Holman Close.

On Saturday the Holman Opera Company closed their performances in the Opera House. The audience was small, the music, the Chimes of Normandy. Late in the evening Mr. O'Brien entertained the members of the Company and a few friends.

A Compliment.

An English gentleman, familiar with Canada generally, while in Kingston last week, remarked upon the good looks of the ladies. He saw a larger proportion of beautiful girls and women here than in any other of the hundreds of places he has visited in his professional rambles.

Kerry Gow.

On Wednesday evening the Kerry Gow party will appear in this well known national play which has held the stage for a long time, Mr. Murphy appearing in the title role. The high praise which has been given to the piece wherever it has been produced, as well as to the performers taking part in it, will no doubt be heartily endorsed in Kingston.

In Memoriam.

Last evening, at St. James' Church, the Rev. F. W. Kirkpatrick gave as the concluding hymn of the service, the touching one—"On the resurrection morning," remarking upon the death that day of a lady (Mrs. Machar) who would long be remembered in Kingston for Christian virtues, and who, though not of their communion, was beloved by all in that church that knew her.

A Steamship Disabled.

Two weeks ago yesterday the steamship Canada, of the National Line, sailed from Liverpool, having among its passengers Mr. and Mrs. W. Martin who have been visiting England for four months. They were to be in the city on Tuesday. Not arriving as expected on Wednesday or Thursday Mr. W. O. Martin telegraphed to the office of the Steamship Company in New York and learned that the Canada had not reached her destination. A telegram yesterday explained the cause of her delay. She was disabled, and a week after being due (or yesterday) ran into St. Johns.

Lennox Election Case.

Chief Justice Wilson gave judgment on Saturday morning upon the motion to strike out some of the particulars given by the petitioner in the Lennox election case. He struck out the 3rd, 4th and 5th charges to the effect that the respondent had corruptly promised certain legislation to benefit individuals in the riding, and he also struck out the 11th charge, which was one of displaying ribbons and badges on polling-day, on the ground that it is a corrupt practice. The remainder of the charges he referred to the judge at the trial, Mr. Justice Armour. The trial will take place at Napanee next Wednesday.

Robbing the Farmers.

On Thursday last a man went upon the city market and represented that he was buying sheep-skins for Ford & Sons. He gathered up several skins, telling the owners to call at the firm's office and they would be paid. The man then took the robes to the Messrs. Fords and sold them. The owners of the pelts also called, but they were disappointed in securing their cash. The fellow was arrested and identified by Mr. Ford. He was charged, however, with drunkenness. The policeman who arrested him asked to have the man remanded, but the Magistrate fined him and allowed him time to liquidate.

A Drowned Man Found.

Yesterday a youth named Doyle, of Kingston Mills, was sailing about in a small boat above the locks on the Cataraqui. He saw a black felt hat. This led him to suspect that some one had fallen into the water, and searching about he found a body lying underneath it. The corpse could not be identified, but as the clothing resembled that worn by the runaway convict, McCabe, steps were taken to have it identified. Officer Connors, of the prison, made an examination of the remains and reports that they are not those of the escaped prisoner. The body had been in the water some days and was greatly decomposed. It appeared to be that of a man about 50 years old, black tail coat, black vest; soft hat drawn down over the head; woollen stockings and shoes. The body was short and stout, and the clothing resembled that worn by English emigrants. The body had been forced by the action of the water partly under a crevice in the rock and was jammed there. No one is missing from this locality and the identity is puzzling.

New Treatment.

We invite those suffering from catarrh, catarrhal deafness, asthma, bronchitis or consumption, to call upon our Surgeon, at the City Hotel here, on Monday and Tuesday, Oct. 8th and 9th, for consultation and explanation of our treatment. It is proving eminently successful, and is well worthy of careful attention and adoption by the afflicted. Very many cases which have been considered hopeless, and have been given up as incurable by ordinary treatment, have been successfully treated by our means, and are now restored to good health and enabled to resume their usual occupations, to the great satisfaction of themselves and their friends. Dr. Souvielle, of Paris, the inventor of the Spirometer, and this special mode of treatment, by means of which medicated air is carried directly to the parts affected, is gaining an enviable reputation by his wonderful success. It only requires to be known to be appreciated, and we solicit investigation, feeling assured that even the most sceptical will be happily convinced of its exceeding value. Hundreds and thousands attest the efficacy of the treatment. Consultations are free. The afflicted are invited to call and learn particulars. See bills—Monday and Tuesday—City Hotel, Kingston.

Rugby Foot Ball Match.

An extremely interesting foot-ball match was viewed by many on the Royal Military College campus on Saturday afternoon. The contestants were teams from the College and "B" Battery. The ball was kicked off at 3:30 p.m. by Macdonnell. The play was spirited, but the Cadets worked well together, eclipsing the opposing team. After twenty-five minutes' play the ball was put thro' the battery goal by Warner, who made a fine drop kick. The second game was won by the Cadets in 22 minutes. Hearn made a drop kick from the goal. The game continued for an hour and a half, and resulted in favor of the collegians, who made two games and one touchdown. The Battery secured one rouge. The best players of the Cadets were Warner, Hearne, Macdonnell, Leard, Van Buskirk, Carey, Van Ilfand and Hugel. Those who distinguished themselves for the Battery were Nelis, Thompson, Lavin, Heuheth and Booth. There was considerable money bet on the result, and the Batterymen were the favorites. It is said that the Cadets diet and train for the matches. A Cadet who ate butter on the day of the match was chalked off the list.

A PRISON MUTINY.

ATTEMPT OF FOUR CONVICTS TO OVERPOWER THE GUARDS AND ESCAPE—THREE CRY FOR HELP.

Old Time Offenders Again to the Fore—Desperate Men, the Desperate Things—A Conspiracy and Its Culmination—Three Men Gagged and Tied—Attack on the Steward and the Warden in the Rotunda—An Exciting Event.

Plots are not uncommon things among the convicts of all penitentiaries. The Kingston prison is not free of conspiracies some of which tend to events of a more or less serious nature. On Saturday a deep-laid and desperate scheme was frustrated, not without difficulty but soon enough to avoid the possible escape of many prisoners and the loss of some life. There is no telling how many out of the 700 convicts were interested or concerned in the conspiracy, but the four leaders have been identified and sent for the present to solitary cells. The chief conspirator of the plot was James Wright. He comes from London and has served six of the ten years for which he has been sentenced for shooting at a toll gate keeper whom he and another man undertook to rob. He is a bad man and wholly unsafe to allow at large. In the same prison he served a previous term for larceny, and he spent an earlier period in the Reformatory for a like offence.

OUTBREAK TWO WINTERS AGO.

Two years last winter he led a gang who overpowered the guard, broke out of the dungeon and reached the American side before being recaptured. Wright had reached a station on the line of the R., W. & O. RR. beyond Cape Vincent before he was overtaken by the officers sent in pursuit of the runaways. When he was returned to prison he told a pathetic story to the effect that he could have made good his escape, but that he had remained true to one Blake, an imbecile, who suffered on account of the cold and was likely to perish by the way. Of course he became very penitent and promised to show the evidences of reformation in his future life. Yet he was dissatisfied and always suspicious. Some time ago he was given to understand that a petition had been sent by friends to the Minister of Justice asking for a mitigation of his sentence. Time passed and he heard nothing of it. He seemed to form the opinion that nothing was being done about the matter and became desperate.

Only six weeks ago he was detected in a plot to bolt. He had as an assistant John Armstrong, one of yesterday's mutineers. The Warden, on coming from dinner, on several occasions, saw this man watching him from the corner of the bakery. He at once suspected that there was something wrong, but kept his counsel until he realized the situation. Wright day after day had gone into the area outside the bakery, had gone to a concealed point and undertaken to break into the drain leading to the water in the harbor. This drain is narrow at some points, and it is barred by grates, but of this fact Wright had not a knowledge. Mr. Creighton eventually addressed the convict, telling him that his work was useless, that if given his way, unchecked, he could not get out by the drain as he calculated. Wright was surprised beyond measure and asked the Warden, "Did you know what I was about?" "Certainly I did," replied the Warden; "and I know what Armstrong was about, too. I couldn't but understand that there was something up unless I were blind and without ordinary intelligence." Again the convict became penitent, and again he promised to turn over a new leaf. He failed to do so. And in the last mutiny. Abram Rapson has served 4 years of a sentence of 20, for larceny and arson committed in Prince Edward Island. He is not mentally split, and in the outbreak of two years ago accompanied Wright. He was one of those whom the Watertown authorities surrendered. John Armstrong alias Charles Polly comes from Peel County for larceny, and has served 2 years of a term of 4. William Smiley, alias Dunbar, comes from Brampton, and has two years to serve for burglary. In July Smiley, while working upon a fence, ran away but was caught within an hour, hidden in a clump of trees outside the prison farm. Now he is employed in the tailor shop. Rapson in the yard and Wright and Armstrong in the bakery.

CHARACTER OF THE PLOT.

The first move was to seize the officer (McNeil) doing duty in the kitchen when the Steward and the Warden were at dinner. Both generally dine at 1 o'clock. On Saturday, however, both were detained. Mr. Weir had occasion to go to the cellar, and Mr. Creighton did not leave his office, being confined more than usual in consequence of the absence of six guards in search of a runaway and the illness of four others. The quartette commenced operations upon the Librarian, one Dilworth, a convict, who was told that a couple of men were playing cards in the Chaplain's vestry. As soon as he entered the apartment he was attacked by Rapson and Smiley, gagged and tied. Then word was sent to guard McNeil that he was wanted in the vestry. He went up stairs and fell into the Librarian's trap. He made an outcry, but it was weak and of short duration, as in a moment he was silenced with a gag and bound hand and foot. He resisted all he could and received hard blows from Rapson's clenched fists. Wright carried a poker, but did not use it upon the guard. The latter was searched for his revolver, but it was not found. McNeil, in the kitchen, did not think he required firearms, and his seven chambers he left in the keeper's room in the morning. A convict named Rhodes was engaged upon a special work until after the noon hour, and could not, between 12 and 1 o'clock, get to the library in order to change a book, but he went there as soon as he could. He encountered Wright and Armstrong, who told him that Dilworth was in the vestry. As he entered he was taken aback of. He asked, "My God, boys, what does this mean?" They told him they were going to get their liberty, and that they were going to tie him. They would use him gently if he readily submitted, but they would use force upon him if necessary. He was quickly disposed of. The purpose now was to march to the dome, overpower the guard and obtain from him the keys of the keeper's room in which they knew the rifles were kept.

THE GAME ALL UP.

Before they left the library, however, Mr. Weir, the Steward, appeared. He was in search of McNeil, the guard, to leave him in charge of the kitchen in his (the Steward's) absence at dinner. Wright and Armstrong approached him. He asked for McNeil, and as he did so he noticed that Wright carried something behind his back. Weir demanded, "What have you there?" Wright made no answer. "What have you there, sir? I want to see it," repeated the Steward. Wright sprang upon him and struck him with the iron poker over the head, inflicting an ugly wound, and Armstrong closed in upon him from behind. Wright struck him a second time on the neck. Had the stroke been a little lower down it would have killed him. Three times he was wounded, but he is a powerful man and grappled with Wright while he called loudly for assistance. The Warden heard the fuss, and putting on his hat went towards where the noise occurred. He met Weir coming down the stairs covered with blood, with the poker, which he had wrested from Wright, in his hand. The Warden asked what was the matter. Weir said he didn't know exactly what was going on, but that Wright and Armstrong had assaulted him. Mr. Creighton asked, "Are they up stairs?" Mr. Weir said they were. In this he was mistaken. His cries had brought several from the kitchen, and when they rushed in

THE CONVICTS RUSHED OUT.

Wright at once going to the bakery and Armstrong to the tailor shop. The Warden sent for the Deputy Warden and learned that he had narrowly escaped harsh treatment. Rapson had been sent to look him up and induce him to visit the vestry, where he was to have been bound and gagged. The ropes and implements were there to paralyze half a dozen persons. The gags were made in the prison—pieces of wood with leathers and buckles. The rope no one can tell whence it came as there is nothing like it in use in the institution. The Deputy Warden summoned a force of guards and the convicts were told to surrender. They did so and were escorted to the solitary cells. What punishment they will receive we cannot conjecture, but it ought not to be light. Weir's appearance was exceedingly fortunate. Had they got access to the rifles they would have been hard to handle, and in all probability there would have been a lamentable loss of life. The guards upon the walls would, of course, have attacked them, but they would have returned the fire, and no one can surmise the consequences.

DISCOVERIES BY THE WARDEN.

Mr. Creighton has himself detected the men in many conspiracies, and in the dining hall he has exposed them just when the crisis seemed to be at hand. But his rule is exceedingly kind, and feeling that he is acting fairly and humanely and justly fears no ill. But once was he attacked, and then he showed that he was not a coward. He has told the convicts that so long as they behave themselves he will show them every consideration, that to injure him or take his life will not bring about their release and a new Warden might not treat them so well. And he is right.

OUTBREAK OF FEBRUARY 14, 1881.

Our readers will not have forgotten the outbreak of Feb. 14, 1881. About 6 p. m., the night being cold, guards Hurst and Appleton entered the dungeons upon their usual tour of inspection. They had scarcely entered when four convicts attacked them.—Morris Blake, James Wright, Abram Rapson and Ed. Shiotte. Wright, on being transferred to his solitary cell for misconduct, carried, concealed in his boot, a knife blade which, with the aid of a file, he hacked into a saw and spent days and days in sawing out a square of the door, having, in the operation, to cut through three horizontal bars and three perpendicular. At the time of the escape we exhibited this section of the door, and the work upon it with the knife blade astonished the people. Wright sawed away upon the iron; as he cut the bars he filled the cuts with a combination of soap and dirt so that the guards did not notice them and he took precious good care that they did not hear him at his work. At last, when he sawed and wrenched out the square, he crawled through and breaking the locks on the other cells released his comrades. Then they waited for the guards and when they came pummelled them in the dark, gagged them and dragged them into a cell. Officer Hurst was here found afterwards more dead than alive. The convicts locked the cells after them, went to the tailor shop, donned civilians' dress, spliced ladders and scaled the wall. They were pursued across the ice and re-captured.

NO WORD OF M'CABE.

McCabe has not been re-taken though on Saturday and yesterday the guards were after him. The Warden says he will be taken sure; he has no doubt of that.

Salvation Army's Work.

The Saved Army is still rolling the old chariot along. Lieut. Stewart led the meeting at Portsmouth yesterday with great success. On Sunday evening Lieuts. Woodhouse and Payne assisted, and there was a full hall.

The meetings are not held until after the churches are dismissed so that the church people can attend them. In fact all the converts are members of the church. Rev. Mr. Dobbs and Rev. Mr. McKay made grand addresses.

Tolton's campaign is a great success.

The Saved Army is to make an attack upon Harrowsmith this week.

At present the Army has six corps posts and the converts number some 440.

The Napanee corps is contemplating the erection of a hall.

PURTELL VS. NESBITT.

Summary of Judge Wilkinson's Judgment—An Appeal for a New Trial—Damages Sustained.

The arrest of the plaintiff was, beyond all question, procured through the exertions of defendant (Policeman Nesbitt), who, he had no doubt, was convinced that the plaintiff was the person who committed the burglary at Newton's house on the Sunday night. Newton seems to be a very quiet, easy going man, and was not anxious to proceed any farther once he secured his property, but the defendant was resolved to follow the matter up to secure the arrest of the guilty party. In this he was doing his duty as an officer. He was diligent in tracing out the circumstances. In this his conduct was commendable. But unfortunately his zeal led him too far, deprived him of the credit his exertions fairly entitled him to, and rendered him answerable in damages. Finding himself unable to procure evidence against the plaintiff to connect him with the crime the defendant adopted

A MOST DEPLORABLE COURSE.

He went to Newton and told him that Bird had given him information clearly connecting the plaintiff with the burglary. Upon this he induced Newton to lay an information against the plaintiff and procure his arrest. The defendant was the active party and made use of Newton to carry out his purpose. It turned out, too, that the defendant had deliberately falsified the information given him by Bird. The latter had made a statement to defendant perfectly correct, that he had seen the plaintiff and others on the Sunday evening at his corner. There was nothing in this to connect the plaintiff with the burglary, but the defendant, with a view, no doubt, to make the guilt of the plaintiff appear quite plainly to Newton, told the latter that Bird had informed him that he heard the plaintiff and his brother quarrelling at the corner over some money on the night of the robbery. This was totally different and the prosecution was brought about by the false statement.

THE JUDGMENT.

The jury found that the defendant was not acting bona fide when he made the statement to Newton, and Judge Wilkinson fully concurs. He (the Judge) could not conceive how any other conclusion could be reached upon the evidence. After the discharge of the plaintiff and when an action for damages was likely to be brought, the defendant seems to have considered that he might be placed in a difficult position if he relied upon the statement Bird had made. Then it was that the defendant resolved upon urging that he had seen the plaintiff and his brother in the very act of carrying away the stolen property on the Sunday evening. After carefully considering the evidence and circumstances the Judge is of opinion that the defendant did not see the plaintiff or any one else with a trunk that evening. Everything that may be emphatically relied on points to that conclusion. His Honor did not lose sight of the evidence of the police force, which did not support it.

The story is highly improbable in the first place, and had the defendant seen what he alleges why did he not arrest the plaintiff immediately? What stronger evidence of his guilt could be required than what he had himself seen? Instead, however, of making an arrest he went to Bird to make inquiries and what is more conclusive against his contention he never told Newton what he alleges he had seen, nor did he mention it to Bird, although he appears to have made all the representations he could in order to blacken the character of the plaintiff in Bird's estimation. On the whole case the Judge quite agrees with the finding of the jury, and therefore the verdict must stand. The order nisi should be discharged with costs.

Mr. T. H. McGuire, Q.C., argued the rule on behalf of Purtell, and Mr. B. M. Britton, Q.C., on behalf of Nesbitt.

WHAT WE CLAIM.

To all who desire to increase half flesh and strength, health and energy, pale blood, invigorate their pulse and body, we claim that the Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites is the most perfect preparation of PLAIN NEW and well with PHOSPHORUS, the best Nerve Tonic every used, will more speedily and perfectly accomplish these important results than any other form of medicine. Some imperfect emulsions claim to be equally good, but from the fact that they are sold in less honest ways than Plain Scott's, it is to be inferred that Plain Scott's is even more of value in the best interpretation of the word than the others. In Plain Scott's Emulsion Cod Liver Oil, HYPOPHOSPHITES and HYPOPHOSPHITES and HYPOPHOSPHITES preparations of Plain Scott's are combined in the most palatable form and united with the most easily assimilated form of Phosphorus, making a most elegant and valuable preparation, even in the most sensitive and delicate, that taste it and the same time be sure of its effects. Parents, if your children are pale, weak, nervous, or wasting away, give them a teaspoonful daily, and you will be surprised at the results. Ask your druggists for particulars. Read the following testimonial:

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 6th, 1882.

Plain Scott Emulsion Cod Liver Oil Co.

Gentlemen—Having bought some of different kinds of emulsions, but not with the effect we are about to purchase your Cod Liver Oil, we think good to be the best Emulsion. Compound.
