THE OLD FRONT DOOR.

I remember the time when I used to sit
A happy and thoughtless boy, last,
When father came home from his work at
And I was tired of my toy.
I remember the time, and none more sweet
Shall I know for evermore,
When I sat at the eve by my mother's side,
On the sill of the old front door.

I remember I'd sit till I fell asleep,
And lost to their loving talk, bright
While the crickets chirped and the fire flies
Flew over the garden walk.
And often would father tell the tale,
Of the time, long years before,
When he led his bride to a happy home,
Over the sill of the old front door.

I remember when grandfather faded and
And eighty years old was he, died
And well I knew that never again
He would ride me upon his knee.
And though but a gay and thoughtless boy
I wept, and my heart was sore
When I saw them bear him slowly out
O'er the sill of the old front door.

It is many a weary day since then,
And I, too, am old and gray
But the years come crowding onto my ears
When I think of that long past day
And I only hope that whatever end
I may have for me in store,
I shall pass once more, ere I pass away
O'er the sill of the old front door.

QUEEN'S CUP.

Another Effort to be Made to Capture It New Scotch Yacht and Their Purposes.

It appears that this year an attempt is likely to be made by English yachts men to carry back to England the trophy now in the possession of the New York Yacht Club, commonly known as the "Queen's Cup." This cup was originally won by the yacht America a great many years ago, and since that time four unsuccessful attempts have been made to win it back, two by Englishmen and two by Canadians. The first to essay the task was Mr. Ashbury with the Cambria, after his ocean race with Mr. Bennett's yacht Dauntless. The Cambria was unsuccessful, being placed in a race with about twenty American yachts on an inland course where skill to take a fvantage of the shifts of wind and the changing currents was of more avail than speed. Next year Mr. Ashbury fitted out the Livonia to contend for the cup. This vessel had been built specially for the race, but she never had a chance of winning, owing to the terms imposed on her owner by the New York Club. A series of contests was arranged, but the holders of the cup reserved the right to withhold the name of the yacht that was to contend with the Livonia until the morning of the day on which each race was to come off. The result was that if the weather was heavy a large keel yacht was selected as the American champion, and when the wind was light a centre board yacht was chosen. The Livonia won some of the contests, but not the majority of them, and had to return to England without the cup.

CONTESTS WITH CANADIANS.

The two Canadian attempts to win the cup, first with the Countess of Dufferin and afterwards with the Atlanta, are too fresh in the minds of our readers to be related here. Suffice it say that, although unsuccessful, the spirit manifested was highly creditable to the club by which the yachts were entered, and it is just possible that with more time for preparation the result might have been different. Since Mr. Ashbury's visit with the Livonia no English yacht has entered for the Queen's cup, but for the past two or three years it has been thought highly probable that some of the large English cutters would venture over, and it has been freely predicted that when one of them would do so she would probably take the Queen's cup back with her. The superiority of the cutter rig was pretty clearly demonstrated by the result of the races of the Scotch cutter Madge with a number of American yachts in 1881, and since that time a number of small American cutters have been built. The owner of the Madge, Mr. Coats, who is a member of one of the great Scotch thread manufacturing firms, has had a

NEW RACING BOAT PREPARED

by Watson and built by Steel, of Greenock. The new yacht is a composite cutter, of about eighty tons, with the largest head keel that has ever been cast, and so far at present trials indicate she is faster than the Vanduara, which was undoubtedly the crack racing yacht of the past two seasons. She has been named the Marjorie, and is to be sailed by the same skipper who sailed the Madge in America. It is the intention of her owner to send her to America to sail for the Queen's cup. Mr. John Clark, another Scotch thread manufacturer, who was owner of the Vanduara, as soon as he learned that Mr. Coats was building a new yacht gave orders to design "the fastest yacht ever launched," and the result has been the construction of a steel yawl named the Wonder. She is 92 feet long, 12 feet beam, has fifty tons of lead run into the hollow of her keel, and carries some twenty-five tons more of lead ballast stowed under her flooring. Her sails are the largest ever made for a vessel of her size. The Wonder will leave for New York about the second week in August, and will also challenge for the Queen's cup. With two such fleet British yachts contending for that trophy it will be strange if it remains in its present custody until the end of the present year.—Montreal Herald.

MIND READING.

The Last Feat of Mr. Bishop—Accepting the Challenge of Mr. Labouchere of "Truth."

The Pall Mall Gazette has the following account of Mr. Bishop's feat in mind reading:

"The easy chair set apart for Mr. Labouchere was unoccupied. The £1,000 promised was not tabled. But the ex parliament could be trued in Mr. Labouchere's absence, and Mr. Bishop was willing to stake his £200 with no chance at all than the promoter, willingly given, that the audience would demand that if he guessed the number aright Mr. Labouchere should hand over the £1,000 to the Victoria Hospital for children. Mr. Charles Russell here introduced a diversion which kept the meeting in an uproar for nearly an hour. He sent word from the body of the hall—he had refused to join the committee—that he had enclosed a five-pound note in an envelope and given it into the keeping of Professor Ray Lankester, who was also in the audience and who alone knew its number. He challenged Mr. Bishop to read in the mind of Mr. Ray Lankester the number of that note. If successful the note should go to the hospital. Mr. Waddy asked Mr. Bishop if he accepted the challenge. Mr. Bishop demurred. He had experimented before with Professor Lankester and found him a hard subject. The chances, he evidently seemed to think, were too to one against his success with Mr. Lankester. To give him a fair chance he thought he ought to try with some one with whom he

HAD NOT EXPERIMENTED BEFORE

He had, for instance, experimented with Mr. Waddy, and if he were selected as medium the chances were ten to one that he would be successful. It would be fairer to repeat all whose capacity for being read had been tested beforehand and confine the experiment to a new subject, to be freely selected by the audience. Professor Lankester did not deny the reasonable nature of this suggestion, but a large proportion of the audience roared their disapproval. A heated and violent wrangle ensued, in the course of which Mr. Bishop was freely denounced as a shuffler.

At last an old gentleman with shorter ian lungs proposed that the chairman should nominate a medium. Mr. Lane Fox was suggested and negatived. A Mr. Lees was also rejected, and at last, amid great cheering, Colonel Statham, of the Twentieth Lancashire Rifle Volunteers, consented to submit to the experiment. A fruitless attempt was made to induce Dr. Lankester to impart the number of Mr. Russell's note to Colonel Statham for the purpose of the experiment, and then Col. Trench, to whose high character the Hon. Edward Stanhope bore emphatic testimony, and who declared that he had never seen either Mr. Bishop or Colonel Statham before, produced a five pound note, the number of which he did not know, and handed it to the Chairman. A large blackboard was then introduced, on which Mr. Bishop was to write the of the note. In presence of all the audience, closely scrutinized by the Committee and the Chairman, while standing at some yards' distance from Mr. Bishop, Col. Statham unfolded the note far enough to master its number. No one else could see it, nor did any one else in the hall know it but himself. Mr Bishop then took his stand beside Col. Statham and drew on the blackboard a parallelogram, which he divided into five spaces, one for each number of the note. He then blindfolded himself and, grasping a piece of chalk began, to "read" the mind of his companion.

AS YET UNKNOWN NUMBER

He shook all over, his right hand raised above his head quivered violently, he slightly touched Col. Statham once for a second with the tip of his finger, and then, without more than a few seconds delay, he began to chalk on the board as follows:

6 | 6 | 8 | 9 | 4

When he reached the last figure he hesitated for a moment, clutched Col. Statham's hand and then wrote down "4." No one who saw the impassive countenance of the volunteer Colonel could tell whether Mr. Bishop had succeeded or failed. "I have two guesses," he said, "by the terms of Mr. Labouchere's challenge. Have I read the number rightly?" Col. Statham opened the note, glanced at it and then handed it to the Chairman. Mr. Bishop had won his wager. The numbers were right, and the meeting burst into a roar of enthusiastic cheering, which was again and again renewed. Outside was a great crowd waiting to see the balloon ascend which was to announce the success or failure of the test. As it mounted in the air, displaying not the "lurid red" color of failure, but typical of success, the crowd cheered lustily. Inside the hall, when a moment's silence had been secured, Mr. Bishop said: "I appeal to this audience of three thousand Englishmen to demand of Mr. Henry Labouchere that he shall hand over to the Victoria Hospital at Chelsea the £1,000 he offered to stake that I could not read the note. I have met his challenge on every point. Will you demand the money? A great shout of assent, followed by long and continued cheering, mingled with a few cries of "No," brought the meeting to a close. On questioning Col. Statham afterward, he said that when Mr. Bishop had reached the last figure, he (Colonel Statham) forgot whether it was 4 or 6. It was when he was trying to recall the figure that Mr. Bishop hesitated and grasped his hand. He then decided for the 4, which Mr. Bishop then wrote down.

THE BRIGHT WHITE LIGHT

IN DISTRESS.

Yokohama, June 27.—A new rule for the regulation of the press causes great dissatisfaction. Un publication of eleven journals has been discontinued. The editor of Tokohi Shimbun has been sentenced to five years at hard labor and a fine of $200 a year for publishing an article headed "Sympathy for the unfortunate Emperor of Japan." The people of Simonaki are petitioning the Government to appropriate the money refunded by the United States for local improvements. In Tokosan the ravages of small-pox are causing widespread desolation.

Dyspepsia.—The same strikes a chill to a mortal's heart to who realizes what a dangerous malady it is. With a bottle of Pain-Killer in the house the fear that this has a still more powerful sire, and half the terror is dissipated.

PREACHING FOR MONEY

The Rev. T. W. Jeffery Explains His Position in Regard to the Question of Salary.

(Port Hope Times.)

In Methodist circles lately there has been much comment upon the action of Rev. T. W. Jeffery in the recent shuffle which places him in Toronto Queen Street Church and brings Rev. Mr Lennoyd as his successor to Port Hope. Last Sunday evening he devoted some time to an explanation of his position in the matter.

"Some of my friends have said that I could have stayed in Port Hope if I liked. Some in the Church say I am in for money. When I entered the ministry I was receiving a better salary than I have ever made since. I have stood up to my calling, and am now a poor man. I gave myself up to the ministry and I have lived on nothing but what I have taken from my slender calling. At a recent Conference Yorkville sent a deputation offering me $2,000, a house, a man to do my work and three months holidays. I said to them I have never subserved my pay since I became a minister. The Conference asked "Will you have us say you can go to Yorkville? It will relieve us considerably. I said, "No. You can place me where you please, I am a Methodist minister." Has any one a right to charge me with love of money? I lived on $1,200 when I could have had $2,000. I remained on the list as being stationed at Port Hope until last Monday night, when I was changed from Port Hope to Queen Street, Toronto. One reason given was that, in that section of Toronto the Salvation Army are establishing a barracks, and it was thought that as I was well known and popular with the poorer classes could retain them better than a stranger. Had I been appointed here again I would have come back to my work as sincerely as ever. I accepted your invitation as an honest man, and I would not have said a word about it had you not wounded a man's feelings—a man's heart. I have not a penny in the world to-day. If a man, whom I thought deserving, asked me for $5, $10, $50, or $100 and I had it, I'd give it to him. Never have I received a note for money lent in my life. I started in the ministry in love for the Master. The rev. gentleman stated that he had received several other offers of large salaries. When he entered the ministry he got a salary of $200 and board, and kept a horse. For seven years he did not receive a higher salary than $600.

POOR MEALS ON THE SHIP

There is great complaining in regard to the catering on some of the steamers. A party of young gentlemen arrived here on the boat yesterday and at once rushed to the Burnett House for dinner, declaring that they could get nothing tempting on the boats. The Montreal Star says: A gentleman on a lake boat was much disgusted by the a la carte system. He began his dinner by ordering a plate of soup, 10 cents; then roast beef, 30c., mashed potatoes, 10c., peas, 10c., asparagus, 10c., a little wedge of pie, 10c., and a cup of tea which he believes was 5c., total 85 cents. The gentleman, whose means were limited, felt, after he had got through his dinner, as though he had had a very light lunch, as there was about a table spoonful of each of the vegetables. When the boat arrived at Kingston he made a rush for Princess Street and laid in a stock of provisions which lasted him till he got to Toronto. On his return from Toronto the gentleman and a friend, profiting by the experience of the up trip, laid in a well stocked hamper at Toronto, which more than lasted them till they got to Montreal, living on the way "like fighting cocks," as the gentleman expressed it, at a fraction of what it would have cost a la carte at the boat table.

OUTLOOK FOR FRANCE.

Paris, June 27.—General Gordon says the Chinese are sufficiently powerful to give France a good deal of trouble, for it is not with France as it is with Russia, who could approach Pekin by land. The approach by sea would need a very much larger force than in 1860. If the Chinese were educated they would be able to resist all the world. China has not signed the declaration of Paris regarding privateers, and will doubtless notice a full use of her rights.
