A Chorus of Disapproval

by Alan Ayckbourn

A lonely and unassuming widower joins an amateur opera group, and unexpectedly launches a hilarious frolic through inept rehearsals, shady business deals, and amorous missteps.

ROM curator discusses Art Deco

Oakville Museum at Erchless Estate is hosting a special evening lecture on Art Deco on Monday, Nov. 17.

The lecture will be presented by Dr. Peter Kaellgren, lead curator from the Royal Ontario Museum (ROM) from 7-9 p.m.

He will discuss the ROM's current exhibit: Art Deco 1910-1939 on display until Sunday, Jan. 4. Art Deco 1910-1939 is a multi-faceted and comprehensive showcase of this glamorous and popular style, organized by London's Victorian and Albert Museum.

The Art Deco Era is the same period as the Oakville Museum's restoration date of 1925.

Art Deco 1910-1939 brings together some of the most important and influential artists and designers of the last century including: Sir Cecil Beaton, Cartier, Coco Chanel, Raul Dufy, Jean Dupas, Fernand Leger, Tamara de Lempicka, Pablo Picasso, Man Ray, Jacques-Emile Ruhlmann, and Elsa Schiaparelli, among many others.

The Art Deco Era is referred to as an eclectic design style that arose between the two World Wars. The name Art Deco was derived from the 1925 Exposition Internationale des Arts Décoratifs Industriels et Modernes, held in Paris, which celebrated the modernization of the 1920s and 1930s. Art Deco followed the Art Nouveau movement and flourished in the decorative arts and fine arts in Europe, and eventually into North America. The term Art Deco was coined in the '60s by Bevis Hillier a British art critic.

Tickets cost $10 per person.

Advance ticket purchases recommended. Visa and Mastercard accepted. For more information, contact the Oakville Museum at 905-338-4400 or visit www.oakvillemuseum.com.
