur in this part of the country the particulars of which it is the duty of the press to publish. But even in these cases due caution should be taken as to the details. The tendency of republishing accounts of certain crimes that transpired among people who were not known or heard of here before is unusual. Of course Mr Wilson did not refer to the Kingston papers in particular. He considered that in general one paper was as much to blame as another. He also alluded to the pictures being posted on the walls throughout the city and said that they had an immoral tendency also.

A WELL SATISFIED CHRISTIAN.

Rev Dr Wilson stated that he heard of the remarks of Bishop Cleary with much pain. He thought the editors of the Kingston papers had done, and are doing, their best to disseminate moral literature in the way of sermons and reports of religious meetings, and at the same time to exclude everything of an immoral nature, for which conduct they deserve the greatest credit. He did not think the Kingston journals truckled to the morbid appetite of a certain class of people for immoral literature. As far as he was personally concerned he desired to thank both papers for the courtesy and kindness they had shown him, and for the publication of services in connection with the Cathedral. Dr Wilson, however, did not approve of certain crimes being published, as they had a bad effect, but, in this respect, the local press occupied a much higher moral standard than the press of the United States. He was highly satisfied with the manner in which the Kingston papers were conducted.

DR. ELLIOTT SPEAKS.

Dr. Elliott thought that the journal he read was exceedingly kind and attentive to the Catholic Church and its clergy, and said that everything done by them was pronounced honorable and good.

A CATHOLIC SPEAKS.

A prominent Roman Catholic gentleman stated that he read the papers carefully, and he failed to see a reference to the immoral subjects which are mentioned as the cause of His Lordship's remarks. Every evening when he got through reading the papers he handed them to his daughters, who also perused them. If he thought the papers were immoral he would not allow them to get into the hands of his family. These statements were endorsed by two other gentlemen.

REV. W. D. CAREY'S REPLY.

The publishing of matter which I should judge to be of an immoral tendency is, I think, the exception rather than the rule with the Kingston press. Amid the large amount of enterprise which in this age attaches to the newspaper business, it is, I am convinced, rather difficult for the editor to be always on his guard as to what should and what should not appear in the columns of a respectable newspaper. Frequently, however, much that is pernicious, especially to the youthful reader, finds its way into print on account, no doubt, of the reporter's desire to cater to the popular tastes. Our city papers compare, I think, more than favorably with their contemporaries in places similarly situated to Kingston. I believe that the service of the secular press of this country to the cause of religion has been, on the whole, for good. It was with very great pleasure that some time ago I publicly, in my own church, acknowledged the great service the leading papers in Toronto did the cause of religion by abstaining from any notice of a leading atheistic lecturer who was imported into this country to subvert our holy religion and consequently to subvert our morality. I hoped at the time that other papers would have followed their excellent example, and that they would have refrained from giving us an editying and the vapoury trash which the silliest poets over the grave of his friend. I think that our Canadian papers, while they far excel the English press in enterprise, are fortunately considerably behind them in the moral tone of the matter which they frequently give to the public. While I have thus endeavoured, at the request of the publisher to give what I believe to be an honest answer to his questions, I must also express my thanks for the kind notices which our city papers have always given my church and congregational matters.

ENTERTAINMENT AT THE ASYLUM.

The closing concert of the season was given at the Asylum last night, and proved the best from a musical stand point. The following programme was performed:

Overture—Violin, clarionet, and piano, Harris Bros. and Miss Agnew.
Reading—Miss Godwin.
Song—Miss Bateson.
Reading—Mr. Godwin.
Instrumental Quartette—Harris Brothers.
Duologue—Miss Bateson and Mr. Raymond.
Song—Mr. Smith.
Duologue—Miss Bateson and Mr. Raymond.
Selection from Trovatore—Two violins and piano, Miss Agnew and Harris Bros.
Song—Miss McCartney.
Violin Solo—Mr. A. Harris.
Recitation—Mr. Raymond.

The vocal selections were pleasingly rendered, and the dialogues and readings being of the mirth provoking order were well received by the patronts.

Interest was centered in the centre musical part of programme and to say that this was the most artistic and classical performance ever given at Rockwood is bestowing but a just meed of praise upon its excellence.

Of course the violin solos played by Mr. Arthur Harris were the gems of the evening, but the trios were almost as successful and it was difficult to say who deserved the most praise. Miss Agnew at the piano, L. Harris with the clarionet, A. Harris with the violin, all played so smoothly and in such exquisite harmony. It is to be hoped that Kingston audiences will ere long have an opportunity of rendering what genuine musical talent they have in their midst.

BELLEVILLE BURGLARS SENTENCED.

There is little doubt that Johnson and White, convicted of burglary in Belleville, were the men who tampered with the safe in the office of the car works. The combination of the safe in the axe factory at Belleville was broken in the same way as that of the Car Works Company. On Monday the prisoners were tried. At the close of the evidence Johnson addressed the jury on behalf of himself and his chum. He offered the excuse that they had been sleeping in a barn and were chased by two men. They eventually ran into the church and climbed the steeple. They were innocent of course. The jury were out but ten minutes and returned a verdict of "guilty." Johnson said "gentlemen, you are sending two innocent men to prison." His Lordship sentenced them to seven years each in the Penitentiary. For another burglary they received a similar sentence, the terms to run concurrently. The prisoners arrived here yesterday and were at once taken to prison.

The two prisoners were immediately recognized on their arrival at the penal institution. Their proper names are Jacob and Sanderson. Both are well known to Toronto officers. They had only been released from prison a few months. Jacob, feigning sickness, was discharged after having served two years. Sanderson served five years.
