Quite our Own Town.

FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 8, 1883.

TO-NIGHT'S DUTY.

In view of the meeting to-night in the Council Chamber it is well to understand the present position of the question of medical education for women. Three years ago the Royal College decided to begin a separate summer course for three or four young women who were anxious to study medicine without being obliged to expatriate themselves during their four years' course of study. The number of female students not increasing rapidly, and the Faculty finding the burden of two sessions in each year most oppressive, the experiment of co-education was tried. The dislike of the young men to this ended in open rebellion, and it is well known that the dislike of the women was even greater, but unlike the men they had no choice. Last winter's trouble ended in a compromise, one of the terms of which was that no more female students need apply to the Royal College. The ladies, by this time eight in number, who had commenced would be allowed to finish; but no others would be permitted to register. Naturally enough the eight students now enrolled are not satisfied with such an arrangement. Friends who at their instance and their advice have already commenced their preparatory studies are to be shut out; and the seniors very properly say, "If our friends are obliged to go elsewhere, we shall go with them." The only solution is to let them all go or to start a separate institution. The former alternative might not be objectionable if there was any prospect of a strong College with sufficient resources at its back being started elsewhere in Canada. But we see no such prospect, and time presses. Besides, it would be rather unfair that Kingston should have sowed simply that Toronto might reap. It would be a national reproach if all our female students had to go to the States, and it therefore appears that the only reasonable alternative is that the citizens of Kingston who are interested in the object should combine to add another to the number of the educational institutions of which we are justly proud. That this can be done, to night's meeting will show; and as everything depends on the spirit of the first meeting we trust that it shall have a ring clear enough to be heard all over Canada.

A WAR IMPENDING.

As things are now shaping there will be a war between China and France, and the wise men of our day and generation are speculating upon its probable consequences. It is interesting to note the position of matters, the relation in which the combative nations have stood towards each other. Tonquin, over which war is threatened, is a part of the Kingdom of Annam, South of China and East of Siam. In the 15th century the inhabitants of Tonquin set up a Government for themselves. During the reign of Louis XVI., a native aspirant to the throne of Annam, sent Ambassadors to the French Court to invoke the aid of Louis in his efforts to secure the reins of Government in Tonquin. A French squadron was sent to his help, and he succeeded in establishing himself as King. Since then they have not been backward in interfering in the affairs of the Kingdom.

In 1862 the French bombarded various ports and forced Emperor Tu-duc to cede to them Cochin China. By a treaty, passed in 1874, the French recognized Tu-duc's sovereignty in a formal manner, but in reality he was nothing better than their vassal. As a consequence the Tonquinese have repeatedly harassed the French by hostile movements, and they were, moreover, aided by China, which has all along considered itself the Suzerain of Annam. The cause of the present difficulties lies in the fact that Tu-duc has openly discarded the treaty of 1874 and joined forces with China.

Some time ago a French force was attacked by the natives, but it conquered, not, however, without heavy loss, and the capture and cruel death of many prisoners. France has been bold and assumes an aggressive attitude, but there is no disguising the fact that China is feared and that present complications may lead to others of greater moment. Each day brings intelligence of alliances, double and triple, of activity in the military circles of this nation and of that, of Von Moltke's mysterious tour and Bismarck's subtle scheming, and amid all it is somewhat difficult to understand what the outlook is. It seems as if France had the advantage of scienced men and improved warlike implements, but she has great odds in numbers against her, and the suspicion grows that the fight once begun may lead to results not even dreamt of now.

AN IMPORTANT ACTION.

Yesterday a meeting was held at Warbarton, near Gananoque, which was attended by upwards of fifty farmers. They assembled to consider what action should be taken respecting the flooding of their lands, which have been inundated by the waters of Gananoque River and Wilson's Creek. The farmers allege that the trouble has been caused by a dam owned by the Gananoque Water Power Company at Marble Rock and that sufficient precautions have not been taken to let the spring floods away. A Committee had previously asked R. T. Walkem, Q.C., to be present. Mr. B. Byers and Mr. Abbott, the President and a Director of the Gananoque Water Company, were also on hand and gave their views of the cause of the difficulty. The farmers complained further that the Company violated an agreement regarding the heights of the water. It was ultimately resolved to have the question tested and instructions were given to Messrs. Walkem & Walkem to enter an action in the Chancery Division for an injunction and damages in the name of John McCready. The action is one of much importance to the farmers and to the Company.

PITHY PARAGRAPHS.

Annexation.

"Feminism would not trouble Canada if it was annexed to the United States." So says the Watertown Times. Thank you, but we prefer the Feminism to annexation. Of two evils choose the least, you know!

Compulsory Education.

Nearly 200 women of New York city have petitioned the Board of Education to make the teaching of sewing to girls compulsory in the primary schools. These good women point out that sewing is a majority of cases is of much more importance to the mother of a poor family than arithmetic, geography, or history.

A Poorly Paid Tour.

The late season of Mrs. Langtry, stepdaughter-in-law to her tour under Mr. Abbey's management, has been unsatisfactory. Her second visit to Philadelphia was disastrous, and all the other cities were small cities, and the receipts insufficient to pay expenses. A contemporary thinks the best thing Mrs. Langtry can do is to seek new pastures in India, Australia or Zululand.

Scare to Orangemen.

A silly rumor was current in St. Catharines on Wednesday that a band of blackguards of the dynamite species had arrived, to blow up the Orange Hall when the sessions of the Grand Lodge were being held, and some of the leading hotels at which the delegates were staying. The County Master, though not attaching much credence to the rumors which reached him, took the precaution to notify the police authorities, who took the necessary steps to give the visitors a warm reception.

Championing the "Globe."

The Witness has been referred to as the champion of the Globe. We are not aware that such has been our position. We have not championed the policy or sentiments of any journal, and the Globe, of all Provincial papers, least needs our help. We have often endorsed what the Globe has said, but endorsation is one thing and championship another. One thing we can say, and that emphatically—that we have never had to apologize for what is termed "gutter journalism" on the part of the Globe. Can our Tory friends say as much in the interest of their chief organ?

The Proper Course.

The Globe, in connection with the new Pacific Scandal, has taken the only course open to it, and notified Mr Shields Solicitors that it will defend itself against any action which they may see fit to institute against it. An apology was out of the question. We assume that the articles complained of were only published after deliberation, after all the responsibilities of their publicity had been fully considered. They were probably intended to lead to revelations which our contemporary says will be of a most scandalous description. A retraction would be the last thing expected under the circumstances.

A Flattering Opinion.

There has been a great difference of opinion as to the character of the Marquis of Lansdowne as a landlord. One authority says he is a painstaking, if not clever man, moderate in his views, very amiable and the husband of a beautiful woman. As a landlord he has been a model man. In 1878, becoming convinced that a time of distress was impending, he made preparations for an extensive relief works, and the following year he closed his splendid seat at Bowood and went to winter among his tenantry in Kerry, where he felt that he was more needed and could do more good. In short the Marquis is one of the few peers who realize that their order has its responsibilities as well as its privileges.

CHURCH MATTERS.

Toronto Anglican Synod meets on June 12th. The Bishop will hold a reception that evening.

St. Andrew's Church, Trenton, has extended a call to Rev. W. T. Wilkins, Belgrave, Ont. Well regarded in Kingston.

The election of Bishop Sullivan to Bishopric of Huron is said to be a foregone conclusion. Rev. J. D. Cayley, of Toronto, is being nominated as his successor by Toronto men.

A learned Church of England divine, in England, although he distrusts profoundly the methods of the Salvation Army, yet gives it credit for "having arrested the attention of thousands who had long been insensible to the claims of God."

At the opening of the Royal College of Music, the Archbishop of Canterbury offered this beautiful collect, his own composition:

"O God, Who art the only Author of order and beauty. Bless, we beseech Thee, this College to the perfecting of science and skill in Thy pure gift of music, and grant that the good intent of its founders may be so answered in the diligence and virtue of its students, that both the restful delight of man and the glory of the Divine worship may be enhanced ever more and more; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

A DISPLEASED CHURCH.

The people of the church to which Rev. J. M. Hagar has been appointed, Montreal Third, by Conference, are very much displeased because their old pastor was not sent back to them for another year. They have had a meeting and resolved that unless their petition be granted they will secede, but this is a threat which will scarcely be carried out. The Conference had adjourned before the resolution was passed, and so the matter will now have to come before a Special Committee. Rev. Mr. Saunders, the former pastor of Montreal Third, has been appointed Moral Governor of Stanstead College, an appointment which will not now be cancelled. Rev. Mr. Hagar does not know anything about the circumstances; before he goes to the church it is hoped harmony will prevail. He is such a man as must win the friendship and love of this congregation in a very short time.

The Civil Service promotion examinations are fixed for the 15th inst.

MR. PEACOCK'S DEATH.

Account of His Last Illness and Funeral—Resigned, Peaceful and Full of Faith.

Rev. Mr. Peacock, formerly pastor of the Bath Congregational Church, died on Sunday morning. On the previous Friday he took Mrs. Peacock out for a drive, feeling better than he had been for a long time, and on Saturday he was about, very cheerful, anticipating the time when he should come to Kingston and visit his friends and tell them of the wonderful things God his Father had done for him in answer to prayer. When he returned from Boston his lungs were healed, as was manifested by his being able to engage in his loved work for his Master, preaching in the churches in neighbourhood, in Ottawa and other places, also in visiting the sick and others in his vicinity. A long distance from home he was caught in a cold pouring storm and chilled through. That brought on a slight hemorrhage of the lungs. Again, before that was quite healed, he was sent for by a poor woman who wished very much to see him. The snow was lying deep on the ground and the weather was freezing cold, yet he went; but on coming home the horse threw him out of the buggy into the snow, where he would have perished if it had not been for his son, a boy of 12 years of age, who was with him. That increased the hemorrhage from his lungs, and to make things worse an abscess formed on his thigh. The doctor saw it and said it was enough to kill any two men. The doctor did nothing for him, but in answer to prayer that was healed and at the time of his death there was only a slight mark to show where it had been. Mr Peacock was a man of great faith, having had many direct answers to prayer. He was taken for death at 9 o'clock on Sabbath morning while up and dressed. Physically he fought with death till 2 o'clock, when he fell asleep, having calmly passed through much tribulation. When taken for death his words to his beloved wife were: "My dear, I am going to the King." He was conscious to the last moment and died as he lived, full of faith in God through His Son Jesus Christ. He was buried on Thursday at Maxville cemetery. The body was taken from the house to the Church which was filled with those from his several charges who loved and respected him. The service was most impressive and affecting. Revs. D. McCallum, the pastor, McArthur and Mr. McKae, friends, conducted the service. The pastor's text was: "Father, I will that they also, whom thou hast given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory, which thou hast given me." The service concluded with the hymn

O think of the home over there
By the side of the river of light,
Where the saints all immortal and fair
Are robed in their garments of white.

A Simmons and Robert Mussie, of Kingston, attended the funeral.

A REPEATED CONCERT

Last evening the lecture room of the Queen Street Methodist Church was crowded with those assembled to listen to the concert given by the scholars of the Sabbath School. The programme was a long and interesting one, and the applause was loud at the conclusion of each selection. It was certainly amazing the see the little midgets singing and reciting in the excellent manner which they did. Miss Lavell was entitled to much praise for the way in which she trained them. May Worth, with a curly headed beauty in her descriptions of "Little Winchel," was encored. Her delivery was charming. The other participants in the programme were Alfred Birch, Minnie Powell, Frank Taylor, Charley Chapman, Ida Orser, Frank Laidley, Bertie Taylor, Norma Tandy, Alverton Assselstine, Lizzie Orser, Willie Tandy, Bertha Greenwood, Ada Laidley. There were others who took part in the choruses but their names could not be secured. The final tableau, "The Christian Soldier," was given by the larger attendants at the Sabbath School and with great success. The piece was put on tastily and the performers did themselves and the piece justice.

THE CANTYRE CASE.

In the case of Sankier et al., guardians of Miss Chaffey v. Henry Allan and wife to annul the marriage of the two latter, which was solemnized on the 27th of January last before the Rev. Mr. Galbraith, Mr. Kerr, Q.C., of Montreal, for the plaintiffs, insisted upon the annulling of the marriage, on the grounds that it had not been publicly solemnized and for want of consent of the guardians. Mr. Doutre, Q.C., for the defendant, stated that having discovered the impossibility of getting the consent of the guardians he saw no means of opposing the demand and advised Dr. Allan there was no chance of maintaining it. Upon this Dr. Allan had authorized him to let the case go to a judgment, which was reserved.

RAKING UP OLD SORES.

O. J. Devlin has instituted criminal and civil proceedings against the "Post Printing and Publishing Company" for libelous libel on his late brother, Bernard Devlin. The alleged libel is in a brochure, the chief object of which seems to be to throw discredit upon the late Mr. B. Devlin more especially in connection with his command of the Prince of Wales Rifles, in which the Fenian troubles of 1867 are again raked up. It is alleged that he was a traitor to his country, that he refused to leave the ranks of his regiment filled up when going to the front, and in fact appears to be a republication of Mclver's revelations. What the object of the brochure can be people are at a loss to find out, as no good can come by raking up again all the ill blood and bickerings of an election contest so far back as 1867.

S. Pavyer has great success this year in fine coloured worsted and Scotch tweeds for suitings. His expectations have been more than realized, he having been obliged to re-order the above. Anyone in need of a suit would do well to call on him as he guarantees a good fit and uses first-class trimmings.

ALOVER'S DESERTION.

Trifling with a Widow's Affections—Attempting to Steal Her Value as Well as Heart.

Sarah A Prindiville, a spirk-and-span widow from Hamilton, appeared at the Police Court this morning and unfolded a terrible grievance. She had been heartbreakly deceived just when everything pointed to a happy marital union. Her intended husband skipped, taking with him a quantity of her goods. This fellow who ruthlessly bruised the widow's heart and stole her fixings is named Benjamin Scofield. The courting occurred in the Ambitious City, where Mrs. Prindiville, who has four children to remind her of her "dear departed," kept a boarding house. Scofield was her boarder. It appears that he thought broad hints could be lightened by his tales of love. He ogled and winked at her, told her many pretty things, and finally "squeezed her hand and told her he loved her." This was the climax, and the widow wept upon his shirt front and was, Oh, so happy.

The wedding day was set, but deferred. Meanwhile Scofield grew fat and hearty at the widow's table, but paid her no board. She lent him money to fill he had $40, and after togging him out for the coming event he took it into his head to flee and come to Kingston, where he found employment in the Cotton Mill. The widow, with blood in her eye, came here as fast as the train would bring her, arriving yesterday. She soon found her perfidious lover, and then there was a scene. He meekly acquiesced to all her demands, but forgot, however, once by asking her for some money, she received none.

The widow was determined not to lose her betrothed and there was a reluctant promise on Scofield's part that to-day would see him hitched. But it didn't, for early this morning Scofield arose, silently stole forth and with the widow's valise, made for the steamer Maud. He left the goods behind him but reached the land of the free before the widow was aware of the fact.

She appeared at the Police Court and swore out a warrant for the man's arrest. The police now hold it. The widow returns to Hamilton with less faith than she ever had in man. She made a strong an effort to lasso the departed, but it was a failure. This is the first time on record that a widow got left.

BROOKLYN DISASTER.

New York, June 7.—The inquest on the Brooklyn Bridge accident was concluded yesterday, the jury returning the following verdict:

"We the jury, in the case of George Smith and 11 others, who lost their lives on the New York and Brooklyn Bridge on May 30, 1883, find that they came to their death by suffocation and by being trampled upon. In view of the above fact we find that the trustees and officers are reprehensible in not having the bridge and its approaches properly policed, and particularly at the steps. Had this important matter received the careful attention of the managers of the bridge, to which it was entitled, the vast throng upon the structure would have been kept moving and the panic, resulting in the death of 12 persons, would have been averted. The construction of this footway and steps is not of sufficient capacity for the accommodation of the foot passengers. The trustees should not pass this disaster over as a special dispensation and not likely to be repeated, but give their serious attention to the problem of making this promenade absolutely safe."

A ROADSIDE DUEL

The fight was continued until Waller fell from his horse mortally wounded.
