FARTON'S ATTRACTIONS.

Can heaven afford us much that's better
Than here on earth we use?
Are flowers, in her gardens more
Than those around us?

Are her jewels of greater brightness
Than earthly rubies do hold?
And her diamonds of purest whiteness
Are earthly ones more fair?

Are those spirits of greater beauty
Than each fair genius earth's and?
Can there be aught upon earth's sweetness
Than the souls of souls above?

Can there be more music than we hear
Or voices tuned to love?
Can there be angels upon earth's sweetness
Than the souls of souls above?

Can there be entertainment more delighted
With rich and gaudy bedecks,
Where all sweet graces are united
Like drops in silver streams?

No, I know can show on delight that's purer

Hallowed things cannot be fairer

HELPING HER OUT.

A Touch of Realism Not Down in the Bill in a Texas Theatre Cowboy's Act.

(Denver Republican.)

Minnie Maddern, who made her initial appearance in the city on April 3rd, was the income of quite a thrilling adventure during her Texas tour. It was in an interior town, where the feature cowboy "disappeared even as a green bay tree," and has an occasional pow-wow when it strikes his erratic fancy, that Miss Maddern held forth as Chip in "Fogg's Ferry." The play progressed without special interest not down on the programme as being in the regular order of events, until the steamboat scene, in the third act, when Chip is discovered in an old mill on the banks of a river. She had overheard the villains plot to blow up the steamer on which her benefactor is bearing the papers to a place of safety, by placing a torpedo in the channel directly in the way of the coming vessel. Chip is armed with a pistol, and nerving herself, aims at the infernal machine, hoping by to explode it. The whistle of the approaching steamer betokens its rapid coming, and soon the sound of escaping steam and the splash of the revolving wheels break on the listening ear. Nearer and nearer the ominous sounds rings out upon the night, and soon the bow of the boat greets the expectant gaze of the audience. Chip nerves herself for the shot, but alas! on this particular occasion the cartridge failed to explode. A moment more and all would be lost, for there, plain to be seen, bobbing up on the turbid waters, was the torpedo. Miss Maddern, though a little surprised at the misfire of her weapon, was cocking it for another shot, when suddenly a cowboy jumped to his feet in the audience, and flourishing a navy six, shouted: "Stand a little to one side, gall, and I'll bust it for you. Blame my eyes but those chaps ain't going to dish up that boat that way." The ominous click of a 44 calibre was distinctly heard, and as he pounded his pistol, Miss Maddern, with great presence of mind, without moving from her position, for the second time pulled the trigger fortunately with better success.

A WELL DIRECTED SHOT

THE TORPEDO FULLY EXPLODED

and the steamer glided on majestically in safety. The audience felt relieved, and nobody more so than Miss Maddern, who did not care to be a party to a cowboy's marksmanship shot. As Miss Maddern was leaving the theatre that evening she was accosted at the stage door by the identical cowboy, who, sans ceremonies, said, "Say, little gal, little more'n there'd been the devil to pay, an all owin to that little popgun of your'n. You can't depend on 'em. You want something that when you get the drop on a fellow you know you've got him right there. I was going to help you out this evening without asking you and blow the blamed thing up myself, only you was right in the road and I couldn't draw a bead on it. Don't never let it happen again, and I'm going to lend you so you'll be in proper shape." Suiting the action to the word he produced a navy colt and hastifully handed it to her with the remark: "It's your'n, little gal, and it's a dairy. I hate to part with it, but what's a fellow to do when he's left by that as I am. Maybe I'll get the laugh for this, but none of 'em's game enough to show their teeth to me, you bet." Good-bye." He strode away, leaving the little lady, Colt in hand.

BLACK CLOUD.

The announcement made a few days ago that the famous trotting stallion, Black Cloud, who made a brilliant performance upon the turf last season, had been sold by the estate of the late Andrew Cutter, of Parma, Mich., to M. V. Wager, mayor of Marshall, Mich., has been verified. Black Cloud is perhaps the handsomest horse in a race that ever trotted upon the American turf. Large, finely proportioned, with a color "as black as black can be," with not a mark upon him, save a small, bright star in the forehead. His hair is as fine as silk, and as soft as velvet, his mane and tail are long and heavy, his tail almost touching the ground. When trotting at full speed he is a beautiful sight, with his heavy mane flying, his long, even, unerring stride, and strong, graceful action and perfect movement. The purchaser is not only a lover of good horses, but is also a business man of great energy and enterprise. He is a large manufacturer, and business manager of the Voltaic Belt Co., of Marshall, Mich., Electro-Voltaic Belts and other Electric Appliances for the cure of various diseases, which achieved, under persistent advertising and excellent management, an enormous sale, not only throughout the United States, but are shipped to every country. Mayor Wagner has placed Black Cloud in the hands of that noted driver, Peter V. Johnson, of Chicago, for the season.

Mr. C. E. Biggles, Bonaventure, writes: "A customer who tried a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery says it is the best thing he ever used, to quote his own words, 'it just seemed to touch the spot affected.' About a year ago he had an attack of bilious fever, and was afraid he was in for another, when I recommended this valuable medicine with such happy results.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

A Gananoque Event of Great Interest Marriage in Early Days Reminiscences.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Rogers, of Gananoque, celebrated the 50th anniversary of their wedding on Wednesday evening last. A heavy ebony cane with massive gold head, suitably inscribed, was presented to Mr Rogers, and a solid gold set of jewellery to Mrs. Rogers by their children. Mr Rogers told of the changes he had witnessed in Gananoque. He came to the village a lad in 1832, when it was then almost a wilderness. In 1837 he was married to Miss Nancy Nelson. Marriage in those days was not a matter of haste. It took both time and trouble. Having got the consent of his intended bride Mr. Rogers travelled to Brockville and arranged to be called in Church for three successive Sundays, and also engage a minister to come up and perform the ceremony. It was arranged that Mrs. Rogers' sister and the late Jos. Elliott should be married by Mr. Smart, and the two couples were duly united at a farm house a mile and a half below the village on the evening of May 23rd, 1833.

After the ceremony Mr and Mrs. Rogers were escorted to their own home, where they have lived uninterruptedly ever since. The original house was 18 x 24 feet in size. Later years necessitated improvements and expansion of premises, so the old house has been added to at both ends and in rear. The original house is now the parlor, and on Wednesday evening the guests assembled in the same room where the friends of fifty years ago took leave of the bridal pair. The same posts project from the walls where the "bents" are located, and the same floor remains in good condition. But all else is changed: new and larger windows have been put in, the front door has been made into a window, the old fireplace, with its crane and pot hooks has been removed, and also the crooked stairway that twined up at the chimney side. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers attachment for the "old house," has been growing stronger and stronger during half a century. They cling to its shadow, when otherwise their own comfort and business convenience would have led them to remove years ago. Mr. Rogers has been a successful man in everthing he undertook. He never paid a cent of rent in his life, always owning the property he occupied.—Reporter.

The Opinion of All

Who have tried Polson's Nervoline, the great pain remedy, is that it is never failing in pain of every description. Neuralgia, toothache, cramps, pain in the stomach, and kindred complaints are banished as if by magic. Rapid and certain in operation, pleasant to take. Nervoline stands at the very front rank of remedies of this class. A trial bottle may be purchased for 10 cents, a very small amount in any case; but the best expenditure you can make, if a sufferer from any kind of pain, is a 10 or 20 cent bottle of Nervoline at Polson's or King's Drug Stores.

Every Person to be a Real Success.

A Roar or Bodily Torments are engendered by chronic indigestion. These, however, as well as their cause, disappear when the highly accredited invigorant and alterative, Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, is the agency employed for their removal. A regular habit of body, and a free secretion and flow of bile, invariably result from its persistent use. It cleanses the system from all irregularities and restores the weak and broken down constitution to health and strength.

A MASTER'S COURTING.

Can He Undertake it During School Hours? – Decision in the Affirmative – Back Pay.

A New York despatch says: Mr. Joseph G. Cleveland was hired last fall to be principal of the district school at Tuckahoe, Westchester County. In the latter part of October he was turned out because the trustees said he devoted more time to the "sparking" of a young lady teacher in an adjoining room than to his own school duties. It was represented that he had been seen hugging the girl while classes were being formed, and generally a good deal of "spooning" was going on. Mr. Cleveland did not relish the idea of being dismissed upon such a charge, and demanded a hearing and a trial. He wanted to give somebody an opportunity to testify to a few remarks made about him, but the trustees treated his application with lofty contempt, and a great many things that had been said did not go upon the record. But Mr. Cleveland was not the kind of a man to be sat down upon by a rustic School Board. He carried his grievances to the State Superintendent at Albany, Mr. Neil Gilmour, and after a patient hearing that officer decided that "sparking a schoolma'am" was insufficient ground for dismissal, and ordered the trustees to reinstate him and pay him all his back salary besides. The trustees thought they could run their school without any interference from Mr. Gilmour, and proceeded to act in accordance with that principle. Mr. Cleveland was not reinstated, neither was his back salary paid. The Board knew what it was about. It could not be coerced. When all other means had failed Mr. Cleveland applied to the Supreme Court for relief, and yesterday at White Plains, upon a motion of William B. Davidson, Justice Dykman granted a mandamus ordering the School Board to reinstate Mr. Cleveland and pay him $720 back salary. The papers were served yesterday.
