MY MARRIAGE.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "ALICE LORNE," ETC.

"Do you mean my face or myself?" I ask, and I am surprised to find how eagerly I wait for his answer.

"Your own sweet self, Madgie, he replies. "Will it make you value little Madgie, if I say there is no room for improvement in a certain lovely and very lovable face?"

"Humphrey"—I have one more question to put, one more doubt to be set at rest—"did you marry me for my face or for myself?"

He steps midway in the narrow shady path and catches my hand in his, while a tide of color sweeps over his face.

"I married you, because I loved you—yourself, Madgie—because my life would have been miserable without you for my wife."

I look up at the passion in his eyes, and perhaps something in my upturned face hurts him.

"Poor child!" he says, and drops my hands suddenly.

We hear voices approaching; the others are coming back to look for us. And when we walk home in the gloaming, I am as far from understanding my husband, and he is as far from comprehending me as ever.

* * * * *

We are going to Carstairs to-morrow, from that day I am to begin a new life—our boxes are packed. I have on the dress I am to travel in. Crib is not to come with us after all. In a week moment I have given him to Jack.

"You can get as many dogs as you like, Madgie," he told me. "Do let me keep Crib."

"Very well, Jack."

"And I do not know that I much care—if one thing goes, the rest may as well go too.

I am sore at heart and very miserable to-day. All day long it has been raining—a heavy downpour, with gusts of wind that bring down the yellow leaves. They lie in sodden heaps now, and the trees seem suddenly to have become bare.

It is late in the afternoon, and a watery yellow gleam shines out of the west like a shadowy smile after exceedingly bitter tears. The old garden is a very wilderness. The rain and the wind have played ruin havoc in it today; and the unreserved roses trail their few straggling blossoms in the paths, where they lie in pools of mud. The wind has laid them low; while all the apples seem to have come down with a rush, and lie broken and bruised on the ground. Altogether the poor old garden has a battered, disordered appearance, and the flowers look as if the wind had spun them round and round, for there are little trenches round every plant; and stocks, and evergreen geraniums lie wrecked and broken on the soaking earth.

I walk dismally up and down, holding up my dress from contact with the soaking box-edging. I am very unhappy, very wretched; and only a great effort keeps back the tears. It is not cheerful work, contemplating the wreck and damage from the storm last night, and the pitiless rain all day; but I have come away to be alone on this last afternoon at the old home, which somehow, is not like the old home any longer; and I have awakened to the bitter knowledge that I am not necessary to my relatives' happiness. They are all perfectly happy without me—even Bee—and I counted and grudged every hour while I was away, and refused to take pleasure in sights and sounds they could not share! For their sakes I married Humphrey Carstairs; now they all think I am the only member of the family who ought to be happy—that my lot is one to be envied. I have come back to them for a while, and I find my place filled, my identity a thing of the past. Humphrey's love cannot and does not make up for what I have lost; and I wish with all my heart and soul that I was Madgie Alison again. To-morrow I shall go away, my husband at my side, and papa and mamma will say, "How happy the child will be in her new home!" and Lena and Bee, and even Dora and Isabel, will think and talk of Carstairs as an enchanted palace which they will see some day. In the meantime their lives will roll on in even smoothness; and I may break my heart in the utter discontent of my new existence, if I will.

I have nothing in common with my brothers and sisters now. Before I was three days at home I found that out. Madgie, in her character of Mrs. Carstairs, was a person to be treated with respect, not familiarity. They have even new jokes that I know nothing about, and my allusion to my past absurdities are treated as stale forgotten jests that do not raise a smile now. I try to think that these alone are the causes that make my heart swell and send the tears into my eyes; but there is something deeper still that is rising in passionate outcry within me—the knowledge that I have made my life a sacrifice in vain.

Something has happened today which, if it had taken place a few months ago, would have left no need of this marriage of mine. Papa has been left a legacy—an additional two hundred a year. The letter came this morning, and the whole house has been in a pleasing state of excitement ever since—all except me. I am glad for my relatives' sakes, but miserably remorseful for my own. If that two hundred a year had been bequeathed a few months ago, I would never have married Humphrey. If that distant cousin of papa's had died only a little sooner! This thought has left me white and miserable, and I have come out into the old garden to fight out a fight with myself, in which I have come out only second best.

"This has been a most fortunate year," Lena said not an hour ago—"first your marriage, Madgie, and now this legacy."

I smiled and forced back a bitter cry.—And I do not think even Humphrey guessed my thoughts today.

"How pale you are Madgie!" he said once. "You have worn yourself out with this packing."

He would be somewhat amazed if he could see me now in the sole apology of a summer house our garden boasts, sitting on the rickety seat, my face in my hands, my whole body shaken with a storm of convulsive passionate weeping, every sob more heart-broken and miserable than the previous one. I have broken down at last, and the blinding tears rain through my fingers thick and fast. How am I to live? And to-morrow I am going away. So I sit and weep and cry to my heart's content, till my head aches—and every breath is a long-drawn sob. I, Madgie, to be like this, when I am the fortunate member, the envy of my sisters! It is strange indeed; but the heart knows its own bitterness.

So last am I to outward sights and sounds that I am deaf to an approaching footstep and blind to the sudden appearance of a tall figure. I do not know that for the last three minutes my husband has been standing, grave and sorrowful, contemplating his wife weeping bitter passionate tears; and I start as something passes close to my bowed head and I hear his voice—

"My child, do you feel it so much as this?"

I lift my wet face and look at him through my falling tears, but no words come from my convulsively-twitching lips. He takes his seat beside me in the mouldy summer-house.

"You must not cry like this," he says at last in a grave kind voice. "Madgie, it is utterly selfish of me, but I can find it in my heart to wish this news had never come."

"The news of the legacy, I know what he means; and the hot blood rushes to my temples, and my face goes back to the old shelter of my hands.

"It is hard on you," he goes on quietly, "Poor little Madgie!"

"Humphrey, don't!" I cry, raising my head and facing him. "You know it is ten times—ten thousand times—harder on you. You have given me everything, and I am wicked and ungrateful and everything that is bad!"

He holds out one hand and lays it over both of mine, as they lie shaking in my lap.

"I won't say that I do not feel it," he says, "for it would be a lie. Heaven only knows how I yearn and long for my wife's love! But, Madgie, my nature makes me incompatible with pain. Nay, dear, do not look so pained and sad. You take me with your eyes, lips that you manned, sacrificing the poverty at home, and you feel and rave because the necessity for that sacrifice has been removed. It is not so, Madgie?"

Very sadly he smiles into my face; and I turn to him suddenly and moved by some strange impulse, lift both my arms and lay them about his neck.

"Humphrey, Humphrey, save me from myself!" And I cling to him tightly, and feel the quiver that runs through him as he clasps me closer and closer to his breast.

"My own, my darling!"

My face is hidden on his shoulder. I am biting my lips to keep back the wild outcry repeat that my heart is burning to pour into words—a repeat that would very easily cancel my promise made a few days ago to live for my husband.

There is a long pause, then he speaks in a voice so low and broken that I scarcely recognize it.

"Madgie, would you be happier here at home? I cannot take you with me against your will; and, perhaps, dear, some day you will write to me saying, 'Humphrey, come.'"

One moment, and I have won the victory; and when I look up into my husband's face, and see the white set misery there, I hate myself even for that momentary hesitation.

"Humphrey, till I die my place is at your side. And—and don't feel for me; I am not worth it!"

He bends his face, and our lips meet in a long kiss.

"Till death us do part," he whispers softly. And I answer—

"Amen."

(To be Continued.)

Horrowitzish Notes.

Dr. J. R. Smith, Surgeon 47th Battalion, while in camp, contracted a severe cold. He is now recovering.

The K. & P. R. Company are putting in a siding here. Events lead to the inference that some of our citizens have a strong liking for chicken soup.

Rev. Mr. Peck, of the C. M. Church, opened a series of revival services on Sunday last. He will be assisted by a detachment of the Salvation Army as follows: On Wednesday the 10th, at 7 p.m.; Saturday, 13th, at 7 p.m.; Sunday, 14th, at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m.

The animal show for this township was held Tuesday. The attendance was unusually large, about 600. With the exception of horses the show was below the average. The Bertram Bros. had a fine display of carriages. They succeeded in carrying off the major part of the awards. S. Stewart took first prize on a brood mare and colt, three-year old colt, two year old and yearling. J. Donnelly took first prize on his stallion and G. Purdy second.

The great event of the day was the horse racing. In the Township race Seeley's grey took first. Griffith's fox second place. In the green race Baker's horse took first place, Stewart's chestnut second, Griffith's fox third, Stafford's fourth place. In the free for all race Seeley's grey took first, Griffith's fox second, and Baker's third. There is some dissatisfaction with the rulings of the judges, but it is not likely that they will be changed.

An Engishman, who has travelled considerable, thinks that the Kingston ladies are the best looking of any he has met. If he had attended our show on Tuesday he would change his mind and bestow that encomium on the ladies of Portland. Seaforth.

Have You Thought About it?

Pain is one of the sure things of life, and it becomes then a most important question to have at hand the quickest and most efficient remedy. Polson's Nerviline cannot fail to cure cramps, toothache, neuralgia, headache, and all pain, internal or external. Nerviline is the most perfect combination ever offered to the public for the relief of pain. It will not cost you much to try it, for you can buy at Polson's & King's for 10 cents a trial bottle, which will convince you of its mighty pain relieving power.

Good Manufacturing Facilities.

Z. Prevost (at the New York Clothing Store) has every facility for manufacturing order work. Having made additions to his staff of workmen he is prepared to manufacture a suit in 10 hours' notice—a vest and pants in 8 hours, and pants in 6 hours. Well made and a good fit guaranteed. He is now showing all classes of desirable goods.

Don't You Do It.

Don't wait an hour before buying a bottle of Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It is safe, painless, prompt in action, never leaves sore spots behind, and the result is perfect satisfaction. Substitutes are being offered for the genuine Putnam's Extractor. See that the name of Polson & Co. is on each wrapper. Sold by druggists and country dealers, only 25 cents.

A Cure for Cuts, Burns, Etc.

The finest healing compound under the sun is McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. There is no sore but will succumb to the wonderful healing properties. It is an invaluable dressing for scalds, fresh cuts, etc. Price twenty-five cents at Chown's Drug Store.

Of far more importance than the National Policy or the Irish Question in the question of restoring health when lost. The most sudden fatal diseases resulting from this season are the various forms of Bowel Complaint, for all of which Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is specific.

The Most frightful scourge of humanity is Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. Commencing with a little pain in the back, it hurries the sufferer to a premature grave. Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure is the only known remedy that prevents a fatal result. Take it in time.

A Sure Cure for Summer Complaints.—Procure from your druggist one 25c. cent bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and use according to directions. It is infallible for Diarrhea, Cholera Morbus, Canker of the Stomach and Bowels, and Cholera Infantum.

Be Assured in time, and do not allow what may appear to you as a simple bank ache now, to run into a disease of the kidneys, which is invariably proven fatal in the end. Dr. Van Buren's Kidney Cure will at once ease your pain and positively prevent those unfortunate results. Take it at once. Any druggist will have it.

The Great Secret of Beauty lies not in the counsellors of the theatrical art, but it depends upon good health, a fair, brilliant complexion, rendered so by pure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters purify the blood, cure Scrofula and all diseases of the Blood, Liver and Kidneys. 10,000 bottles were sold during the last 3 months.

Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters are not an Alcoholic Stimulant, but a purely Vegetable Medicine, Cathartic and Tonic in its action and invaluable in all affections of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels. 5

Never undertake a long journey without a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in your travelling case, to guard against sudden attack of Colic, Cholera Morbus, Diarrhoea, Sick Stomach, Sea Sickness, and troublesome incidents to change of climate, water, diet, etc. It is a ready and reliable relief.

Samson lost his strength with his hair. Thousands of men and women lose their beauty with theirs, and very large numbers restore the ravages of time by using the famous Gingalene Hair Restorer. Sold at 50 cents per bottle by all druggists.

The Wild Strawberry leaf is a good antidote to the poison of the green apple and cucumber. In other words, Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is a sure cure for Colic, Cholera Morbus, Cramps, Dysentery and all other Bowel Complaints so often caused by the irritating effects of unripe fruit.

Gingalene.—A name well known in connection with the Hair Renewer, which restores gray hair to its natural color by a few weeks use. Sold at 50 cents a bottle by all druggists.

The use of Pills, Salts, Castor Oil and other nauseous purging Cathartics is unnecessary, as a pleasant substitute is found in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, which act as a Cathartic without griping or causing nausea. All Druggists sell it. 50 cents a bottle.
