Ayer's Sarsaparilla!

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives Sarsaparilla, Yellow Dock, Stillingia, and Mandrake, with the iodides of Potash and Iron, makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system, that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of those same humors to some internal organ or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear. Such as Ulceration of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weaknesses, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from Internal Ulceration and Uterine Diseases, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure health returns.

AFTER THE SALE.

The wagon, with high fantastic load
Of household goods is at the gate;
The shadows darken down the road
Why does the old man wait?
Bureau, bedstead, rocking-chair,
Upturned table with heels in air—
Whatever the grudging fates would spare,
Lies huddled and heaped and tumbled there,
A melancholy freight!

"Of all his riches," the teamster said,
"Only this precious pile remains;
A blanket and bed for his old gray head,
For all his life long pains.
Hard case, I own! but they say that Pride
Must have a fall." His ropes he tied
In the chill March wind. "Hurry up" he cried,
And gathered in the reins.

The old wife bows her stricken face
On the doorstone, weary and worn and gray,
The old man lingers about the place,
Taking a last survey:
Looks in once more at the great barn door
On the empty mow and the vacant floor
All the game of his life have gone before,
And why should he care to stay?

With slow, disconsolate, broken talk,
They look their last and pass the gate;
The wagon is gone and they must walk
A mile, and it is growing late.
She bears a parcel, he hits a pack,
But what do they see there, up the track,
Against the sunset looming black?
'Tis strange! the wagon is coming back,
With its melancholy freight.

And what is the driver shrieking out?
Now heaven, for a moment keep the sane!
"Turn about! turn about!" they hear him shout,
As he flourishes whip and rein.
"You've a home and a good friend yet, you'll find!"
A cosein is following close behind.
A face—a voice—Oh, heaven be kind!
Oh, lips that tremble and tears that blind!
Oh, breaking hearts! it's Jane.

PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION.

Kingston and its Numerous Attractions—How to See the City and the Exhibition—Public Buildings, Etc.

(Globe Correspondence.)

Kingston, Sept. 13.—At certain seasons Kingston is dull, and, compared with the business centres to the east and west, not as lively as some think it ought to be, but it is most attractively situated. It lies on the shores of a beautiful bay, formed by Simcoe and Wolfe Islands on the south, Point Frederick on the east, and the city and environs on the north and north-west. This bay forms the main channel by which the waters of Lake Ontario debouch into the majestic St. Lawrence that for miles is studded with scenery as charming now as it was at midsummer. The ancient city, incorporated in 1838, looks best when approached from the water. With the exception of Quebec and Montreal it is the most strongly fortified place in Canada. With this fact the tourist is at once impressed by a glance at the military works. Fort Henry is situated on a high point overlooking the St. Lawrence on the south and the Great Cataraqui on the west. Across the latter is a long bridge, connecting the city with the fort. It was an important structure when but is now used principally by the residents of the township of Pittsburg and the village of Barriefield, is very much dilapidated and doomed to demolition and removal farther north to admit of increased harbour accommodation. Below the fort, on a promontory running into the St. Lawrence, is the Royal Military College, an institution which ought to be well known, since its affairs have been given a rare publicity. So far there are but three buildings. Two of these were formerly used for other than educational purposes. The gymnasium is located in what was in the past but a storehouse; the cadet barracks in the years agone a naval station. The educational block is the only new structure, and is a magnificent pile, possessing the striking characteristics of modern architecture. Other buildings are projected, and in time they may come, but there seems to be no immediate disposition to add to capital account and to hasten schemes which promise to increase the annual expenditure, now about $60,000. Both the fort and the Military College are open to the public. The classes are being organized for a new term, and some interruption may be caused by a rush of visitors, but the Commandant will do what he can to popularize the institution, and he will contribute best to that end by imparting all the information possible to callers and enquirers.

KINGSTON WAS A GARRISON TOWN,

PUBLIC BUILDINGS, RAILWAYS.

As the visitor alights from the passenger steamer he obtains an unobstructed view of the City Hall, occupying the entire block between Brock and Market streets on the north and south, facing the water on Ontario street side, and having to the west a spacious square. The hall, of fine cut stone, originally cost $100,000, and its size would seem in advance of the city's requirements. So it is; but it was built at a time when Kingston's future looked very bright, when here it was believed the seat of Government would be located, and when the people wanted in their public erections that which would accord with the anticipated position of the municipality subsequently. From the dome of the hall the city can be seen to the best advantage. It is rather compactly built.

If the visitor proceeds along Ontario Street northward he will reach the Tete du Pont Barracks, the quarters of "B" Battery and Royal School of Gunnery, the latter of which has trained so many for commands in the Canadian militia. Opposite the barracks is the station of the Kingston & Pembroke Railway. By the way, a trip should be made over this road. It would be found very interesting. The line is at present a local one, subsidized in its construction by a Government grant of over $400,000, a city bonus of $300,000, and a county gift of $150,000. By the end of next year a junction will be formed with the Canada Pacific Railway at Renfrew village, and then it is not at all improbable it will become be property of the Syndicate. The road passes through the Townships of Kingston, Bedford, Olden, Oso, Palmerston and Renfrew, and already taps the great lumbering regions of the Missisippi, the Clyde and the Madawaska. Some portions of the intervening country are wild, rugged, even romantic in their aspect. Further back a rich mineral district is penetrated. Specimens of the lead and plumbago of Frontenac have been exhibited at Toronto, and their purity and value commented upon by The Globe. The ore mines are being rapidly developed, and of their product some 2,000 tons are shipped weekly via Kingston to various places in the United States. Of phosphate about 5,000 tons will have been exported to the American side and to England by the close of the season of navigation.

THE TRIP NORTHWARD.

If the visitor proceeds still northward by rail or foot, or if he comes to the city by the Grand Trunk Railway, he cannot miss a sight of the smelting works, inoperative, and the cotton mill in perfect running order and situated on the shore of the Great Cataraqui, or to the north-east the Car Works, only started but as complete as genius can suggest and means provide. The long span beween the depot and the city is not remarkable for anything but its retrogressive look. In later years there has been no improvement in that direction, but a change for the better has been apparent since the establishment of the new industries.

A TOUR WESTWARD.

Taking the street car at the most central point, the Market square, the traveller now goes westward. At the corner of King and Clarence streets he passes the Custom House, which cost $70,000. At the corners of King and William streets are the Merchants' Bank and the Bank of Montreal, facing each other. A few blocks farther on and one passes a number of handsome private residences, the newest and finest being those of Dr. Horsey, Mr. R. Kent, Mrs. Hinds, and Mr. Pense, ex-Mayor and proprietor of the Whig. The cars makes a semi-circle of the park, a plot of fifteen acres, well shaded and increasing in popularity. This was the gift of the Government to the city. In the historic past it was used as an artillery parade ground, and many are the exciting events said to have taken place upon it.

As the car slowly moves up Barrie street, on an incline, the stranger has a front view of the Court House, overlooking the cricket field and park, and flanked by the Gaol and Registry Offices. There are in Canada few such institutions connected with the administration of justice. Like the City Hall, it is constructed of limestone and cost about $100,000 (£20,000.) A few years ago it was destroyed by fire, but was promptly rebuilt, and is now as good as ever; in some respects it is considerably improved.

VISITING THE PENITENTIARY.

By continuing the street railway the penitentiary is reached, and nine-tenths of the new comers visit the prison. It is situated in the village of Portsmouth, on the shore of the lake, at the embouchure of the St. Lawrence two miles distant from the City Hall. It is a considerable city in itself, or rather a citadel, being surrounded with high walls of the strongest masonry, and the area being filled with workshops, dormitories, offices, etc., of the most substantial stone. The Warden's residence fronts the penitentiary. It is a large and commodious residence of cut stone, which, with its surrounding gardens, greenhouse, and graperies represents the labour of the convicts. The most engrossing feature of the prison is the lock works, conducted by Mr. L. B. Spencer, who supplies the general hardware trade of the Dominion, and who makes not only locks, but knobs, sash fasts, pulleys, brackets, ornamental roof crestings, and many other things. He employs about 150 convicts.

NOTABLE PRIVATE PROPERTIES.

Half a mile further up the front road, on the west of the Village of Portsmouth, is Rockwood Asylum, once a Dominion property, now owned by the Province, which purchased it at a cost of about $90,000. Within five years it has been greatly improved, and is at this moment being enlarged by the erection of several isolated cottages in which it is proposed to treat peculiar types of insanity. The grounds adjoining the asylum, as well as those of the penitentiary are well kept and worthy of a visit.

A return to the city is now commenced. The visitor is advised to walk (or drive if convenient) along the water front. The street cars do not cover this route, but traverse Livingstone Avenue and Union Street. Immediately after leaving the penitentiary, to the right, lies Alwington, at present the home of J. A. Allen, literateur, formerly the residence of Baron De Longueuil, and before him of Lord Sydenham. Next come the residence of Mrs. Barrow and the malt house of Mr. J. McMillan. Both constituted a portion of the late James Morton's estate. He was once Kingston's leading citizen, lived as became his wealth and station, and managed what for a long period was the largest distillery and brewery in America. It consumed 200,000 bushels of grain annually, employed over 100 men, and furnished the material with which to fat about 1,200 cattle per year. The spirit and beer manufactory have long since been silent, and he who figured so prominently in society and Parliament lives but in memory. Upon these premises were mineral springs, of the waters of which many drank, and which were considered of so great value for medicinal purposes that an analysis was made of them and extensively published. Passing onward, and another object of interest is whose guns point up the lake, and were designed to cover a part of the city to which the armament of the fort offered little protection. The tower is but a relic and bids fair to disappear ere long and give place to more useful work, probably a huge summer hotel, of which there is considerable talk.

Still drifting inward, and the ear is affected by the din of foundry operations. The most important iron working establishment is the Canadian Locomotive and Engine Works, Ontario street, which, since its change of management, has entered upon a new and prosperous era. Its success has justified the erection of more workshops, and the addition of plant. Some 400 men are employed here. Then the shipping again spreads out before one, and the season so far has been marked by activity among the forwarders. The Marine Railway is not as busy as it once was—having the yards of the Fishers, R. Davis, and the Montreal Transportation Company to compete with—but it must be remembered as the place where some of the finest steamers plying on the lakes have been built. From this now unpretentious spot went several sea-going vessels, including the "Iceberg," in which Dr. Rae made his Arctic explorations.

The boundaries of the city having been surveyed, the visitor again jumps upon the street car and cuts through the centre of the business district by way of Princess street. Our stores are not flashy; few can be called ornamental, but the merchants generally are sound, and do a safe trade. Failures are of rare occurrence, and no city or town withstood better the depression which existed for years. It is best to continue the journey until a halt is made by the street car on the west of Williamsville. Here the visitor alights, and following the sidewalk to the left the same that were occupied by the first Provincial here. But the Crystal Palace, of all the original buildings, remain intact, and it ought to endure, when solidly built at a cost of $8,000. It suffered of course the deterioration to which all material things are liable in time, but the repairs have been most complete and the structure looks really inviting. The other buildings, affording ample accommodation, are plain, some of a temporary character, the intention being to remove them after the fair. That which will contain the Manitoba exhibit will be very substantial, because destined to be permanent. The requirements of the Arts and Agricultural Association have been fully met.

REACHES THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS,

If any particular place be desired no difficulty will be experienced in finding it. The post office stands upon the corner of Wellington and Clarence streets, is about the size of the Custom House, and cost about $50,000.

The street cars will be found a great convenience. The line was opened in 1877, and runs from the city boundary on Princess street to the head of the Penitentiary hill, embracing in its course the principal avenues of travel and their tributaries. Its length is five miles. Eight cars run at intervals of 12 minutes from each end of the road. The enterprise, which is not paying, cost over $40,000.

There never was better accommodation in so far as the hotels are concerned. There may, nevertheless, be an insufficiency for an emergency, but it is hoped not. The leading houses are the British American, corner of Clarence and King streets, the Burnett, Ontario street, the City and Windsor, on Princess street.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY BUILDINGS

will, no doubt, be inspected by many. The College was incorporated in 1841, and for a lengthy term modestly assisted in the educational work of the country. It took greater prominence, however, when Dr. Grant was appointed Principal. He had been no sooner installed than he agitated for new buildings and an increased endowment. He has secured both. The new block, costing $50,000, is the gift of the citizens, and a handsome piece of architecture it is. The institution is situated on the west side of the city, the grounds being bounded by Union, Arch and Stuart streets. The Principal's and Professors' residences command a fine view of Lake Ontario and the surrounding country. In the rear is the old Queen's College, now occupied by the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which is affiliated with Queen's. Adjoining is the Observatory, removed hither a year ago from the Park at the expense of the College. It contains some very valuable instruments. The second College—Regiopolis (Catholic)—has been closed for many years. It is a grand building, running almost from Johnston to Brock streets, and having on either side several acres of land. Bishop Cleary will take steps to re-open the
