Hardy, Matthew Arnold, Henry Kingsley, W. W. Story, Turguenief, Carlyle, Ruskin, Tennyson, Browning, and many others, are represented in the pages of

Littell's Living Age.

In 1881 The Living Age enters upon its thirty-eighth year, admittedly unrivalled and continuously successful. During the year it will furnish to its readers the productions of the most eminent authors, above named and many others, embracing the choicest Serial and Short Stories by the Leading Foreign Novelists, and an amount

Unapproached by any other Periodical in the world, of the most valuable Literary and Scientific matter of the day, from the pens of the foremost Essayists, Scientists, Critics, Discoverers, and Editors, representing every department of Knowledge and Progress.

The Living Age is a weekly magazine giving more than double-column octavo pages of reading matter yearly. It presents in an inexpensive form, considering its great amount of matter, with freshness, owing to its weekly issue, and with a satisfactory completeness attempted by no other publication, the best Essays, Reviews, Criticisms, Tales, Sketches of Travel and Discovery, Poetry, Scientific, Biographical, Historical and Political Information, from the entire body of Foreign Periodical Literature.

Three and a Quarter Thousand

It is therefore invaluable to every American reader, as the only satisfactorily fresh and complete compilation of an indispensable current literature,—indispensable because it embraces the productions of the

ABLEST LIVING WRITERS,

"In no other form can so much thoroughly good reading be got for so little money; in no other form can so much instruction and entertainment be got in so small a space."—Philadelphia Times.

"There is no other publication like it. It is known and read by all who desire to keep abreast with the cultivated thought of the English speaking world."—Episcopal Register, Philadelphia.

"It reproduces so fully the choicest articles from the foreign magazines, that one who takes it does not feel the need of anything else in the way of foreign periodical literature."—The Advance, Chicago.

"Its frequent issue and ample space enable it to give all that the very ablest of living writers furnish to periodical literature on science, history, biography, philosophy, poetry, theology, politics and criticism, and to add to this the full complement of the best that there is in fiction."—The Interior, Chicago.

"Gives the best of all at the price of one."—New York Independent.

"Teems with the choicest literature of the day."—New York Tribune.

"It is, by all odds, the best eclectic published."—Southern Churchman.

"It enables the reader at trifling expense, considering the quantity and quality of the reading furnished, to keep pace with the best thought and literary work of our time."—Christian Union, New York.

"One cannot read everything. ... No man will be behind the literature of the times who reads The Living Age."—Zion's Herald, Boston.

"We know of no investment of eight dollars in the world of literature, that will yield equal returns."—The Presbyterian, Philadelphia.

"It has no rival."—New York Evening Post.

An immense area of Railroad and Government Lands, of great fertility, within easy reach of permanent market, at extremely low prices, is now offered for sale in Eastern Oregon and Eastern Washington Territory.

These lands form part of the GRAIN BELT of the Pacific Slope, and are within an average distance of 200 to 300 miles from Portland, where steamship and railing vessels are directly loaded FOR ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

Grain at Portland, Oregon, commands a price equal to that obtained in Chicago.

The early completion of the Northern Pacific R. R. is now assured, and guarantees to settlers cheap and quick transportation and good markets, both East and West. The opening of this new overland line to the Pacific, together with the construction of the network of ... miles of railroad by the O. R. & N. Co. in the valleys of the great Columbia and its principal tributaries, renders certain a rapid increase in the value of the lands now open to purchase and pre-emption. There is every indication of an enormous movement of population to the Columbia River region in the immediate future.

THE following is a certificate in reference to the excellence of Day's Extract of Malt:

Kingston, March 2nd, 1881.

To R. W. Day, M.D., Kingston.

Dear Sir,—It affords me much satisfaction in further testifying to the curative properties of your Extract of Malt. Before using it, my wife was reduced to a shadow, but now I am happy to say, that she seems a new creation, having gained over ten pounds avoirdupois in the last month. I have, therefore, no hesitation in pronouncing your Extract a most excellent tonic and renovator of the system. I am confident that it only requires to be known to bring it into general use.—Yours truly,

HENRY CONLEY.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

This compound of the vegetable alteratives, Sarsaparilla, Dock, Stillingia, and Mandrake, with the Iodides of Potash and Iron, makes a most effectual cure of a series of complaints which are very prevalent and afflicting. It purifies the blood, purges out the lurking humors in the system, that undermine health and settle into troublesome disorders. Eruptions of the skin are the appearance on the surface of humors that should be expelled from the blood. Internal derangements are the determination of these same humors to some internal organ, or organs, whose action they derange, and whose substance they disease and destroy. Ayer's Sarsaparilla expels these humors from the blood. When they are gone, the disorders they produce disappear, such as Ulcerations of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys, Lungs, Eruptions and Eruptive Diseases of the Skin, St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Tumors, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Ulcers and Sores, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Pain in the Bones, Side and Head, Female Weakness, Sterility, Leucorrhœa arising from internal ulceration and uterine disease, Dropsy, Dyspepsia, Emaciation and General Debility. With their departure health returns.

A DREAM.

I had a dream last night, my dear,
A pleasant dream of thee;
I thought we lived in a quiet home,
Beyond the crystal sea;
In a land where the air was very mild,
And it e'er was endless spring—
A land too fair, it seemed for earth—
The land of which poets sing.

Oh! for those moments of fancied bliss
To be again in that home,
Where all was golden happiness
And sorrow might never come!
I would lay me down on the cold, damp ground
To-day, could I dream once more
That dream, and be again in that home
With thee, on that quiet shore!

Ah! the idea is a counterpart
Somewhere, in the days which lay
Before me, in the path which I go
This I have felt away.
Therefore I wait, with gladness, the time
That I shall dwell with thee,
In the home I saw within a dream,
Across the beautiful sea!

THOMAS CARLYLE.

Why Principal Grant Regards Him as a Prophet of the 19th Century.

A good audience listened with interest and attention last evening to Principal Grant's lecture on "A Prophet of the Nineteenth Century," otherwise the late Thomas Carlyle. The philosopher, he observed, was born on Dec. 4th, 1795, in Ecclefechan, Dumfriesshire, which part of Scotland had given to the world an unusual number of stout and strong men, some of whom he had found in Canada, and even in Kingston in the persons of John Carruthers and William Irving. Carlyle's father was known as the fighting mason of Ecclefechan, a short, thick, well-built, bandy-legged man—such as he avoided when a boy. The family was known by the expressive name of iron-mouth, indicating the grim grit with which they took hold of anything. Carlyle, sr., began life as a tradesman and ended it as a farmer; he was a pious man, having in his latter days become a good member of the church. He intended his son for the ministry, but the latter

CHOSE ANOTHER PATH,

one in which he seemed to have more breadth and liberty, and freedom of speech. His mother was graceful and intellectual, having an affectionate disposition, and more culture than the average people of her class and station. It is believed, indeed, that she suggested the true estimate of men which her son afterwards gave to the world. At the school of Annan Carlyle formed a friendship for Edward Irving, two years his elder, but for whom, he said, he would never have known what communion with man meant. From Annan he passed to Edinburg and took the arts course, distinguishing himself most as a general reader, but winning distinction in mathematics. How much he owed his Alma Mater he has acknowledged by leaving his estate to Edinburg University for the education of poor students in arts. After graduating he and Irving taught school for a couple of years at Dysart. Now came the serious question as to what should be his future course in life. Should he become a minister? He entered the closet, closed the door and spent days

IN AGONY OF SPIRIT,

contending with doubt, fear and unbelief to such a degree as to know not whether he ate, drunk, or slept. What did the terrible struggle mean? He had been brought up in the Puritanical faith, and believed, not only in the answer to the first question in the shorter catechism (for he believed in that always) but a great deal more, and looking around him he saw men in church and state and college believing in doctrines and not living up to them. He decided that his vocation was not in the church; he became, as he afterwards described himself, "a writer of books." In the beginning of his literary career he encountered difficulty just because of his greatness. Every great man has a style of his own, and because of this the world will have none of it. Carlyle's experience was like Wordsworth's—no publisher would print his works at first. The reviewers made great fun of them. Carlyle fixed a high literary standard for himself and he would not swerve from it on any account. When he finished

HIS PHILOSOPHICAL WORK,

"Sartor Resartus," no publisher would look at it, but he finally had it inserted in parts in Fraser's Magazine, to the disgust of many readers. His "French Revolution" had a similar reception, notwithstanding that it was admitted to be the greatest dramatic-historic work of the times. The failure of Carlyle's health, his marriage with Miss Jane Welsh, a lenial descendant of John Knox, and the competency which he secured with her, were all noted in appropriate language. At his country home, on the farm at Craigenputtoch, the property of his wife, he moralized upon life, his thoughts being summed up briefly: To love God is the everlasting gain wherein all contradictions are solved and wherein he who walkest and workest it is well with him. It is impossible to have this conviction without action. Men should do the duty which lieth nearest to them; the second duty will then appear the clearer. They should work out their ideal from the stuff they have, what matter what it is, so that the forms they copy be heroic and poetic. The best

PICTURE OF CARLYLE'S LIFE

at Craigenputtoch is to be obtained from his own letters and from an account of a visit paid to him by Ralph Waldo Emerson, from which the lecturer quoted. A tender allusion was made at this point to the death of Mrs. Carlyle, which occurred on April 21, 1866, just after the installation of her husband as Lord Rector of Edinburg University. Carlyle wrote himself the description for the tombstone, recording that "in her bright existence she had more sorrows than are common, but also a soft invincibility, a capacity of discernment and a noble loyalty of heart that are rare." His love for her memory was such that he has been known to weep bitterly over her grave and kiss the grass which covered her dust. In 1837 Carlyle removed to London, in which he resided for 46 years and was known as the Chelsea Seer. He undertook to lecture, but had to abandon this purpose on account of his extreme nervousness. It seems singular that he who could not comfortably address 100 or 200 people was the best talker in England after Coleridge. His books followed each other rapidly considering the thoroughness with which he did his work. His four greatest productions were "Sartor Resartus," [illegible] Taylor [illegible] over, and the three valued and respectively to the histories of France, England and Germany. The French Revolution appeared in 1837. It was the result of immense toil; and when the first volume was written he lent the MSS. to John Stuart Mill, who, in turn, lent it to his divinity, Mrs. Taylor, whose servant undertook to light the fire with it. The misfortune was enough to drive Carlyle to despair; but after the first shock he commenced to rewrite it. It is a marvellous book. In 1839 appeared "Chartism" (an attack on the corruptions of society), and in 1845 Cromwell's Letters and Speeches which revolutionized our conceptions of Cromwell. It is the second best biography in English if Boswell's "Johnson" be the best. In 1850 Carlyle issued "Latter Day Pamphlets;" in 1851 the biography of John Sterling, and in 1865 Frederick II., on which he had been engaged for 13 years, and in the study preparatory for which he had read 2,000 books. It were unnecessary to mention his minor works. It may be asked what was his life work? To teach old truth and to denounce new idolatry, the idolatry of his age. The lecturer viewed his work under two headings—(1) the positive, and (2) the negative; what he believed and

PERMANENT CONTRIBUTIONS

WHAT HE DID NOT BELIEVE.

Taking up the negative it was pointed out that he did not believe in

1. Rationalism.
2. Religious Formalism.
3. Partisanship.
4. Toryism.
5. Radicalism.
6. Piggish sensual gratification.
7. Dollar worship.

If he did not believe in any of these, then, what was his creed? He believed in God, not an absentee God, not a God who having made the world thousands of years ago has since been taken his ease looking down to see how the machine goes, he believed in a living God, whose undoubted manifestations he saw in nature, still more in history, and whose character was reflected in his own soul. As far as man was concerned he believed that if he did not take his stand upon the side of truth he was a fool, no matter what he professed; that we attain to the truth by first clearing our minds of cant, and then by working up to the light we have honestly secured. Furthermore he believed that no form or system expressed the truth any more than a transparent bottle held the sunlight, that all formulas being imperfect we must [illegible] with the believers in them as long as they are trying to carry out the ideas which they conceive to be right. And simple as this creed has been it has created a wonderful influence in the world. Why

WAS CARLYLE CALLED A PROPHET?

For three reasons: (1) Because of his insight into the divine idea which underlies all appearances; (2) because of his devotion to divine authority; (3) because of the spiritual inspiration he has communicated to others. A prophet has been described as one who can see what common people cannot see. Carlyle was such. He was moved as if by intuition. He got beyond the regions of time and sense, beyond the bustle of men and of business, into the silence, and then he saw ultimate truths and facts and forces, and exercised a faith such as made the Hebrew prophets a power in their time. People ask, Will the works of the prophet endure? A wise man will not have any anxiety on this point. God's works will endure, and that is enough. For half a century Carlyle held a commanding position in England, not by reason of the use of the forces which are usually employed to give men high places, but he owed it entirely to his spiritual insight, to his personality all aflame with spiritual fire. God gave Carlyle to the world as a Jeremiah rather than as a Moses; as a puller down rather than a builder up. One was as needful as the other in his day. Such a man is to the world, though being human he is partial. He does not see all truth; he sometimes mistakes dross for ore, sometimes sows tares instead of wheat, and the world exults over them as it does over the sins of David. He (Grant) rejoiced that five years ago the leading literary men had sent a touching address to Carlyle, on the occasion of his 80th birthday, expressing their personal gratitude for the benefits of his labors. Now that he is gone many will feel the loss. From no two men had he (the lecturer) realized a sense of so much spirituality as Norman McLeod and Thomas Carlyle. As the coffin which enclosed the remains of the brave old seer was lowered into the grave beside the ashes of his parents, in the little God's acre, the funeral must have appeared to be that of a poor peasant, for there was no pomp and circumstance about it. But the scene was grand, and those who witnessed it were forced to look beyond the surroundings and to reflect on the grim fact of death and the life beyond the grave which it cannot touch.

GOD'S BEST BLESSING
