SANFORD'S
RADICAL CURE
For CATARRH
INSTANTLY RELIEVES.
6,000 FEET ABOVE THE SEA.
The following testimonials are from Messrs. J. G. SANFORD & Co., Denver, Col., large and influential druggists. They report unprecedentedly large sales and universal satisfaction. No other disease is so alarmingly prevalent in that region. They speak of the following gentlemen as among their best citizens:
SORELY AFFLICTED.
J. G. Sanford & Co., Denver, Col., Gentlemen.—Prompted by a fellow-feeling for those afflicted with Catarrh, which is the best testimony in behalf of SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE for CATARRH, I have to inform you I suffered for many years and have tried every known remedy without avail, until I bought a bottle of the above CURE from you, which gave me almost instant relief. It being a constitutional as well as a local remedy, I believe it to be all that is claimed for it, a Radical Cure for Catarrh.
Very truly yours, WM. AMETIVE.
Denver, Sept. 8, 1875. with Jameson, Bliss & Co.
GREATLY AFFLICTED.
Messrs. J. G. Sanford & Co., Denver, Gentlemen.—I take pleasure in recommending SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH to all who are afflicted with this disease. I was greatly afflicted with it for a long time, and cured it with two bottles of the above CURE. About a year afterwards I was again taken with Catarrh, quite severely, and immediately sent for another bottle, which fixed me all right, giving me relief from the first dose. I am confident that this remedy will do all that is claimed for it, and more too. Wishing you success in its introduction, I am very truly yours,
A. W. SMITH,
of Smith & Doll.
Denver, Oct. 4, 1875.
TRIED EVERYTHING.
Messrs. J. G. Sanford & Co., Denver, Col.: Gentlemen.—I have used SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE FOR CATARRH, and it has given perfect satisfaction. I have tried almost everything, and it is the only thing that has given me relief. I therefore take pleasure in recommending its use to all afflicted with Catarrh of any kind, and offer this as my testimony to its benefits.
Very truly,
W. S. DECKER
Denver, Oct. 1, 1875.
REV. J. H. WIGGIN SAYS:
One of the best remedies for Catarrh, say the best remedy we have found is a lifetime of suffering, is SANFORD'S RADICAL CURE. It is not unpleasant to take through the nostrils, and there comes with each bottle a small glass tube for use in inhalation. It clears the head and throat so thoroughly that, after each morning cleansing, there are no unpleasant secretions and no disagreeable hacking during the entire day, but an unprecedented clearness of voice and respiratory organs. —Rev. J. H. Wiggin, in Dorchester (Mass.) Beacon.
Each package contains Dr Sanford's Improved Inhaling Tube, with full directions for use in all cases. Price, $1.00. For sale by all Wholesale and Retail Druggists throughout the United States and Canada. WEEKS & POTTER, General Agents and Wholesale Druggists, Boston, Mass.

Daily British Whig
WEDNESDAY EV'NG, JULY 24, 1878.

TO THE MONTREAL AND OTHER CATHOLIC.

Put priestcraft all aside, and calm remember
Those common rights, important, broad and Great,
Which any day, bright May or dark December,
You with your rivals well might celebrate.

Why should you grudge them this their celebration?
Gained you no blessings from Boyne's oft told fray?
Think of the liberty the British nation,
Or Roman or Genevan, won that day:

Say, was it Protestants alone invited
The German monarch to the British land?
Think of the Catholics who deep had blighted
Assistance ere he stepped upon the strand.

Priests still are priests, and Protestant or Roman
If lightly checked are apt to override.
Think of your France, Spain, Italy—was no man
Compelled to stem their overbearing pride;

The work was done for you—the Boyne's red water
Told Rome in Britain that she ruled no more
In matters temporal, but never taught her
In spiritual she was not as before.

Did churchly counsels not oppress the nation,
When British isles were Catholic alone?
Think of the fierce long excommunication
In John's old day, ere Protestants were known.

It was for you, as well as every other
In Britain that the Boyne was crossed that day,
Why not all feelings of resentment smother?
For you they forward moved on Freedom's way.

Those rights yourselves, as others of the nation,
Enjoy each day you live beneath the sun,
Why not then join them in the celebration
Of that great day on which those rights were won?

THE MAN WHO PUNS.

(Burlington Hawkeye.)

"Alcestis" wants to know if it is very difficult to manufacture puns. Not a bit of it; the easiest thing in the world. For instance, you are challenged to make a pun on Eau de Cologne. You immediately create a hypothetical being, who for the purposes of the necessary vernacular, shall be Atticus, as to his nativity, whom you suppose, for reasons, has borrowed in the bleak and impecunious winter days, a scuttle of coal of a wealthier neighbor, and which he is, unfortunately for the man of whom he borrowed it) unable to repay, and hence, with the return of the ensuing winter, when the creditor insists upon the payment of the debt, is compelled to explain that circumstances over which he has no control still necessitate him to "owe de coal loan." When you reach this point of your narrative, you must look fixedly and shrewdly at your auditor (for by that time you will have but one left, if your associates are as sensible people as we assume them to be), and say, with marked and changing emphasis, "See! See! Coal; coal loan; cologne;—owe de—owe de coal loan; eau de cologne, see! de cologne; de coal loan, owe de coal loan." There is no limit to the number of repetitions you are expected or required to make of the explanatory clause. Most punsters repeat it about one hundred and ninty-eight times. We have a friend, who is a gifted punster, and he doesn't often get through repeating the explanatory clauses until about the last of next week. His wit is greatly admired at quiet gatherings of literary people, although the records show that he has been clubbed off Main street at different times by every business man in Burlington.

You can shine most brightly at little evening parties, by punning on the names of the people present. A few evenings ago we heard a very brilliant thing by a young gentleman who is a light in society. He was introduced to a Miss Smith, and with a sudden inspiration of genius that even astonished his most intimate friends, he affected a lisp and said, 'Oh, this is Mith Smith; Mith Smith; see is Mith Smith; Mith Smith; Mith Smith.' He began that about nine o'clock and went through and through the rooms, cornering people who were afraid to kill him and saying it to them. At half past eleven the last guest departed, and heard as he went out the gate this young man telling this pun to the hostess, while the servant girl was at the head of the stairs trying to hold back the host, who was trying to get down stealthly, unobserved with his shot gun.

Always make puns on passing events. Fairs, county fairs or church fairs, are splendid subjects for original puns. So are safes. We knew a young man, a graduate of an Ann Arbor military establishment, who would walk about the streets for days, until he found a gang of men hoisting a safe into a second story office and then he would stand around that spot so long as the work went on, and stop every man who went by or rather tried to get by, and say to him; 'This is safe, but it isn't very safe. They'll get it in safe, you know! Safe; safe, see! Safe! safe. It's safe; safe, you know. See! safe. It's safe; but its not safe to stand under it. See!' On time a large safe, weighing four thousand pounds, was being hoisted into a sixth story window, broke the tackling and fell to the ground, missing this young man by only about sixteen feet. A number of Christian men, who witnessed the accident and this young man's escape, immediately went off and joined the Ingersoll atheists, saying that they could not believe in a Providence that would miss such a splendid opportunity as that. Strange to say, this young man's parents love him, and it is even rumoured that his mother is proud of him, and even urges him to inflict himself upon mankind.

A Letter from a Clergyman.
Vernonville, Sept. 8th, 1876.
Messrs. Milburn, Bentley & Pearson.
GENTLEMEN,—Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has cured the worst case of summer Complaint I ever knew. Our little child was, for one month, not expected to recover. We got medicine from our family physician, but, like everything else, it failed, until we tried Dr. Fowler's Great Cure, Extract of Wild Strawberry, which acted like a charm, and perfectly cured the infant in less than three days.
Yours faithfully,
Rev. S. R. KEARNS.

A Reliable Medicine.
Is like a true friend, when needed, it is always on hand, and when tried, it is never found wanting. Such is precisely the character of BRISTOL'S SARSAPARILLA and PILLS, they never deceive, they do exactly what is claimed for them, and they cure disease where doctors prescriptions and all other medicines fail.

WAY OF THE TRANSGRESSOR.

AN AMERICAN $350,000 DEFAULTER IN A MONTREAL COTTON FACTORY.

The American papers are just now devoting considerable space to the circumstances attending the arrest of E. J. Oakley, the absconding cashier of the Merchants' Exchange National Bank, who, pressed by want, was obliged to return to New York, where, a few days ago, he fell into the hands of the authorities. It will be remembered that Oakley had been connected with the bank for twenty-seven years, and enjoyed the confidence of President Thompson and the directors and officers to an unusual degree. In January, 1870, it was discovered that a deficit existed in his accounts as cashier. He was suspended, and an examination made, which disclosed the fact that he was a defaulter to the amount of $350,000. He was arrested, and was indicted by the United States Grand Jury on February 26, 1870. He was released on $10,000 bail, and remained in New York until July of the same year, when he left for Canada, where he, for the most part remained until he returned and was arrested. He made the following statement to a police official:

"I have been seven years in Montreal, and have been in this city for the last two months. I have been scourged by Heaven and the devil, and have wandered about from place to place, an outcast, without money and without friends. On several occasions, to keep myself from starving, I have done the hardest kind of day's work as a common laborer, and once I took a situation as a cook on a coasting vessel. My counsel at the time of my trouble was Mr. Bell, who is now Assistant District Attorney. It was by his advice that I left the city and made my way to Canada, and if it had not been for his advice I would have remained here and taken the consequences of my acts. I lost the money in stock speculations in Wall street."

Recently a reporter visited Oakley. He found him suffering with the intense heat in cell No. 56, in Ludlow street jail. In response to his visitor's many queries Oakley seemed at first inclined to be reticent, and it was with difficulty the following story could be drawn from him

"When I saw there was no show for me and matters were becoming very threatening I determined to get out of the city; so I engaged passage in the National line steamer, the "Queen," and sailed for England. I arrived in London in the latter part of July with only about £100, or $500, in my pocket, and with this I knocked about London for some time trying to get work. I did not feel uneasy, because I felt assured that the bank officers were inclined to deal leniently with me and would not set detectives upon my track.

"I did not particularly admire London. In the first place I could not become acclimated, and secondly, I did not like the people and their methods. After an experience of five months, my money becoming short, I sailed for America and landed at Halifax. Thence I proceeded to Montreal. When I reached the latter city I had only two £5 notes in my purse. By parsimony I made those notes last me nearly six weeks, at the expiration of which time I obtained work in a cotton factory. I worked in the capacity of assistant book-keeper for nearly two years. About this time, you know, hard times began to settle on the people, and our firm feeling them discharged several hands. I was among the number. I was out of employment only a short time, however, when I was again employed in a factory, where I remained only six months. Hard times and dullness of trade was again the cause. Then began my life of trials and vicissitudes. Then I began to realize how the Almighty metes out His justice to the wrong-doer.

"I left Montreal and began, you may say, the life of a tramp. I visited Ottawa, Kingston, London and the other large cities of Canada in quest of employment, but in each instance where I applied for work, it was refused me. I seemed to be scourged, as I said afterwards, by both heaven and the devil. Imagine my position—a man who for over a quarter of a century had been leading a life of ease and luxury to be suddenly, through his own misdoings, thrown upon a cold and pitiless world, without either money or friends!

"While I was wandering from city to city, from town to town, I was often without a morsel to sustain my half-famished body, or a shoe to protect me from the biting frosts and snows of the winters of that terribly cold country. I did not act the part of the mendicant until I was forced to, and it was a terrible battle between my mental and physical powers. Physical courage melted first and I became the beggar. Finally I reached Montreal again and became intimate with a gentleman whose name I decline to mention, and through his generosity I obtained a respectable suit of clothes to my back. I determined to return to New York city, supposing that the matter had blown over; but no, 'there's no rest for the wicked, and here I am"

The unfortunate man refused to make any statements regarding his family, the exact manner in which he lost the $300,000, or his private matters in general. He seemed to feel his position keenly, and anticipates that matters will go very hard with him.

"For," said he, "you must be fully aware that when a man is without money and without friends, the world has a very dark appearance."

Teeth like orient pearls set in cushions of rose;
A breath like the perfume the toilet bestows;
These are charms to win hearts, when all other charms fade,
But they can't be preserved without SOZODONT'S aid.
