FOR THE KIDNEYS, LIVER AND URINARY ORGANS

THE BEST BLOOD PURIFIER.

There is only one way by which any disease can be cured, and that is by removing the cause—whatever it may be. The great medical authorities of the day declare that nearly every disease is caused by deranged kidneys or liver. To remove these therefore is the only way by which health can be secured. Here is where WARNER'S SAFE CURE has achieved its great reputation. It acts directly upon the kidneys and liver and by purging them in a healthy condition driven disease and pain from the system. For all Kidney, Liver and Urinary troubles; for the distressing disorders of women, for Malaria, and physical troubles generally, this great remedy has no equal. Beware of impostors, imitations and counterfeits said to be just as good.

THE GIVER AND THE TAKER.

The following is an attempt to furnish a literal translation of a poem by the Hindoo writer Tiruvalova, who lived, it is supposed, in the third century of our era. He was remarkable for his hatred of idolatry and caste, and for his almost Christian conception of God and man.

Who gives what others may not see,
Not counts on favour, fame, or praise
Shall find his smallest gift outweighs
The burden of the mighty sea.

Who gives to whom hath naught been given
His gift as seed, though small indeed,
As in the grass blade's white-down seed,
Is large as earth and lost as heaven.

Forget thou not, O man! to whom
A gift shall fail, while yet on earth,
Yea, even to thy seven-fold birth
Revive it in the lives to come!

Who broading keeps a wrong in thought,
Sins much, but greater sin is his
Who, bad and clothed with kindness, seeks Shall count the holy sins as naught.

For he who breaks all laws may still
In Siva's mercy be forgiven
But none can save on earth or heaven
The wretch who answers good with ill!

THE MARRIED BACHELOR.

CHAPTER III.

A PLEASANT MEETING.

It was quite dusk of an autumn evening before the judge arrived. The cavalcade was much too dignified to proceed at a rapid rate. At last the mounted yeomen made their appearance, the javelin men drew up, the chariot stopped, the crowd surged on, the policemen formed a lane, and Mr. Justice Brampford descended from the coach to open the commission. The court was full, although there was really very little to be done. It was known, however, that a very lively murder case was to be tried, and as soon as the proceedings were over, the box population set off to the castle, in the firm belief that the man was to be hung as soon as the judge had arrived. The proceedings themselves were very briefly described. When the judge entered a profound hall succeeded the noisy clamour of very many voices. A few candles were lighted, and served to make visible the immense assemblage of people. Then the commission was read, commencing the names of the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Brampford and several of Her Majesty's counsel. When the name of the judge present was pronounced, that learned and honourable gentleman, according to form, for the first time took off his hat. Then the commission was declared open, and the court was adjourned to the following Monday morning.

It was growing dark also in the drawing-room over the saddler's shop. The maid brought in wax candles—for when a tradesman lets his drawing-room, he is anxious to impress the public with the idea that the room and its belongings are as gorgeous as any house with its railings and private door. The maid was a black-eyed soubrette—as a waiting maid ought to be—but there presently entered another black-eyed soubrette, on whom the attention of our young counsel, learned in the law, was quickly fixed. She was a girl about the middle height, in age 3 and 20, but who might easily pass for two years younger. The young barrister was sufficiently surprised, when in the sudden light, her form was flashed back from the opposite mirror. He noticed at once the grace of her movements, the regularity of her features, the prettiness of her rich coal black hair, and the due shing brilliancy of her eyes. He was at that impulsive age when men cannot deal sentimentally and minutely with the points of a pretty woman. They are prone to admire, and slow to criticise and compare. They do simple and generous justice to every charm; but, they have not the coolness and nerve to analyse defects. Now Arabella Crawfurd had fine teeth, and we live in an age when fine teeth are becoming more and more a most rare and very precious possession. In any physical examination, it is best always to begin with the teeth. But the white, dazzling teeth, were in this case open to the criticism that they were too large. The throat was beautifully rounded, but the jaw was also too large, and, so to speak, heavily set. The eyes were very bright, and there was something that was too acute, and also uncertain in their brightness. The hair was plentiful enough, but it crept a little too low over the forehead, and showed too large a development of brain behind the ear. Altogether she gave you the idea of symmetry, strength, and figure. There is a popular idea that every human being is like some animal. Very many men are like dogs, and many women like cats, and such other kind, appropriately enough, a cat-and-dog life. Then it is also true that many men are like hawks, and many women like doves. But Arabella Waterbury, strength, and form, gave you more the notion of something far-fetched and oriental, and you rather thought of a tigress, or something of that kind. She was the most Italian-looking Englishwoman you had ever seen, and I may now say what she did not herself know this present evening, that she had Italian blood in her, her grandmother being an Italian.

She came forward with a graceful curtsey and with much self possession to the young barrister.

"Mr. and Mrs. Gibson are away, sir, hearing the Commission open at the assizes. I hope Mary has made you quite comfortable."

"Very comfortable, indeed, said Waldegrave, and I am very much obliged to you." He was one of those foolish young men who are very fond of taking every opportunity of talking with a pretty girl, and he had the tact to see that this particular pretty girl was quite open to a little conversation, especially as Mr. and Mrs. Gibson were away at the assizes.

"You are Miss Gibson, I suppose?" said Waldegrave.

"No, sir, my name is not Gibson. Mrs. Gibson is my mamma, but Mr. Gibson is not my father. My name is Miss Crawfurd."

"Excuse me, Miss Crawfurd, but I am a lawyer and must be accurate in the use of terms. You were certainly not christened Miss Crawfurd. Miss is not a Christian name, and it is to be presumed that you have a christian name."

"My name is Arabella, sir."

"A very pretty name," said the barrister, in a musing, or sort of way. "And give me the leave to say that it just suits a very pretty girl."

Arabella blushed—a thing which had too much of the slight about it, but she put it down to that barrister's treacherous manner to which the profession is particularly addicted.

"And so many pretty places too in Clyston, added the barrister. Your cathedral, your river and your vale are famous all over the world, not to mention the young ladies, who are the most famous of all."

"I suppose you know Clyston very well, sir?"

"It's very odd, Miss Crawfurd, but I really don't, though my father lives in the next county, and is a member of parliament there. Miss Crawfurd knew him, for with a woman's eyes she had found out all about my ledger. She thought it a grand thing to be a member of Parliament, and that a member's son must also be a grand personage. But I have only been there twice before, and the last time I was obliged to miss Clyston, and the time before I was too busy to look at anything. But I want to look at the place now, so far as my engagements permit." The said engagements, it may be parenthetically remarked, if boards are meant thereby, were absolutely no existence at this present time, except in the hopeful imagination of the young barrister.

"It will be a great day at the Cathedral to-morrow, said Arabella. "The Judges are to be there, and Mr. Burton is to preach." Mr. Burton was a celebrated ecclesiastic attached to the Cathedral, and was expected to be very pathetic in the expectation that the man in gaol for murder was sure to be hung for murder. "Have you ever been over the Cathedral, Mr. Waldegrave."

Mr. Waldegrave had never been over the Cathedral.

"Never seen the side chapels, had the tombs, and the Lady window, and the cloisters?"

No, he had never seen them.

"Then I'll tell you what I'll do for you, if you like, sir. The cathedral is not shown to visitors on the Sunday but Lettice, the verger's daughter, and I are great friends, and I know if I ask her, that she will let you see everything, and some things which are not often shown to visitors."

"But surely you will come yourself, Miss Crawfurd?"

"O yes, I will come myself. I am never tired of seeing the cathedral."

So some sort of arrangement was made that the cathedral was to be inspected after the afternoon service.

It is sometimes supposed that in country towns the military have it all their own way. I by no means deny the existence of a moral solitaire. But there are many cases in which the black coat cut out and outbeats the red coat. It is of course preeminently so at a Calcutta ball. In an inland town the young barrister is decidedly a popular personage. There is something irresistible in the contrast between the wig and the frock reality continuance beneath it of the ingenuous youth who seeks to atone for the lack of wisdom by the abundance of hermbaze. But in the course of time the wig and the face will work themselves into exact harmony, and the countenance become as the parchment so often and spread before it.

Oh, What a Cough!

Will you heed the warning? The signal warnings of the sure approach of that most terrible disease, consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cts. to run the risk and do nothing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will cure your cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a million bottles were sold the past year. It relieves croup and whooping cough at once. Mothers do not be without it. For lame back, side or chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. J. G. King, wholesale and retail agent.

Dyspepsia & Liver Complaint.

Is it not worth the small price of 75 cents to free yourself of every symptom of these distressing complaints? If you think so call at our store and get a bottle of Shiloh's Vitalizer. Every bottle has a positive guarantee on it. Use accordingly and if it does you no good it will cost you nothing. J. G. King, wholesale and retail agent.

Crying Babies.

Babies cry because they suffer. Their little gums are inflamed, and their bodies are more or less feverish. If you will use around their necks one of Scanlan's Teething Powders you will see a wonderful change for the better. Their suffering is over, and their general health improved. Sold by druggists. W. J. Wilson, at "The Pharmacy," 180 Princess Street.

The Opinion of All

Who have used Polson's Nervoline, the great pain remedy, is that it is never failing in case of every description. Neuralgia, toothache, cramps, pain in the stomach, and kindred complaints are banished as if by magic. Rapid and certain in operation, pleasant to take. Nervoline stands at the very front rank of remedies of this class. A trial bottle may be purchased for 10 cents, a very small amount in any case, but the best expenditure you can make, of a sufferer from any kind of pain, is a 10 or 20 cent bottle of Nervoline at Polson's or King's Drug Stores.

WILLIAM DAVID

is now in business again keeping a boot shoe store in the place formerly occupied by Mr. Dennis, next to Robinson's carriage shop. Wm. David has on hand a large assortment of household goods. All he wants is the people to come in; he is sure to sell. He has a lot of new clothing; tweed suits for $6.75; navy blue and diagonal pants $1.95. 200 fine watch crystals at 10 cents each.

Mr. P. C. Winlow, Toronto, writes:—Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery is a valuable medicine to all who are troubled with indigestion. I tried a bottle of it after suffering for some ten years, and the results are certainly beyond my expectation. It assists digestion wonderfully. I found my food with no apparent effort, and am now entirely free from that sensation which every dyspeptic well knows, of oppressed fullness after each meal."

Fever Sores, Pain Killer taken internally, it relieves instantly the most acute pain. Used externally, it is the best Liniment in the world. Its effect is almost instantaneous, affording relief from the most intense pain. It soothes the bruised or inflamed part, and gives ease and rest to the sufferer. It is economical, the poorest friend, and every one should have it with them, to where they can put their hands on it in the dark if need be.

Mr. C. P. Farrell, Crown Land Agent, Sault Ste. Marie, writes: "Two or three of my friends and myself were recommended to try Nisbitt & Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, in preference to Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites. We prefer your Emulsion, and think it better for the system than the Syrup," &c.

E. M. Marks, West Jeddore, N.S., writes: "I wish to inform you of the wonderful qualities of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I had a horse at home that he could scarcely walk; the trouble was in the knee, and yet or three applications completely cured him.

Galloway's City Hat Store.

Have you seen the new hat,
They call it "Dunlap's Patent,"
It's a square crown, medium height
With front and back brims slightly bent.
It's the latest thing just think of that
And a very, very nobby hat!
Did you want to see it? Just you say
Then kindly call on GALLOWAY.
